Discusses Programme

Dr. Crowell stated that many handicrafters in New Brunswick make from $300. to $500. a year from their hobbies, and said that he thought a great many young island people would be encouraged to stay on the farms if they could practise such crafts, which turn leisure hours into profit as well as enjoyment.

Assists Indirectly

He explained that although the New Brunswick government does not make any direct financial contribution to the scheme, it assists indirectly by providing handicraft instruction.

Apart from the School of Arts and Crafts which operates in the summer, winter courses are provided by the government. Five or more people wishing to learn to weave in any community in the province have only to notify the department, and an instructor and a loom for each are provided for a month. The only charge is rental of one dollar a week for the looms and the cost of material used. At the end of the month the cost amounts to about fifteen dollars, and by that time each person participating has woven articles worth more than the cost of the course. Very similar schemes are in operation in other fields, such as leather working, jewelry, silk screening and wood turning.

Anyone wishing to learn a particular craft can attend the School of Arts at Pundy National Park, and Dr. Crowell suggested that the W. I. send over at least one person for a three weeks course. It is not, however, necessary to stay for three weeks. One may go for only a day, and learn to make one article in what ever field he or she chooses.

Advertising Methods

Dr. Crowell touched briefly upon the methods of advertising used by New Brunswick handicrafters. He said that many groups had tea states that their work was displayed at fall fairs, at all the tourist outposts, that the department pub-red when Mr. Campbell rose to object to the use by Mr. McPhee of the phrase "under arrest" when witness Cpl. Strong was particularly using the term "Took him into custody." He said there might come a time later in the case when the distinction may be important.

During the morning session Mr. Justice Gault, who presided, asked the phrase "under arrest" when witness Cpl. Strong was particularly using the term "Took him into custody." He said there might come a time later in the case when the distinction may be important.

Stirling Dingwell, undertaker of Souris, said he saw the slain woman at her home and had been asked to take charge of the body. The remains were taken to his funeral parlor and then to Charlottetown where the body was turned over to Dr. Harold Shaw, Provincial Pathologist. In brief cross examination by Mr. James Johnston, associate defence counsel, he said the coroner's inquest was held at the home of the deceased. The jury went there and there were other people present.

Doctor's Evidence — Dr. Edward Kassner, physician of Souris, said he was called on the night of November 8 to go to MacKinnon's residence for additional details on the telephone but could only understand that someone was wounded. He called the R. C. M. P. and went to the house with them. Mrs. MacKinnon was lying when he arrived. She was dead on her left side with no evidence of a wound. He turned the body over and saw a small wound behind the left ear. He pronounced her dead. He had not known Mrs. MacKinnon. At the house he saw some children and "hired help."

Glynneth Stewart, Souris carpenter, said he saw the MacKinnon farm by the R. C. M. P. He took a window from the home and identified one in court as the same one he had removed. He had tacked the screen to the frame before removing as it previously was tacked to the casing. He used more than ordinary care in removing to have it intact.

There was a hole in the glass and in the screen when he took the window out. Cpl. Strong and several other people were present at the time. He put his name on the window for identification. It was the same window that was removed. He did not remove the upper part. He thought the holes in the screen and glass were bound to differ a little but despite the care used as the screen originally had been used about two inches from the frame.

Taking the witness stand long before the trial began, Cpl. Strong was still there when a five minute rest period was taken at 5:30 in the afternoon. He related how he had received a call from Dr. Kassner shortly after 10:30 on the night of November 8. He had known the MacKinnon family and had business dealings with Mrs. MacKinnon. In June 1951 he had received a call from her at 2 o'clock in the morning. He went to the house and asked the accused to leave the property. He did so immediately. He was sitting at the dining table eating and sat beside him for supper, remarking that he hoped he was staying away from the MacKinnons.

Filed Complaint

It was after this that Mrs. MacKinnon and Mary Estelle her daughter had filed a complaint. At this point in his testimony the first of the many arguments between counsel developed over "delay" in executing the subsequent warrant. The Chief Justice ruled that the method of executing the warrant was not relevant. Crown prosecutor Campbell took an exception which was noted.

On the night of the murder he had gone to MacKinnon's with Dr. Kassner and Constable Ralph Sandberg. There were children at the house and several other people. The body was lying in a small hallway at the foot of the stairs and the doctor examined it. He identified the window in evidence and described the position of the body and some of the furniture in the kitchen. Mr. McPhee objected to this on the grounds that there was no proof the furniture was in the same position at the time of the murder as when the R. C. M. P. arrived.

The witness said it was a large kitchen table 5 feet 1 inch long by 2 feet 6 inches wide. He told of the hole in the window and the screen. He thought that in the window appeared a little higher and towards the west of the one in the screen.

Campbell introduced in evidence several pictures taken of the interior of the kitchen. Mr. McPhee offered no objections to them until two showing the body were presented. He objected to them because the body had admittedly been moved from its original position. However, the presiding jurist admitted them.

The witness told of looking through the holes as he lined them up from the inside directly on the trunk of a tree by the nearby dairy. There was a wire fence behind the dairy and the land sloped downwards from the house towards the bank of Little Harbour.

After Recess

After the luncheon recess the witness resumed the stand and said of the cottage previously mentioned that he thought it was owned by an American. It was not occupied at the time of the crime. He placed in the various locations mentioned on the maps in evidence and named the neighbors between the MacKinnon and MacDonald farms. He knew the premises for it. He said that the garage in which they found the first gun had double folding doors which were always open. He agreed that Mr. Aeneas MacDonald had always co-operated fully with him, and said that the rubber boots in evidence had been pointed out to him by the accused himself as the ones he was wearing that night. He agreed with Mr. McPhee's thought that in a small village a man might easily get the same kind of rubber boots as his neighbor where there were only two or three stores selling them.

Const. Cass Called — The conclusion of the argument over the admissibility of evidence about the work of the police dog ended the testimony of Cpl. Strong at 5:30 in the afternoon after he had been on the stand continuously from 2:30. A brief 5-minute recess was taken.

When court resumed R. C. M. P. Constable George H. Cass of the Charlottetown detachment was called to the stand. He told of receiving the message from Dr. Harold Shaw at the local police barracks and of putting it in a glass bottle for safe keeping. He received a sawed-off 22 rifle from Cst. Sandberg on the road near St. Peters and also three rounds of ammunition in a glass bottle. He had kept them all locked up in a cupboard in a locked office.

On November 11 he went by air to Moncton and then to Montreal and the following day by air to Ottawa where he delivered the items to Staff Sgt. William Wallace Sutherland at the R. C. M. P. laboratory at Rockcliffe. Constable Tomlinson had been present there at the time. Court then adjourned, but will resume at 10:30 this morning.

or photos of the hoof-prints had been made. Under questioning he said that a neighbor of Aeneas MacDonald had several horses and Mr. McPhee noted that the fences were in poor shape and the horse frequently wandered out. He also suggested that in this age of mechanization horses were not shod as much as in former days. The witness said they had not found the expended shell on the MacKinnon property despite a long search. He could not say if a search had been made further north by the water area. They had searched no other premises for it. He said that the garage in which they found the first gun had double folding doors which were always open. He agreed that Mr. Aeneas MacDonald had always co-operated fully with him, and said that the rubber boots in evidence had been pointed out to him by the accused himself as the ones he was wearing that night.
