The Governor-General on the North West.

On the evening of Monday last a banquet was given at Winnipeg in honor of the Governor-General. His Excellency there and then delivered a speech in reply to the toast of his health, the full text of which, covering five and a half columns appears in the Toronto Globe of Wednesday morning. The speech was a very fine one. His Excellency dealt with the immense resources of the country now being for the first time opened up for colonization. He touched upon the immense tracts of territory which lie along the whole course of the Saskatchewan River, which with its two gigantic branches opens to steam navigation settlements of rapidly growing importance. He referred in glowing language to the illimitable forests of Keewatin, whose facilities for the lumber trade and the mining interests must soon produce results equal to those attained in any of the great cities of the world. He pointed to Winnipeg with its population now unanimously joining in harmony and rapidly lifting it to the front rank among the commercial centres of the world—as nowhere could a site be found with natural advantages promising so great a future as that which seemed insured to Manitoba and to Winnipeg, the "heart city of the Dominion."

No wonder, he said, that with such natural advantages, agricultural, mineral, lumbering, and the like, croakers should be "very rare animals" in Manitoba, where all that the settler requires is to look out for a locality where there is either good natural drainage, and ninety-nine-hundredths of the country has this, and that he should be provided with a pump to obtain water easily at a depth of a few feet below the surface. Climate and soil unite to invite the settler and conspire to enrich him as well in Manitoba as in the whole of the Saskatchewan district, whose fertility and the excellence of whose land nothing can exceed.

The Globe aptly remarks:—

"That dread of the country as a wild, inhospitable wilderness, with a climate as wild and as inhospitable, will now be written off as groundless, and when men read of a long speech, bristling with hard facts, being published in The Globe of Toronto about one day after its delivery in Winnipeg, they will recognize how vast is the change which has taken place in so inconceivably short a space of time—how rapid has been the march of civilization."

Rumors Concerning the Governor-ship.

The Toronto Globe's Ottawa correspondent is responsible for the following. We republish it for what it is worth. "Improbable as it may seem some persons usually well informed express the opinion that His Excellency will go to England and not return, but will be succeeded in his official position here by a member of the Royal family, probably the Duke of Connaught. Intimations are said to have been given by a person high in authority here pointing to important changes shortly to occur, and of great moment to the Dominion, which intimations lend color to the rumors above-mentioned."

Autocrat John Dunn and His Iron Rule.

The reports announcing the rising among the Zulus will probably receive some explanation from a letter of the Bishop of Natal, dated September 4th, concerning the recent events in Zululand. He says:—"I have heard from good authority that between 300 and 400 Zulu men to say nothing of women and children, were killed by John Dunn's force. 'When we opened fire on them,' said a white man who was present 'they ran away.' This does not look as if John Dunn had only four guns of his own and had four captured at Sitimela."

A Durban despatch says: Most important changes in the administration of affairs have been introduced into Zululand by Sir Evelyn Wood. A uniform hut tax has been introduced, which is to be levied everywhere in the native country. In the territory of each chief an English sub-resident is to be stationed, who will exercise supervision over affairs. No grog is to be sold in the native territory—a provision similar to that which once prevailed in Hudson's Bay territory. Its working there has been beneficial in preventing the demoralization and extinction of the tribes. The chiefs have been recommended to establish industrial schools. They have refused to do so. The brothers of King Cetewayo have been ordered to move at once into John Dunn's territory.

Dr. Wakeham, in command of "La Canadienne," Telegraphs to the marine department that some eighty or one hundred families of fishermen on Anticosti and the north shore are starving.

Three weeks since there were 84,809 paupers in London, 47,575 of whom were indoor and 37,294 outdoor. This shows an increase of 1,891, 4,639 and 7,239 over the corresponding period in 1880, 1879 and 1878 respectively.

Mr. Tennyson is understood to be at work upon another drama.

Daring Escape from the Penitentiary.

The Sackville "Post" gives the following particulars of the escape of two prisoners from the Dorchester penitentiary: "Wednesday afternoon a gang of convicts were working in a potato field back of the prison near the woods. Suddenly two of the convicts bolted for the bush. The guard sent several rounds after them without effect, and they gained the cover. One of them was captured at midnight by the guards on the Fairfield road. The other one a man named Sibens, is still at large. He was in for three years for sheep stealing. He belongs to Kentville, N. S. A reward of $50 is offered for his return. His description is as follows:—5 feet 8 inches high, 19 years of age, fresh complexioned, slightly tawny, smoothfaced, hair light brown."

