Farm and Garden Notes.

FEEDING NEWLY CALVED COWS.—It is not a good plan to feed too largely a day or two before calving. This would have a tendency to give her the scours and weaken her. What is wanted is strength and a vigorous tone to the whole system. Moderate feeding for a time beforehand with extra food, being kept from exposure and excitement, will prepare a cow to be r her calf without sickness or loss. Afterward the same food and treatment should follow, increasing the same extra feeding after a few days to provide for the drain upon her to make milk. No cold water should be given to her for several days, and it would be well to omit the roots for the same length of time, lest they might cause a chill. If a cow has been used to eating oilmeal it will be proper to increase the amount to two quarts before calving. I do not think it is any advantage to mix meal or bran with water in the form of "slop," but it would be a benefit to mix some coarse material with it to insure better mastication and digestion. This is one of the advantages of roots. Hay cut into chaff or fine bits is the next best substitute to mix with meal. This practice is almost unknown in animal feeding in America, but if it should be more generally adopted it would result in saving large quantities of meal now fed alone, and swallowed without the benefit of mastication and mixing with the saliva, and carried directly to the third or fou th stomach, when only a portion is digested and absorbed, the remainder passed on and voided without any benefit other than filling the stomachs and bowels.—F. D. Curtis, in Country Gentleman.

EWES AND LAMBS AT THIS SEASON.—Great caution should be taken not to allow ewes to run in the fields till the lambs become strong and able to follow easily. The ewes themselves are the better for being kept in yard or shed till they recover full strength after yeaning. The lambs should be under the eye of the attendant for several weeks, in comfortable quarters, where their wants can be attended to in case their dams did not yield sufficient milk for them. As much care should be taken to feed the ewes to produce a liberal supply of milk for the lambs, as to feed dairy cows to produce a profitable quantity of milk. A ewe often sucks two lambs, and a thirfty lamb will sometimes gain three pounds per week. In this case the ewe must furnish the food for six pounds growth of lambs per week. What a great draft this must be upon her, besides supporting her own wants! She cannot do this without the necessary food. She must eat to support three lives at once. Hay alone will not enable her to do this, any more than hay alone will frunish food for a dairy cow to produce a large quantity of milk. The ewe should be fed, where easily obtained, one-half pound of linseed-oil meal, and one pound of corn, or corn meal, with good hay. This would keep the stomach in healthy condition, and cause a large yield of milk. Plenty of pure water should be within reach of ewes. They drink much more than fattening sheep. Where oil meal is not easily obtained, one quart of oats or one pint of corn will do. If the ewes are fed in this manner till grass gives them full support, the lambs will grow so finely as to delight the flock-master, and he will never regret the expenditure for food. The lambs should be taught early to eat food for themselves. It is easy to teach them to drink cows milk—that is, sweet skim milk—and where cows are kept, this is a profitable disposition of a portion of the skim-milk. It will probably pay as much if fed to lambs that are to be sold early as to any other animals. This period between hay and grass is a most important one to be studied by the sheep owner, and he will come to the conclusion that hay and grain should come up to grass, and there should be no period between them.—National Live-Stock Journal, Chicago.

LEWIS'

SUPERB PHOTOS.

THIRTY YEARS practice on the "human face divine," has given Lewis that wonderful command of the art he is reputed to possess in delineating those who take advantage of his skill. He has also succeeded in securing the services of Mr. Turner, of Notman's, Montreal, where he has been employed for seven years. Now, every one knows that Mr. Notman would NOT keep a MAN in his employ for that time, if he was not a first-class workman. Mr. Turner has also worked for a number of years in England and Scotland. Lewis' Gallery is large and commodious, furnished with all the latest improvements. Lenses, which are entirely free from distortion, works the instantaneous and wet plate process. Sitters can have their choice. Childrens' Pictures, a specialty, made in one second. Copying and enlarging done at moderate prices. Special reduction made to families and groups. All kinds of work done very cheap. Call and see samples. Don't mistake the place—Grafton Street, at the Sign of the Camera.
