DROWNING ACCIDENT AT MONTAGUE AVERTED BY QUICK, HEROIC ACTION

A near drowning fatality was averted by the quick action of young Billy MacLure of Montague last evening when he rescued young Boyd Coffin as the little boy was sinking in deep water. The boy, together with several play-mates was swimming at the new road bridge, when he decided to swim across an intervening space; however, he was unable to complete the distance, and becoming panicky, began to go under.

The boy was first noticed in difficulty by Elaine Poole who went to his assistance, but she was unable to help as he became frantic and almost pulled the little girl under the water with him. She called for assistance and young Billy, about 14 years old who was standing on the bridge fully clothed, leaped into the water and dragged the boy to safety. He was taken to his home where, except for a fright, he is suffering no ill effects from his unfortunate mishap.