NEWS NOTES.

The Mormon missionaries have recently gained three hundred converts in Schles-Holstein.

The headquarters of the Nihilists has been discovered at St. Petersburg, and sixty arrests made.

Mr. Julian Hawthorn is to write the principal tale for the Christmas number of the St. James' Magazine.

Eighteen autograph letters of George Washington were lately sold in London for a sum nearly equal to $2,000.

Westcott and Hart's new Greek Text of the New Testament is one of the most important contributions of the country to Biblical literature.

Fords, Howard & Hulbert announce a "Shakespeare for the Young Folk," edited by Prof. R. R. Raymond, the well-known instructor of elocution.

It is said that $900,000 was paid for the Evening Post at the recent sale of it, proving again that a good newspaper property is very good property indeed.

The ex-Empress Eugenie has been traveling in Germany incognito, but retains enough of her former magnificence to keep a retinue of ten persons wherever she goes.

The "Old and New Versions Compared," is a copy of both Kings James' version of 1611 and the Westminster version of 1881. It bears the imprint of James Pott, New York.

The Christian Knowledge Society, one of the great religious publishing houses of England, made a profit last year in its book-selling department of upwards of thirty thousand dollars.

Dr. W. H. Russell's visit to America with the Duke of Sutherland and others has given him abundant material for his "Hesperothen Notes from the Western World," on which he is busily engaged.

The growth of Irish agrarian crime during 1880 is made very plain by the recently published judicial statistics. The indictable offences which can only be tried by a jury show an increase of 1,480, or 43 per cent over 1879, lawless as that year was.

The new tenant for Lord Beaconsfield's historic mansion at Highbury is not Madame Elise, the famous Regent street modiste, as was at first announced, but Sir Samuel Wilson, an Australian millionaire. The new knight, who has thus stepped across the threshold of a house which the great English Conservative leader and premier loved so well, had a wonderful run of luck. Thirty-four years ago he was a clerk at £75 a year, and an Irish clerk to boot. He emigrated, joined the gold rush, bought sheep with his money, bought land with the sheep, and bought houses with the land. The net result to-day is the ownership—till Lord Beaconsfield's heir comes of age—of one of the most interesting spots of English soil, a knighthood, and a fortune of about $25,000,000.

The royal family at the present moment are indulging in quite a gay round of pleasure, almost to gay in fact, for the Princess Beatrice. We hear from a friend who lately saw her in the north, is looking as pallid as a winter rose. The Queen, Prince and Princess of Wales, and Prince Leopold have all been paying Mar Lodge a visit, and Earl Fife has entertained the sovereign at "High Tea," a meal which has almost gone out of fashion. The Prince and Princess Christian, too, have been staying in the northern half of the realm. Lord Wimborne being their host at that most unpropitiously named place—Anchushlach. Following in their steps will come the Duke of Edinburgh, whose very Scotch title, however, one seldom associates with the land of ostmel cakes, tartans, and Glenlivet whiskey. The Duke of Cambridge has been to Kinross castle, Lord Dupplin's seat, and almost every member of the various parties mentioned have been engaged in deer stalking.

Archibald Forbes, the great English special war correspondent, has again just left us to spend the next two years lecturing in the Southern States and Canada. He left England in the City of Montreal, and intends to give you, I believe, about twelve months of his time. After doing Canada and that part of the United States which he left untouched at his last visit, Forbes intends to sail to Australia. This will conclude, I believe, the tour, and it should, I fancy, make Mr. Forbes' fortune tot up to about $250,000, not at all a trifling sum for a journalist. One of the attractions of next year's Academy will be a portrait of the "War Special" from Hubert Herkomer's studio. Herkomer is one of our most forcible men, and has copied his gallant subject in a peculiarly vigorous style. With all his success Forbes has retained a peculiarly vivid recollection of acquaintances formed when he was still an unknown man. One such applied to him, the other day, for a loan of $100. Forbes sent back a kindly letter and $125. I know the story is true, for I saw both the letter and the cheque.
