Can. Fishing Industry Hails Quality Inspection Service

OTTAWA — The Canadian fishing industry yesterday described as a "significant milestone" the federal government's newly announced intention of setting up a new quality inspection service to benefit the consumer.

The new inspection service, whereby government quality designations will be used for the first time on frozen and fresh fish, respectively, "is a most significant milestone in the history of this industry," said Mr. H.D. Pyke, of Lunenburg, president of the Fisheries Council of Canada.

Mr. Pyke was addressing the special National Fish Week Buffet Luncheon at the Chateau Laurier here. Announcement of the new inspection service had just been made by the guest speaker, Hon. J. Angus MacLean, Federal Minister of Fisheries. It will go into effect January 1, 1959.

OUTLINES SYSTEM

Mr. MacLean, outlining the new system to some 20 directors of the Fisheries Council and their guests from government and allied industries, said:

"Before department inspection will be given the fishery product, the processing plant, which handles the product, itself must meet specific requirements as they pertain to construction, sanitation, operation and equipment. Once the plant has been approved by the department under established standards, any of its fish products including round and dressed fish, fillets, steaks, fish sticks and similar portions will be eligible for inspection."

"If a frozen fish produce complies with clearly defined specifications in respect of quality, the packer may identify his product with the designation 'Canada Inspected' within a line drawing of a maple leaf marked on the wrappers, labels, containers or, where practicable, on the whole fish."

"Inspected fish which is to be marketed in the fresh state as whole fish or filets may be identified by having the words 'Processed under Government Supervision' within a line drawing of a maple leaf marked on the wrappers, labels or containers."

Retail stores selling fish products bearing either of those two designations, Mr. MacLean said, may publicize the fact through display advertising and other promotional aids.

National Fish Week runs from Sept. 22 to 28. The directors of the Fisheries Council are in Ottawa both to launch the special promotional period and to attend industry meetings.

much good work could be accomplished here by this group, which is dedicated to the rehabilitation of persons who have served time in penitentiary.

Brief reports on the operation of the Dairy Bar at Victoria Park were given by Abe Zakem and Al Rogers. They announced that, following a successful season, the Bar was now closed until next Spring.

An interesting report was also given by Bill Crockett, chairman of a special committee. The meeting decided to accept several of the recommendations contained in this report.

Past president Earl MacLeod presided, with Lawson Jenkins as secretary, and Lloyd MacNevin as Co-chairman. The meeting was held at the Queen Hotel.
