

THE WOMAN CHIEF.

Concluded.

I did not glance at it, but put it in my pocket, and in the depot asked the operator the charge of sending it. He opened the paper, and after looking at it a moment, said:

'What kind of gibberish do you call this, any way?'

I took the paper; it read:

'B-4-X-Sure pop-come.'

'S. A.'

It was directed to a person at K—, a place 50 miles beyond.

'I don't know,' said I, 'but send it.' 'Did you send the telegram?' asked the woman, when I again saw her.

'I did,' I answered.

At K— two very rough and suspicious looking men came aboard, and after scanning every one on the train, they seated themselves behind the woman and engaged in conversation with her. At the same place I received a message from Janesville signed by the agent, which read:

'The bill I changed for you is a counterfeit.'

Calling Abe into the smoking car I told him my suspicions.

'Abe,' said I, 'read that,' giving him one of the bills which I had put in my pocket.

'By the —,' he exclaimed, 'It's that she-devil!'

'I think so myself,' I answered.

'Now then, Abe, we've got to capture her and the men.'

'Five hundred apiece,' said he, amusingly.

I prepared the following dispatch which I sent at the next station:

'Pinkerton's Detective Agency, Chicago, Ill. Have you a description of the woman, chief of the gang of counterfeiters for whom $1,000 reward is offered? If so send it at once to L—R—, conductor No. 4— RR., at B—.'

The message traversed the small wire with lightning speed, and back the answer came which I received at B—.

'Rather large, fiery nature, gray hair, and generally dresses in black.'

Beyond a doubt it was the woman on board. The two men were probably her accomplices.

She had some of the 'queer' in her possession, for she had passed a bogus fifty on me. Conviction would be insured without a doubt. Ellsbank was less than sixty miles distant. She and her accomplices would leave the train at that point, and they must be secured before arriving there.

I telegraphed to D—, twenty miles this side of Ellsbank, for two officers to get on the train, and to be prepared to deal with desperate characters. I met them on the depot platform and directed them where to station themselves. They were dressed in plain clothes.

'We undoubtedly shall have a severe tussle if we attack them all together,' said one of the officers; 'if we can manage to separate them it will be easy enough.'

'I'll manage that,' said Abe. Approaching the trio he said: 'Which one of you gentlemen got on at C—?'

'Why?' asked one of the men.

'Because there's a package which was put into the baggage car for one of you at C—; if you want it you'd better go ahead and get it.'

'I'll go and see what it is,' said one of the men to his companion, and moved toward the baggage car.

'Now is our time,' said Abe, 'one of you follow him into the car and secure him.'

The man opened the door and entered the car, closely followed by Abe and one of the officers.

'Where's the box?' asked the fellow.

'Never mind!' exclaimed the officer, throwing himself upon the man, and assisted by Abe he was speedily secured.

'Now for the other one,' said Abe, and going back into the coach he told the other man that his partner wanted him. Without a suspicion of anything wrong he fell into the trap and was secured as nicely as we could wish. The worst was yet to be.

'If that old woman doesn't make us smart I'm a sinner,' said Abe.

One of the officers going into the car took the seat made vacant by the men, and when the other officer came down the aisle, at a preconcerted signal threw his arms around her. The other one put the bracelets on her and she was fast.

I handed my prisoner over to the Chief of Police of Ellsbank. They proved to be what I supposed they were, members of a gang of counterfeiters, of whom the woman was chief. One of the men turned State's evidence, and the information he gave led to the capture of the entire gang, who might even to this day, have been practicing their nefarious art had it not been for the woman's greediness of gold, which led to her to make the fuss she did when I attempted to collect her fare, and which caused me to suspect her when she so suddenly paid. I received the reward and divided it with honest, though illiterate Abe. The mortgage was paid, and I had enough to purchase for my dear little wife what she most desired—a piano.

HALIFAX, N. S.

SEMINARY FOR YOUNG LADIES.

VISITOR:

The Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia

PRINCIPAL:

The Rev. John Padfield.

THIS SCHOOL offers, at very moderate cost, the advantages of a comfortable and pleasant home together with a thorough and refined education.

The course of instruction is the same as that of the best schools in England and is founded upon the University Examinations for Women. Eight young ladies from this School passed the Local Examination of the University of King's College in June last. This is the only School in Canada that has passed pupils at a University Examination.

The number of pupils is limited, rendering the School select, and while it possesses all the educational advantages of a large public school, each pupil is enabled to receive that individual care and oversight which is so important, and which cannot be given in a large establishment.

Mr. and Mrs. Padfield are assisted by a staff of four resident governesses, besides visiting masters.

Parisienne French is taught conversationally. There are two resident French Governesses.

References given to parents of pupils. For further particulars address the Principal.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy CURES CATARRH.

Hear what a Reverend Gentleman says of the Constitutional Remedy.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., Brockville, Ont.—DEAR SIR—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long, I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your agent came to Walkertown in August, 1876, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head. A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist Minister. Port Elgin, Ont., Aug. 24, 1878.
