Textile Companies Offer Market For Canadian Artist

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

The picture of a child, preferably a baby, or pictures of animals, are the most effective illustrations in advertisements, says H. M. Kennedy, president of the Life Insurance Advertisers Association.

"Of all the advertisements we have tested," he says, "the 20 most popular all included babies or relatively young children."

In general, he advises, life insurance advertising should be tailored to the idea that people are intrested in what life insurance will do for them, rather than in life insurance as such.

People, he adds, are primarily interested in knowing how live insurance will enable them to leave a home free and clear to their families, and how it will send a son to college, and so on.

Today, says Mr. Kennedy, people are more aware of advertising than ever before, and the voice of life insurance should be heard with increasing volume and clarity.

Mr. Kennedy outlined his views to the recent meeting in Montebello, Que., of the Canadian Life Insurance Officers Association.

Textile companies offer a market for Canadian artists, says Harold Edge, chief designer for Dominion Textile Company.

Recently the company paid $200 to Ron Davies, Montreal art student, for some designs which he showed at the annual exhibition of the School of Art and Design of the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts.

The designs—called "textures" by the Textile people—will be used as background patterns for prints in dress goods, draperies, shirtings and so on.

Mr. Edge says:

"There are many fine painters and designers in Canada, particularly among the young people, but the technical demands of designs for printing textile materials make it difficult for their work to be successfully adapated. But we keep looking."

Mr. Davies said he did his work primarily as exercises in design. He studies art at night and works with his father's landscaping company by day.

The Hogarth Mine of Steep Rock Iron Mines Ltd. had the largest production in 1956 of any iron mine—Canadian or American—in the Lake Superior region, according to a report by the Lake Superior Iron Ore Association.

The mine produced 3,091,828 tons. Next largest producer was the Mather Mine of the Marquette ange in Michigan, with 2,339,678 tons.

Ford Motor Company of Canada says it put more than $200,000,000 into the Canadian economy last year, through the combination of its payrolls, tax payments, and $136,000,000 worth of materials, parts and services bought from more than 2500 large and small Canadian firms.

Thirty-one Canadian firms sold Ford anywhere from $1,000,000 to $10,000,000 worth of their products, and 161 companies topped the $100,000 mark.

Chrysler Corporation of Canada, in a release on automobile care, says that leaving a car outdoors in all weather conditions seriously threatens the life span of the car's finish.

Tests by paint manufacturers, it is stated, show that the most harmful condition to automobile finish is the heavy dew that falls on a car during the night. Among other pieces of advice, the release says:

Don't use harsh detergents or cleaning materials on the finish. This includes many household detergents commonly used for this purpose. And don't use detergents or waxes of any kind until the paint has had an opportunity to "cure."
