ACCIDENT ON THE INTERCOLONIAL.—A freight train was derailed on Wednesday at St. Simon, causing a delay of four hours to the Halifax express on its way to Lewis. She complains that he neglected her.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—What might have terminated in a serious affair happened one day last week at Jordan Mountain, when a little three-year-old girl of Mr. Henry Marr's, being alone in a room, lit a match and in so doing her apron caught fire. He will be expected to act as 'bonancer' in our office, and should any one of our councillors enter with fire in his eye will be expected to 'bounce' him, as it is our intention to ventilate council matters, and desire to hold the fort."

Before the separation of wife and husband, Mrs. Critchfield was very sick and while in that condition her mother influenced the separation.

Amawalk the Beautiful!

A VISIT TO THE NOVITIATE OF THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS FOR NEW YORK AND ONTARIO.

Some few months ago, the Institutions under their control having increased in numbers and importance, the Brother General of the Christian Brothers, whose place of residence is Paris, France, erected Ontario into a separate religious province, and placed Brother Tobias, a man of surpassing worth, over it as Visitor. The Brother who up to that time exercised jurisdiction over the two great provinces of the Dominion, still retains the Visitorship of the Province of Quebec. Archbishop O'Brien's protector at Halifax, which is doing such good work under the management of the Christian Brothers, is dependent upon the N. Y. Province, which far excels, from every point of view, the other provinces of the brotherhood in America. But although Ontario is now a separate province, presided over by a Brother Superior called a Visitor, and consequently qualified to have a novitiate and scholasticate for itself, for the present, however, all postulants for admission to the community of Brothers will be sent to the beautiful novitiate of the N. Y. Province, known as St. Joseph's Institute, and situated at Amawalk, a charming country place, in the County of Westchester, about thirty-eight miles from New York City. Amawalk is but a short distance from Lake Croton, whence the great city receives its water supply, and within a half hour's drive of Yorktown, the scene of many memorable events in the war of independence. Quite near, too, and in this same county, was born and lived America's greatest man of letters, Washington Irving; indeed every inch of the country round arouses historic memories.

To this beautiful spot, nestled in among the verdant hills, with the still more majestic Catskills, clothed in all their Rip Van Winkle celebrity, looming up in the distance, I was taken one morning towards the end of last July. Amidst the din of milk cans (for Amawalk is one of the largest milk-supplying districts for New York City,) we left the train, and, behind a pair of sturdy horses, took the road to the Institute, and a beautiful road it is, disclosing to our admiring gaze at every turn, as it winds itself through the broken country, a beauty-spot even more enchanting than that we left behind, all of which fade into insignificance when compared with the charming valley in whose bosom, radiant in the sunshine as the blossoms which surround it, couches the novitiate of the good Brothers. Assuredly nature has here been prodigal of her gifts; nor has she withheld anything which could add to the charms of the place—mountain and plain, woods and water all conspire to make St. Joseph's a pearl of ravishing beauty. Surrounded by tree-clad hills, it bids defiance to the angry winds as they rush over the rugged ridges in the background, in their escape from the strong cave of Eolus, whilst on their return they reserve their balmy breath for this happy home of the holy monks. Round about are well-tilled fields, rows of luxuriant trees, a vineyard slope covered with fruitful vines, and in front of the main building a piece of landscape gardening unsurpassed by anything to be seen in the great cities. Through this beautiful place meanders a stream of considerable size, which once turned the wheels of a mill, and whispered its dull dirge into the ear of a lazy miller, but now, after supplying the institution with water and keeping several of the old gardeners' ingeniously constructed fountains in continual play, rolls on in silvery ripples to join a sister stream not far below, lulling to rest, after evening, the little colony of saintly monks and innocent novices. When I, descending from the carriage, got a coup d'oeil of the place, its beauty unmarred by any unseemly object, so struck me that my first remark to my companions was "Who wouldn't be happy here!" and when I went over the different departments afterwards and encountered the young men qualifying themselves for the brotherhood, I certainly saw unmistakable evidence of happiness and contentment.

In the small novitiate were found a large number of boys ranging from ten to sixteen years, and gathered together from all parts of the continent, about twenty of them claiming the fair Province of Prince Edward Island as their home. Among these boys was a nephew of the Archbishop of Halifax, and several relatives of priests in the diocese of Charlottetown. In the large novitiate, where some time is spent in forming the religious character after the prise d'habit, an equally large number of fine intelligent young men were going through their exercises, and in the scholasticate, within whose walls young brothers are initiated into the art of teaching, an art in which the Christian Brother so excels, a little army of young monks, under a venerable master, performed with such willingness, grace and exactness their respective duties. In every school the work went on quietly but thoroughly, the influences of religion smoothing out every difficulty and strengthening every back to its burden.

Among the novices at Amawalk I met young men of almost every nationality, the Irish of course, predominating. No more striking proof of the Catholicity of the Church could be furnished in America than this grouping together of Frenchman, German, Italian, Spaniard, Englishman, Irishman and Scotchman, all intent on fitting themselves to carry out her aims in bringing within the reach of all the blessings of a religious education.

When we were conducted through the regular novitiate, I undertook to tell the nationality of the novices by their faces, and succeeded very well, indeed, until I came to an able-bodied, fresh, good-looking young fellow, a very Hercules among his brothers. Being asked to locate him, I at once put him down as a Cape Bretoner, and
