What can a License Law do?

We have already seen that the question before the people on the 16th Oct., though nominally between the Scott Act and a License Law, will really be between a certain law and a very uncertain one.

But now we will grant for argument's sake, that we could, by doing away with the Scott Act, get a License Law. What good would it do us, if we had it? This question ought not to be a hard one to answer, for Charlottetown has had experience of License Laws from the time of its foundation up to the year 1881. What good did the Licensed Taverners ever do to any one? Surely those who want us to go back to Licenses will tell us this:

Did they add to the peace and quiet of the town?

Did they raise the value of the property in their neighborhood?

Would any quiet citizen be glad to see a tavern opened near his house?

Did they provide desirable places of resort for any class of the community?

What did they give to the community or to any individual in return for the money spent in them?

Of how many homes did they increase the happiness?

What improvement did they bring about in the morals of the people?

What do they add to their physical comfort?

What to their intellectual improvement?

What to their rational amusement? To what man, woman, or child did any one tavern ever do any good to body, or mind, or soul?

Surely we shall be told of some little good somewhere, at some time, done to somebody. If not, we certainly will be slow to take back what after a long trial we rejected, because by bitter experience, we knew it to be an evil and a curse.

And yet, now, we are told, "Have licenses and you will be prosperous and happy! Have licenses and your town will be quiet and peaceful again; all this dreadful sale of liquor that is going on will be stopped! Entrust yourselves to the liquor dealers; men now shocked and pained at seeing so much liquor sold; trust the work of temperance reform to them,—and see how rapidly and effectually they will restrain the sale of liquor."

Yes, we are actually asked to do this—to let the liquor sellers be the ones to restrain the sale of liquor!

Among the many legends about Reynard the fox, is one that tells how, once, in pious mood, he called to him the hare, and promised to teach him his creed, and "make him a good chaplain." So the fox took the hare and set him between his knees, "and sang and cried aloud "credo, credo"; but soon he left what first he read and sang, and began to play his old play, for he caught the hare by the throat, and had not a friend come by, he soon would have taken his life.

The city that trusts licensed liquor dealers to restrain the sale of liquors, will be as safe as was the hare learning his creed from the fox.

In our next we will remind the people what evil licenses have done in the past. Meanwhile we want to hear what good they are going to do in the future.

—The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in a recent speech said:—

"It is sometimes said that greater changes are in store, and that fresh relations are to be made with regard to the landlords of the country. I firmly believe that these changes are not to come. There may be some changes, some facilities given for enabling men to become proprietors of their own soil; and I heartily wish they may take place. I believe if a larger number of proprietors in this country were made there would be a great addition to the strength and stability of this country. But I do not think that any greater material changes will now take place with regard to the occupancy of land and the relations between landlord and tenant. I think it essential that the people of this country should not be deluded into believing that they are to get many more concessions, but that they must be content with the enormous concessions that have been made, and work and live accordingly. Even though proprietors in this country very largely increased, it is my belief that in most parts of the country the relations between landlord and tenants will remain, and should remain. I do not for a moment say that I defend those landlords who are extortionate and unfair to their tenants who do not give them a good example in their life, and do not take part in the duties of that life, and who forget that property has its duties as well as its pleasures. I feel strongly that a landlord may do an immense deal, not only by his liberality and good sense in dealing with his tenants, but by the general advice he may give them, by the lead which he may take in the district where he lives, and by giving to those employed about him the benefit of his superior education and social position; and by giving an example by joining not only in the pleasures of the people about him but also in their pursuits; by giving a good example of improved agriculture, for instance, in the country. I believe if the landlords were removed from this position a very great detriment would take place throughout the country."

Canada and Jamaica. HON. MICHAEL SOLOMON'S VIEWS ON A UNION OF THE TWO COUNTRIES—HE INTERVIEWS THE PREMIER AND SIR LEONARD TILLEY ON THE SUBJECT.

When interviewed by a reporter of the Ottawa Sun, the Hon. Michael Solomon, of Jamaica, said:—

"Yes, I am here attempting to bring about the annexing of Jamaica to Canada, but, you must remember, not in an official capacity—that is, the people of that island did not send me here on annexation business."

