

Sight After Sixty Years.

SURGERY GIVES IT TO A WOMAN BORN BLIND. An old colored woman was sewing by the light of an oil lamp in the front room of a small house on Centre street near Ely, Germantown Pa., on the evening of the 2nd inst. There was something decidedly wonderful in this fact, common place as it might at first appear. The woman, Mrs. Harriet Holmes, who is 60 years old, was blind from her birth, until a few weeks ago. Mrs. Holmes was born near Cambridge on the "East'n Sho'" of Maryland, and came to Philadelphia about three years ago, to live with some relatives in Germantown. She was several times taken to the Germantown Hospital on Penn street, and became known in that institution as "Blind Aunt Harriet."

Dr. L. W. Fox, one of the surgeons at the hospital, was attracted by the peculiarity in the formation of her eyes and made an examination, which convinced him that her sight might be restored. The old woman's consent to an operation was not obtained without difficulty, as she said that she was "dreadfully afraid of dem cutten doctors."

Dr. Fox was delighted at the success of the operations, which consisted in the removal of a cataract from the left eye by what is known as "Grabie's method" and awaited with great interest the arrival of the time when his subject could be taken into the light. At last she was removed to one of the wards of the hospital which looked upon the street, and the bandage was removed.

The patient started violently and cried out, as if with fear, and for a moment was quite nervous from the effects of the shock. For the first time in her life she looked upon the earth. The first thing she noticed was a little flock of sparrows. In relating her experience to a reporter she said she thought they were teacups, although, strange to say, a few moments afterward she readily distinguished a wren which was shown her. It is supposed that this recognition was owing to the fact she heard it ticking and at once associated the two together.

"It seemed kinder queer," she said to the reporter, "but I knowed things putty quick." It appears that she was soon able to distinguish those objects which she had been accustomed to handle, such as a chair, a door or a table. She said that everything seemed pretty, and although at first all objects appeared to her bright and shining like gold, she soon became accustomed to colors and can now distinguish them very well.

For a long time distant objects appeared so near that she thought she could touch them. She begins to distinguish distances, if not too great. Owing to her first impression of distance, she was for some time afraid to walk with her eyes open, the ground or floor appearing a "far way off," in strange contrast of her impression of distant objects. The popular impression that a person born blind who is restored to sight, imagines that men and women are walking on their heads, and trees look like elephants, was not verified in her case, although she now even makes mistakes quite as ludicrous as in the case of the mistake of the birds for tea cups.

The blaze from a lamp excited the most lively surprise in her mind. She had no idea what it was, and when it was brought near her wanted to pick it up. When night approached upon the day when she first used her eyes she was in a fright, fearing that she was losing the sight which she had so wonderfully found after sixty years of darkness. Naturally she thinks that Dr. Fox is the greatest man who ever lived, and with the superstition of her race, cannot be convinced that he does not possess superhuman power.

"The Carpenter heirs" are the people this time. They are alleged to be entitled to property in England worth $200,000,000, and they are alleged to have only 108 in number, which would give them $2,000,000 apiece, nearly. This is not funny, for fifty-five or more families have estates of the same sort—in your eye, you know. It is said, because there are poor men and women who are fooled by those infernal frauds of "English estates" and of "money in the Bank of England." They spend money and write letters and build air-castles, and other men receive their money and spend it and live in the air-castles and laugh at their dupes, as they can afford to—if they forget that he who laughs last laughs best. If one-tenth of the alleged estates to which honest, but misguided people among us think themselves entitled were to be paid over, the Bank of England would be as effectually ruined as if dynamite had been used. Brethren and sisters, take no stock in these yarns. They mean only trouble for you, and they put money nowhere but in the pockets of men to whom swindling is a pleasure as well a profession.—Boston Herald.
