Danny's Change Of Mind

By Thornton W. Burgess

Envy is a foolish thing. Discontent is sure to bring. —Old Mother Nature. Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse had had a great adventure, especially Danny. Black Pussy the Cat at Farmer Brown's house had almost caught Danny. He had come so near to catching Danny that one of his black paws had landed on Danny's tail, but hadn't been able to hold onto it.

"I don't wish so any longer," said Danny. "I don't know what good Nimbleheels gets from that long tail of his. He seems to think a lot of it. I've seen him spend a lot of time washing it. But what good is it? You tell me." "I guess it is just good for looks," squeaked Nanny. "I'm glad mine isn't like his. It must be awfully in the way sometimes. I wouldn't want to have to drag around a tail like that."

"You've changed your mind, haven't you?" squeaked Nanny. "How have I changed my mind?" said Danny.

"I've heard you wish and wish and wish that you had a long tail like that of Nimbleheels. Now you're glad you haven't. If that isn't changing your mind, what is?" squeaked Nanny. "I don't know," said Danny. "I don't know if I really don't."

"Neither do I," said Danny. "He's the only member of the whole Mouse family that I know who sleeps all winter. I guess he sleeps even longer than Johnny Chuck. I wouldn't want to sleep like that. What fun is there in being asleep? I wonder where he is this year."

"Of course, he isn't," retorted Nanny. "You ought to know that. It isn't warm enough for him to wake up yet. How that fellow can sleep as he does, I don't know. I really don't."

3,000 French Troops On Way To Algeria

PARIS (Reuters)—Premier Guy Mollet's government announced Tuesday that 3,000 troops were on their way to Algeria, even as a fresh clash with rebels in the North African territory cost the lives of seven French soldiers.

The troop reinforcements, who will arrive today, are the forerunners of an entire French division being transferred from Atlantic Pact duties in Germany before the end of the month. They will reinforce approximately 200,000 troops already in Algeria.

Tuesday's announcement from the defence ministry underlined the major new campaign planned to crush the 15,000 Algerian rebels who are seeking self-government similar to that already granted to Tunisia and Morocco. Mollet obtained the green light from the French National Assembly early Tuesday to launch the new offensive, coupled with radical land reforms aimed at relieving poverty and unemployment. Communist deputies joined with those of virtually all other parties in four overwhelming votes of confidence for Mollet's bill.

The bill went to the Upper House and is expected to be returned to the Assembly for final approval Friday. On the following day, Robert Lacoste, French resident minister in Algiers, plans to declare a state of emergency.

Million-Dollar Note Not Found

NEW YORK (CP)—The missing million-dollar U.S. treasury note has not yet been found after nine days of searching by more than 100 employees of the Chase Manhattan bank but no one is giving up in the bank's 11 Broad Street headquarters.

"The search is continuing," a bank spokesman said Thursday. "We still have plenty of places to look."

The Series A note, maturing at 1 1/2 per cent, was found missing last Wednesday. It had been turned over to Chase Manhattan by a smaller bank for safekeeping. It had been in a drawer in the bank's vaults far below street level.

"Just human frailty," said one bank official. "A team of two men who have been filing millions and have put it in the wrong drawer. If securities and stuff like that must millions of papers, bonds, notes, will turn up. Anyway, it is insured."

CONTRACT BRIDGE

A HUMILIATING EXPERIENCE Anyone can be defeated by a bad break, but it is a little humiliating (to say nothing about the expense) to be thrown off stride by a fortunate fall of cards. That was South's experience in the following deal.

North dealer. Both sides vulnerable. North-South 60 on score.

The bidding: North East South West 1 Pass 1NT Pass Pass Many sticklers for "science at any cost" would answer North's one-club opening with one heart on the South cards, but the actual one-trump response was considerably more logical at the 60 score. One notrump would be enough for

February Newsprint Production Higher

MONTREAL (CP)—Canadian newsprint production for February amounted to 514,673 tons, an increase of 7.3 per cent or 35,387 tons over February 1955. It was announced Thursday. Daily production averaged 20,221 tons, up 3.5 per cent.

Production rate was 102.1 per cent of 1956 rated capacity compared to 103.3 per cent in January. In February 1955 it was 101.7 per cent of 1956 rated capacity. Canadian shipments for the month were 501,267 tons, up 37,557 tons or 8.1 per cent over the corresponding month last year. U. S. shipments were 113,406 tons, up 80.3 per cent of the total shipment, an increase of 6.4 per cent over February 1955.