"Then your mission as yet is of an informal nature?"

"Exactly. It got its inspiration some time ago from a letter written to me by a Toronto gentleman, who clearly showed that the move would be to the interest of both countries and I had the letter in question published in that island, after which, when in England, I brought the matter before West Indian committees, where, to show with what warmth it was received, the following resolution was carried:—

"Resolved, that this meeting of Jamaica proprietors and merchants approve of the scheme for the entrance of Jamaica as a province into the Canadian Dominion, and desire Mr. Solomon to take the earliest opportunity of bringing the matter before the Jamaica Legislature, so that official proposals may be made without loss of time to the Government of Canada, and in any communication that Mr. Solomon may have with Sir John Macdonald, Premier of Canada, he may be assured of the support of the Jamaica proprietors and merchants in Great Britain."

"Would the Home Government sanction the movement?"

"It will offer no objection, if the Canadian government considers annexation right and proper, and as soon as your government exhibits any friendship towards the matter, we will move in Jamaica to become a province of Canada."

"As yet have you taken the matter to the notice of Canadian cabinet ministers?"

"Yesterday I called upon Sir John and Sir Leonard, both of whom received me most cordially but displayed much reticence over the movement—as they had a right to do—and I was not disappointed. There is one thing certain, however, annexation with Jamaica would give Canada a tropical province, which would send its sugar, dye woods, fruits, and such products as are found only in warm countries, into Canadian markets while that island would take from the Canadians their manufactured goods, and those natural products peculiar to cooler climates."

"Are the colored citizens of the Island inclined to be a law abiding people?"

"That question has been asked me before, and it is the outgrowth of an exaggerated report of a trouble that occurred some time ago in one section of Jamaica, which, however, was easily settled among ourselves. They are good living people, and out of the 55,000 land proprietors of the Island, there are 39,000 colored proprietors owning from one to five acres of land, as well as 12,000 possessing from one to fifty acres. The institutions of that country are the same as found in Canada or any Christian country."

"There has been some talk of annexing Jamaica to the United States."

"I know there has, but we are Englishmen, with English laws and institutions, and the question of patriotism and nationality would not allow us to become a portion of shrewd and energetic Yankee land. The move in that direction is not only improbable but almost impossible."

Mr. Solomon is a member of the legislative council, owns a sugar estate and cattle rancho, and his firm has been carrying on business without interruption for 48 years in Jamaica, being the oldest institution of the kind on the island.

The Artillerymen. THE CONTEST AT TORONTO.

TORONTO, September 18.—The 9-pounder rifled muzzle-loading competition for the Governor-General's prize, between the British detachment and a representative of the Canadian Field Batteries, resulted as follows, three rounds being fired by each man, two of common and one of shrapnel:—

Table with columns for British and Canadian names and scores. British: Col Ry (13), Sgt-Ma Smith (13), Capt Gregory (20), Q M S Gerrard (16), Sgt Greaves (12), Gun Adams (15), Sgt-Maj Taylor (11), Sgt Berg (5), Sgt Clarke (7), Capt Pratt (16), Sgt Hodgins (7). Canadian: Capt Mead (10), Sgt-Maj Wharton (5), Br Crow (18), S Sgt D. Gunnett (15), Sgt Webb (25), Sgt Snider (8), Sgt-Maj Joyce (34), Sgt Hodgins (17), Sgt-Maj King (19), Maj Lindsay (16), Sgt Lloyd (10). Total: 135.

In the shift the British team's time was 3.03, Ottawa Field Battery's time 2.17. The whole of the Canadian representatives being unable to remain over-to-day for the shift, the Ottawa Field Battery furnished a team to compete against the English detachment in shifting, with the above result.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Who'll Take the Responsibility.

