Caouette Enjoys Election Battles

By RONALD LEBEL
OTTAWA (CP)—Some politicians privately regard election campaigns as unpleasant ordeals, but not René Caouette. He thoroughly enjoys stumping the hustings.
The deputy leader of the Social Credit party has been crisscrossing Quebec and French-speaking areas of Ontario and New Brunswick by car since Feb. 24 on a six-week schedule involving 80 meetings.
"I have been campaigning the year round for 25 years and I am not going to give up now," says the 45-year-old Rouyn car dealer, who has been fighting a nagging sore throat and exhaustion as well as political opponents.
He delights his audiences—which usually overflow to the street outside—by remarking that Quebec halls are too small for his rallies. "When you elect a Social Credit government, you will have plenty of money to build larger halls."
Unlike leading figures in the other three parties, Mr. Caouette's central theme is economic and social insur-

ity. He appeals for support from the 200,000 unemployed workers in Quebec and their relatives, from the unskilled and inexperienced workers who are always the first to be laid off, from the thousands of marginal farmers who scratch out a living on $1,500 a year or less and from the self-employed classes who are hard hit by high interest rates and business slumps.
"You have nothing to lose," he tells them. "Try Social Credit and if after four years we fail to give you justice with security, kick us out like dogs with our tags."
Ethnic insecurity is a secondary theme. The "credentialed" chief says French-Canadians are second-class citizens in the nine English-speaking provinces and the French-Canadians have one strike against them when they seek jobs with the federal government or private industry.

PREDICTS VOTE
"French Canada must assert itself," he repeats often. He predicts that his party will sweep 62 of the 75 Quebec constituencies in the April 8 election, pick up "about 30" seats in the rest of the country and hold the balance of power in the next Parliament.
Mr. Caouette rarely explains in his speeches how social credit theories would work. Asked why, he replies: "It's all in our literature. Besides, it would take me two hours or more each time."
But he is firmly convinced that these theories—described by opponents as funny money and magic—are the only solution to Canada's economic problems, the only answer to communism.

NEW YORK

NEW YORK (AP)—Posting its record 4,000,000 shares in as many sessions, the stock market Wednesday gained further ground. Savings loans and steels were prominent.
The gain was more decisive than Tuesday's but again was made despite scattered wack spots.
The increase in volume was the most impressive thing about the day, although stock averages made substantial advances.
Volume rose to 4,300,000 shares from 4,100,000 Tuesday and was the largest since Feb.

PUBLIC FORUM

the more easily liquor is obtained the more will be consumed. It is said there is a large and increasing majority of men and women of this country who drink moderately. This is aging if true. We are told the minority must keep quiet and make no protest, but majorities are not always right and minorities are not always wrong. No man has any right to make himself a menace or danger on the highway. No man has any right to make himself a nuisance in society. The trouble lies in the fact that when he takes a drink or two he feels he has improved his ability to drive a car or do anything else better. At the same time his ability is much impaired.
How true the proverb, "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging and whoever is deceived thereby is not wise."

THE LIQUOR EVIL

Sir,—It is gratifying to note the number of persons and organizations who have protested against creating more liquor outlets in our province, and I count it a privilege to take my stand with them.
First, I would like to quote from an article entitled "It is sent to Penitentiary from Prince County in 1962" which appeared on page 3 of The Guardian on January 23 of this year: "In his report to the Grand Jury at the September Supreme Court sitting, Sheriff R. B. Dewar stated there had been 132 prisoners under his charge in the Prince County jail since the May sitting of Supreme Court. His report showed the majority of offenders were concerned with excessive or improper use of alcohol." "Exactly half of the prisoners were jailed for intoxication, 18 for impaired driving, four for possession of liquor, three under the Excise Act (relating to stills) and a variety of other offences including rape, criminal negligence and breach and entry in which evidence revealed liquor played a leading role in the crime."
It seems evident that most of our province's crime comes as a direct result of sale of alcoholic beverages. I ask therefore, why are there any legal outlets for the sale of this source of crime? Why are not our present outlets abolished, and every legal outlet eradicated?
Secondly, many of our leaders, including the Lieutenant Governor, see an urgent need for a year-around Alcohol Education program for our youth, and we quote his statement: "It has never been more important in the history of our nation and Province than now to bring to our youth the truth about temperance."
I do believe that an Alcohol Education Program would be of value, but only if the Bible the Word of God, is accepted as the one authoritative text book on the subject. God has spoken, and we do well to take heed to His words.
I am, Sir, etc.
