unfortunate

Cod-liver oil suggests consumption, which is almost unfortunate.

Its best use is before you fear consumption; when you begin to get thin, weak, run down; then is the prudent time to begin to take care, and the best way to take care is to supply the system with needed fat and strength. Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil, with hypophosphites, will bring back plumpness to those who have lost it, and make strength where raw cod-liver oil would be a burden.

A substitute only imitates the original.

WOES OF A DRINKER.

THE INDESCRIBABLE HORRORS THAT AFFLICT THE PERIODICAL DRUNK.

He Suffers Untold Agonies as He Fights Against What He Knows to Be Inevitable—Enough Misery to Awake Pity in the Hardest Heart.

"Do you see that man there?" asked a Chicago physician of a Tribune reporter. "He is a reputable business man, has a wife and several children to whom he is devotedly attached, and there is every reason in the world, except one, why he should be happy. Look at his face; mark the pallor; observe the twitching of the mouth and the restless and haggard look about the eyes; see how his fingers jerk, and note the uneasy shrug of his shoulders. That man is in the first throes of a form of circular insanity, which is better known as inebriety. The craving for drink is upon him, hot as the charge of a thousand furies. He has a periodical rhythmic drunk about every six months, and during the last four or five days his brain has been a seething caldron; his nerves have been a-quiver, and his thoughts have been madness. He knows to a demonstration that he cannot overcome the gnawing appetite, yet he fights it with desperation. Talk about your heroes of Thermopylae and Balaklava and Inkerman—why that fellow sitting there, a pale, trembling, cowering wretch, has more nerve in him than 100 heroes of history combined; every nerve cell—every one of the countless millions—has a mouth which has been crying for drink for now these several days. He has resolved that he will not yield; has before him the memory of half a hundred such Titan struggles in which he fell, and still he resists. Ordinary men require the stimulus of an occasional victory in order to summon courage for action. This man, with a past full of discouragement and defeats, yet has the nerve to resist the demon that is irresistible.

"A truce to the sentimental ignorance of humanity, which has only reproaches and sneers for a man like him. I know him intimately as his physician and friend, and I tell you that there is in him the stuff that martyrs are made of; yet within a week he will be overcome of drink; a vile wretch, as public estimate puts it. He will drink to satiety, to repletion, to bestiality. In his madness he will consort with low fellows; you may find him yourself in the slums, possibly with the vicious even, but I swear to you that he is a man and a noble man for all that. No one knows better than he when the first stages of the craving seize him; a thousand needle prickings occur synchronously all over his body; now and then the perspiration suffuses him, and then he is dry; his skin is parched. He is not athirst as men count desire for water, but he is overcome of that which is insatiate; all the water in Lake Michigan would not satisfy the burning desire. He temporizes, seeks to make a compromise by offering the diseased nerves such mild decoctions as ginger ale, sweet cider, etc.; possibly he may make a cocktail of his Worcestershire sauce; he eats inordinately of the various pepper sauces, and becomes more and more restless. His mind wanders; he can give no attention to business.

"All this time, and it has now been coming on for several days, he struggles against the inevitable. Knowing that he will find nepenthe in whisky, he yet refuses to take it. He despises himself for what he esteems his cowardice. He would give everything he has in the world if he only might overcome this maddening thirst. The wife of his bosom and the children of his loins are all in all to him; he thinks of the misery and wretchedness he entails upon the former and of the woe there may be in store for the latter. No one knows better than he that they and he lack but one thing to their life and their love, and that one thing he desires above all other things.

"There come to him—aye, probably at this very moment, for you will see a tender expression has crept over his face—thoughts of the long ago, of the dear, black-eyed girl who with blushing cheeks of red stood with him at the altar, and he vowed to comfort and keep her so long as she should live. He thinks of the tender vows he whispered in her ear at eventide; of the prattle of his first babe; of her love and her gentleness and tenderness through all the years they have been together. Ah, the shadow comes over his brow—there is the memory.

"Do you ask me why such a man—a man who is as tender in his emotions as any pure woman, who is affectionate and kind in his family, conscientious in his business, public-spirited as a citizen—do you ask me why such a man is so very a slave to a degrading habit? I answer, and I emphasize the answer, he cannot help it. The world does not understand this thing; may be it is just as well; I don't know about that. This I do know; a long experience among men of his class has made me devilish sympathetic. I guess I am a bit pessimistic, for I have a very poor conceit of the world's good sense and its charity.

"I am not defending drunkenness. As a fact, drunkenness is altogether different from inebriety. Within 48 hours my friend there is likely to be incontinently drunk. He will resist to the last moment; even after he has thrown his money upon the counter and the glass is within an inch of his lips, he will resist. There will be an imprecation upon his lips and a curse directed against himself, as he pours the vile fluid into his gullet; but once that first glass is swallowed all control is gone. He will call for drink after drink, until the frightened bartender will let him have no more.

"I am not preaching. I have a living example before me and I feel I ought to invite attention to it in order that men may draw a little lesson of charity out of it. It will not do us a bit of harm to get outside of the ego once in a while and study a subject like this—a man who is big despite his smallness—a man who is noble yet ignoble—a man who fights against every odd and keeps up the contest until he is completely vanquished and crushed."

A Graduate of Toronto University Says

"My children have been treated with Scott's Emulsion from their earliest years. Our physician first recommended it, and now whenever a child takes cold my wife immediately resorts to this remedy, which always effects a cure."

WOMEN WHO SMOKE.

They Are Very Numerous in Russia and Not Rare in England.

Not so long ago it was considered a risky and frisky thing for a woman to smoke a cigarette in the seclusion of the family circle, but to-day well-brought-up married ladies, without the least approach to fastness in behavior, smoke their three or four cigarettes a day, with the approval of their husbands, and in the presence of their servants. The ladies in Russian society, one and all smoke cigarettes as a matter of course, in private and in public.

