CONSERVATIVELY SPEAKING

By ISLANDER

One day this week, while travelling through Kings County I ran into Melvin McQuaid and John MacLean. They were getting a great reception. It's been a long time since this section of Kings has made such a contribution to the Legislature and to the government. The people down Souris way are proud about this after all. Here's the way it stacks up to them. they've got a Provincial Treasurer, an Attorney General and a speaker of the House, all from that district. People don't readily make changes when they've elected people who distinguish themselves to that extent.

Well, I had a little talk with these two boys and Mel told me, this business of being provincial treasurer isn't easy. He told me about the mess he found when he took over in 1959 and he said it is mighty hard to handle that big debt, keep up the provinces credit and still do all the things that people need to have done for them. But he is happy about the way it has worked out. Today the credit of the province is good, and three years of hard work is going to mean that during the next few years even more of the kind of things people want can be done. Those people in Kings County that elected Mel and John gave this province a pretty good break and I don't wonder they are proud about what they did.

Well, there's not too many days to wait for the results of the election. I'm not sure how many Liberals will be around after it is over. There's a report here that a lot of the leaders are going to go to Australia to learn how to handle a boomerang. They tell me it's one thing to put a boomerang into orbit and it's another to get out of the way so it doesn't hit you on the return trip. Well, anyway what's happened, of course, is that that business about paying subsidies on potatoes has boomeranged in great shape. It's even hurting the three dealers that cooked up the scheme. Every farmer knows that the quickest way to boost yourself right out of the potato market is to start giving special deals to a few people. Next thing you know you're shut out. Most people still believe in an open market and they know that Prince Edward Island can't afford to do something that turns every potato buyer in Canada and the United States against them.

A person came along the other day and said to me, I don't, get it but the Liberals have only one campaign going and that's in Charlottetown. Have they given up the rest of the province? And I told him that I ha dnoticed this but didn't know why they were acting that way. We talked about it for a while and it seems that these fellows see things straight. I suppose they figure that Charlottetown's their toughest fight. But this also looks like the Liberals are fighting among themselves. Some of the ads they're running look a lot more like a leadership convention is coming up instead of an election. That's about what it amounts to, I'm told. And I guess if you have to have a leadership fight, Charlottetown's the right place to have it.

I'm glad to see that nobody has swallowed the idea that we didn't need an election now. Of course it's awful hard to figure why the Liberals have been saying ithis. Because as the fellow I rent a tractor from said the other day, "Alec Matheson was down here six months ago and said he'd give anything if the Conservatives would just call an election". So there's one going and right to the last minute there's a lot of crying about not needing any such thing. But you do what I'm going to do. You get out there Monday and vote. And don't waste that vote. You put it where you'll get some good out of it. You give Walter Shaw and his boys a chance to go right on building this province up. We'll all be glad we did.
