Six Of 10 CNR Hotels Made Profit Last Year

OTTAWA (CP) — Six of 10 Canadian hotels owned by the Canadian National Railway made profits last year, the Senate transportation committee was told.
Officials of the publicly-owned railway system said the Newfoundland Hotel, St. John's, the Nova Scotia in Halifax, the Charlottetown Hotel (which has since been sold to a private Prince Edward Island corporation), the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal, the Macdonald Hotel in Edmonton, and Jasper Park Lodge in Jasper, Alta., finished 1964 with profits.
Hotels showing losses were the Chateau Laurier in Ottawa, the Fort Garry in Winnipeg, the Bessborough in Saskatoon and the Hotel Vancouver.
Both the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal and the Hotel Vancouver are owned by the CNR, but operated by Hilton of Canada Limited.
W. G. Cleveley of Montreal, the CNR's co-ordinator of capital budgets, said the actual profit and loss figures for the various hotels would not be released until the railway publishes its annual report in April.
APPROVE SPENDING
The transportation committee approved without amendment a bill authorizing the CNR to make capital expenditures totaling approximately $227,000,000 in the 18-month period from January 1, 1964 to June 30, 1965. The bill was passed by the House of Commons on March 4, 1964.
Railway officials told the committee money for capital spending came from the CNR's own internal capital resources. However, the railway's annual deficit, which last year amounted to $38,700,000 was absorbed in the government's estimates.
Senator Walter M. Aesliffe (PC-Saskatchewan) asked the officials if any refinancing of the CNR's debt structure is being planned.
Mr. Cooper replied that there has been "some recent debt refinancing."
The CNR's total funded debt now is $1,780,000,000. "This is $11,000,000 less than in 1963," he said.
Mr. Cleveley produced figures showing that the railway's annual deficit has been steadily declining since 1961. In 1961, it was $67,308,000; in 1962, $49,000,000; in 1963, $43,000,000; and in 1964, $38,700,000.

French And English Authors Suggest New Constitution

MONTREAL (CP) — Marcel Faribault, a French-speaking Conservative, and Robert Fowler, an English-speaking Liberal, have put aside their differences and come up with ideas for a new Canadian constitution.
The result is a book called Ten to One, dedicated to establishing that a federal Canada can stay united and maintain its identity.
Mr. Faribault is president of Trust General du Canada, a big, Montreal-based trust company. Mr. Fowler is president of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association.
Their book, due for publication later this month in English and French, includes the text of what they consider a model Canadian constitution.
Such a constitution is needed to replace "the old clutter of the British North America Act," Mr. Fowler said.
BEGAN YEAR AGO
Mr. Faribault, interviewed with his co-author, said their project began when a group of Canadian businessmen were gathered in Houston, Tex., about a year ago.
"As Canadians often do," said the trust company chief, "we began discussing Canadian problems."
Among the provisions of their constitution is the embodying of English and French-language rights in a section called "fundamental rights."
All citizens would be allowed to address any federal court of federal government department in either French or English, designated as the two "federal languages" of Canada.
The same right would apply in relation to the governments of provinces where 20 per cent of the population speaks a second official language.
Once this right has been established in a province, it may not be cancelled until the second-language group falls to less than 10 per cent.
SPLIT WORK
Mr. Faribault prepared most of the constitutional text in the new book while Mr. Fowler handled sections designed to explain the text.
Their constitutional section dealing with rights also guarantees education in both official languages, although parents would decide which would be taught as the "first" language.
All such rights would be dealt with by a special constitutional court which would include members of the Supreme Court of

1 Pass 2 Pass
2 Pass 3 Pass
3 Opening lead — three of spades.
This hand occurred in the Trials staged in Miami Beach in 1963 for the purpose of selecting a team to represent the United States in the forthcoming World Olympiad.
A young and then relatively unknown California pair, Robert Hamman and Don Krauss, finished first in the star-studded field, much to the surprise of most prognosticators, who had given them almost no chance to finish in the money.
The youngsters were East-West, defending four hearts, and succeeded in defeating that contract even though at other tables all the declarers made eleven tricks. The only tricks lost at those tables were the ace and king of trumps.

Krauss led a spade won in dummy with the king, and declarer played a heart at trick two. East winning with the singleton ace.
Hamman made the killing return of the heart to declarer in the ace, and declarer was in the bad to blame South for going up with the ace. From declarer's viewpoint, the dealer might have been a singleton, in which case a diamond finesse would prove fatal after West took the king and returned a diamond for East to ruff. This would eventually lead to down one, since the defense would win two trump tricks, a diamond, and a ruff.
Instead, declarer went up with the ace, ruffed spade, and played three rounds of clubs, discarding a diamond on the third one. This method of play would have succeeded if the clubs had been divided normally, that is, 4-3.
But Krauss ruffed the third club, played a diamond to the king, and later scored the king of hearts to defeat the contract one trick. At most tables, East, at trick three, played the king of diamonds, hoping that West had the ace and that the defense would thus prevent declarer from discarding his diamond losers on dummy's clubs.
The effect of Hamman's play was that he scored a plus of 100 points with the East-West cards, while at other tables the East-West pairs were all minus

Canada and judges appointed by the provinces.
The Fowler-Faribault constitution also calls for a Senate in which half the membership would be appointed by the provinces.
The draft attempts to define areas of jurisdiction as clearly as possible, though it leaves a fairly broad overlap in certain powers. Mr. Faribault has written several works on constitutional matters, a study he considers his hobby.
Mr. Fowler served as legal secretary during the 1960s for the Rowell-Sirois royal commission on federal-provincial relations.
The title of the book conveys the general theme of the work, diversity freely blended into an over-all unity.
