

SANTA IS EARLY FOR SICK GIRL

Three-year-old Fernande Denomme of Hamilton, Ontario, is too excited with meeting Santa Claus to question why Christmas has arrived so early. Because Fernande has a liver condition known as Banti's disease and may die any day, Santa turned his sleigh toward her suburban home following his annual parade in downtown Hamilton Nov. 14, bringing her a doll and carriage she had been wanting. There was a Christmas tree and candles and presents from neighbors also. Fernande daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Denomme, has spent two thirds of her life in hospital. She has two brothers, Dennis and Larry.

U.S. Planes May Be Gift To Canada

By DAVE McINTOSH Canadian Press Staff Writer OTTAWA (CP) — There is a possibility that the United States will supply Canada free with new interceptors to replace the aging CF-100 jets, informed sources said Wednesday. It could not be learned whether Canadian and U.S. officials have actually been negotiating on possible equipping of RCAF fighter squadrons in Canada with American interceptors at no cost to this country. But informants said this possibility has been discussed within the defence department as one solution for the problem of what to do about replacing the subsonic CF-100 which has been in service eight years.

Another possibility is that production of the supersonic CF-104 might be extended beyond 1963 to supply enough planes for a few interceptor squadrons in Canada. This would be relatively inexpensive after production of 200 CF-104s for the RCAF air division in Europe. Still the most likely course, however, sources said, is for Canada to dispense with interceptors altogether in the next few years and rely for air defence on the two Bomarc anti-aircraft missile bases to be installed near North Bay, Ont., and Mont Laurier, Que.

Gen. Lawrence Kuter, commander-in-chief of North American Air Defence Command, at a press conference here Tuesday, made no bones about NORAD's opinion. The CF-100 should be replaced by another manned interceptors at an early date.