At an afternoon call in St. Petersburg, at 3 o'clock in the day, a Russian lady offers a cigarette case and a matchbox in the most natural manner to her visitors, and without any demur cigarettes are accepted and smoked. In the principal Russian hotels the ladies smoke their cigarettes after dinner in the presence of the assembled company, even to a burning rod on the polish of a penknife. In London such a custom would not be allowed, and a fair smoker would at once be requested not to smoke.

American ladies appear, from all that is said, to be going side by side with their English sisters—some smoking conamore, others for the fun of the thing. Still, it is apparent to all in society that smoking among ladies is immensely on the increase. Husbands, men friends, and even brothers, say nothing against the practice, and, oftener than not, encourage it, unless extravagant indulgence is the result; then they put a limit to the number of cigarettes to be smoked by the wife during the day, if she has not sufficient strength of mind to do so for herself; and, indeed, most lady smokers make a point of limiting themselves to three cigarettes a day on an average.

Ladies in these days are nurtured in an atmosphere of tobacco smoke; how can it be otherwise than that they should acquire a taste for it? In a milder form, it is true, than that of the pipe or cigar, which their male relatives so keenly enjoy, but in that of the dainty cigarette. The days have gone by when the smell of tobacco smoke made a woman faint. Among a few married ladies an antipathy to it does still exist, and these ladies, it must be confessed, make their husbands rather uncomfortable, with their restrictions against smoking here or smoking there, and render them a little envious of the freedom enjoyed by other men in this respect, whose wives are not so sensitive to this pungent scent.—London Queen

A FARMER IN TROUBLE.

A Granville County Man Speaks His Mind—Feels Like a New Man—Cured by Four Boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

CARDINAL, Dec. 7—(Special)—Mr. Robert McIntosh, a farmer very widely known in this county and living near this village, has been in a painful and dangerous condition as the result of kidney disease affecting the bladder. When called upon he said:

"During three years, until quite recently cured by using four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, I have been an intense sufferer from kidney disease, which kept going from bad to worse, though I was doctoring all the time."

Under advice I began using Dodd's Kidney Pills, at once realizing great help. I now feel like a new man, and am perfectly cured of kidney trouble in any form."

To Robert Phillips, Druggist, Fergus.
This is to certify that I have suffered from piles for a long time and tried several articles recommended for this complaint, but none of them benefitted me till I tried Chase's Ointment, which has completely cured me.

"My six-year-old daughter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months, the principal seat of eruption being behind her ears. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, bought innumerable medicines and soaps, and took the child to medical specialists in skin diseases, but without result. Finally, a week ago, I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and the first application showed the curative effect of the Remedy. We have used only one-sixth of the box, but the change is very marked; the eruption has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured. (Signed) MAXWELL JOHNSTON, 112 Anne St., Toronto

Steel Construction in Birds' Nests.

A curious gift has been made to the Natural History Museum of Soletta. This gift consists of a bird's nest, constructed entirely of steel. There are a great many watchmakers at Soletta, and in the vicinity of the workshops there are always the remains of the old springs of watches which have been cast aside.

Last summer a watchmaker discovered this curious bird's nest, which had been built in a tree in his courtyard by a pair of water-wagtails. It measures ten centimetres in circumference, and is made solely of watch springs. When the birds had fledged their brood the watchmakers secured their unique nest as an interesting proof of the intelligence of birds in adapting anything which comes within their reach.

Thieves Roused by a Corpse.

A strange experience befell some thieves who had broken into the parish church at Suelli a few nights ago. A man of the name of Francesco Lecca, who was supposed to be dead, had been taken to the church and left there for some hours, previous to his burial. At 7 o'clock in the evening, while his relatives were gathered around him, he suddenly gave signs of life.

The relatives, terror-stricken, called out loudly for help. The thieves, imagining that they had been discovered, threw down the valuable booty which they had secured and escaped by the front door of the church. The man who had so strangely come to life again really expired two hours afterwards. The population of Suelli attribute this event to Saint George, patron saint of the village.—London Daily News.

It Wore Well.

A steel cable six miles in length, in use on a London street car line, was recently removed after it had been in continuous use for 853 days at a speed of eight miles an hour. It was still apparently in good condition, although its diameter had been slightly reduced by wear.

A MESSAGE TO MEN.

Proving that True Honesty and True Philanthropy Still Exist.

If any man who is weak, nervous and debilitated, or who is suffering from any of the various troubles resulting from youthful folly, excesses or overwork, will take heart and write to me, I will send him confidentially and free of charge the plan pursued by which I was completely restored to perfect health and manhood, after years of suffering from Nervous Debility, Loss of Vigor and Organic Weakness.

I have nothing to sell, and therefore want no money, but as I know through my own experience how to sympathize with such sufferers, I am glad to be able to assist any fellow-beings to a cure. I am well aware of the prevalence of quackery, for I myself was deceived and imposed upon until I nearly lost faith in mankind but I rejoice to say that I am now perfectly well and happy once more and am desirous therefore to make this certain means of cure known to all. If you will write to me you can rely upon being cured and the proud satisfaction of having been of great service to one in need will be sufficient reward for my trouble. Absolute secrecy assured. Send 5c silver to cover postage and address Mr. Geo. G. Strong, North Rockwood, Mich. 135&w.

Granby Rubbers

It is no wonder that rubbers, which are not the same shape as the boot, should be uncomfortable. It costs money to employ skilled pattern makers but the result is a satisfactory fit. Each year new patterns are added, to fit all the latest shoe-shapes, and Granby Rubbers are always "up-to-date."

They are honestly made of pure rubber, thin, light, elastic, durable, extra thick at ball and heel.