SIR.—The approaching contest on the question of the repeal of the Canada Temperance Act promises to be one of no ordinary importance. We do not apprehend that the fate of the act is in danger, still it is well for the friends of the act to remember that over confidence leads to inactivity, and inactivity may lead to defeat. We are strongly of the opinion that it would be unwise or at least unskillful to repeal the act just now, or at least until such time as we have something as good in its place. It is the opinion of the leading temperance men that the Scott Act is the best temperance law that has ever been enacted, and we share in that opinion. There are some who would like a license law. Those who remember the working of the old license law on this Island, a law admitted to be the very best of its kind, will not be willing to go back to those days. If the Scott Act is badly enforced by our City Fathers and Stipendiary, the enforcement of the License Act was even worse. We have a vivid recollection of the good old days when tavern keepers borrowed sufficient beds and bedding from their neighbors to go through the face of an inspection. Accommodation for man and beast was a secondary consideration. There were in those days as many selling without license as with, and still there are those who are willing to take the responsibility of license. This reminds us of a launch that was to take place on a certain day. The day brought with it a violent storm, notwithstanding a large number were present. "Will I let her go?" said the manager to the owner. "Do as you like; I'll not take the responsibility." "Neither will I," said the manager—when a poor half drunken fellow came up to the owner and said: "Let her go, skipper, I'll take the responsibility." Who'll take the responsibility of voting to license the rumshops of Charlottetown? Who'll take the responsibility of once more legalizing the traffic in intoxicating drinks?

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Temperance Appeal of 200 Years Ago.

A correspondent of the Times (Jennet Humphreys) sends to that paper the following extract from a curious old anti-alcoholic poem, which happened to fall into her hands on Monday, through being bound up with a volume of Anne Broadstreet's works she was consulting. The date is 1656; its length is some 1,500 lines, and she thinks the following quotations from it not only have strong antiquarian interests, but come with an appeal which is pathetic after a silence of over two centuries:—

THE DRUNKARD'S PROSPECTIVE OR BURNING GLASSE.

Composed by Joseph Riggie, Gentleman, Clerk of the Peace at the County Palatine of Lancaster, London; Printed for the Author, and are to be sold at the Brazen Serpent in St. Paul's Churchyard, 1656.

Drink beaстиates the heart, and spoils the brains, Exiles all reason, all good graces stains, Infatuates judgment, understanding blinds, Perverts the wits, and doth corrupt the minds.

It doth surprise the thoughts, and it doth all The powers and faculties of souls enthrall.

Drunkards for nothing that is good are fit In all the world of earth, the barren'st bit. Like to a dumb Jack in a virginal, They have no voice in commonwealth at all. They've no more use of them throughout the land, Than Jeroboam had of his withered hand.

Health out o' th' body, wit out of the head, Strength out o' th' joints, and every one to bed. All moneys out a-purse; drink out o' th' barrels. Wife, children, out of doors, all into quarrels.

To you churchwardens, constables, and others, That love the Lord, the Church, the State, your brothers, Your selves, your sons, the people of the land, Put forth against this sin your helping hand. Help, help the Lord, the lawes, some ground to vin, Against I say, against this mighty sinne.

UNDER "Notes from Here, There and Everywhere," the Silver Record, of Gothic, Colorado, has the following:—

"J. H. Fletcher let assessment work on the following mines during the past week: The Elgin on Galena mountain, to Thomas Shideler; the Alpine, on Treasure mountain, to Thomas Shideler; the Ashland, on Galens mountain, to Louis Berthold."

"J. H. Fletcher has let to Capt. Arch. Mead the assessment work for this year on the Silver Neekine, Copper Creek, and also on the Jim Blaine mine near Gothic. This is a big year for Jim Blaine, and we expect to hear that a strike will be made in this mine."

DECLINE OF MAN.—Impotency of mind, limb or vital function, nervous weakness, sexual debility, and all diseases caused by indiscretions and abuse, and radically and promptly cured by Mack's Magnetic Medicine, which is for sale by all responsible druggists. See advertisement in another column. Sold in Charlottetown at Apothecary Hall.

THE FIRST TETOTALLER.—John Livesey is claimed as the first tetotalter and founder of the total abstinence movement, he and six others having on the 1st of September, 1822, signed a tetotal pledge drawn up by him. The Moncton Transcript is of the opinion that Nova Scotia must claim the honor of having the first tetotalter—a total abstinence society having been organized at West River, Pictou Co., N. S., in January, 1828, when twelve persons signed the pledge. In April, 1829, a total abstinence society was formed at Bear River, Yarmouth Co., N. S.
