

U.S. Change Of Attitude On Israel Wins Favor

Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld reported to the United Nations, in effect, that a man can do so much.

The UN had commissioned its chief officer to find a way to get Israel to remove her troops from the Gaza Strip and the Gulf of Aqaba, in accordance with a UN resolution.

This Israel feared to do, saying that her gulf shipping would then be at the mercy of a billigerent Egypt which could also stage bloody raids from Gaza.

Hammaraskjöld, reporting that his efforts had been "frustrated" advised against sanctions on Israel saying this would only introduce new elements of conflict.

All that brought a change of attitude on the part of the United States—a change that was favored among many non-Arab countries at the UN including Britain and Canada.

State Secretary John Foster Dulles said that if the Israelis would support the principle of freedom of navigation in the Gulf of Aqaba, the U.S. also would back UN action to protect Israel from Egyptian attacks from the Gaza Strip.

But Israel still hung back and Egyptian officials assailed the plan. The attitude appeared to be that more than words are needed to assuage the hatred and dread between Jews and Arabs.

SOVIET MOVE
To complicate matters at the UN even further Russia jumped in with charges that the U.S.S.R. demanded a UN investigation of what it termed the global war preparations of the U.S. But Russia's demand for an immediate debate in the General Assembly on these charges was turned down.

Russia also came through with an invitation to the U.S. Britain and France to take part in an economic development program for the Arab countries, but there were strings attached, such as dismantling of Western bases in the area and scrapping of defence alliances.

"Rather familiar stuff," sniffed a British foreign office spokesman. These Soviet moves came while Dmitri Shepilov was still foreign minister. Friday, a sudden announcement from Moscow revealed that Shepilov had been dismissed, and Andrei Gromyko, regarded as a Stalinist, appointed in his place. It remained to be seen what effect this shift might have on Soviet policy.

MIDAS IN MOUNTAINS
A hard-headed international financier envisioned a gigantic industrial complex in what now is a primeval wilderness far north in British Columbia.

Lands Minister Ray Williston of B.C. announced an initial agreement in the deal, calling for construction of a 400-mile monorail transport system to the B.C.-Yukon border along a valley known as the Rocky Mountain Trench. The eventual cost may be $1,000,000 for the whole development.

Swedish financier Axel Wenner-Gren, one of the world's richest men, is behind the plan which includes a $5,000,000 survey of hydro-electric power, mining, forestry, communications and other factors in the practically uninhabited frontier land.

Other enterprises contemplated are a big pulp mill, sawmills, hydro-electric lakes and streams, townsites, roads, hospitals, schools and technical institutions. The survey will tell the tale.

The 40,000-square-mile area—a mineral-rich place of fairland peaks, lush natural meadows, level lakes and streams.

TOP-LEVEL TALKS
A number of top-level talks are to be held in an effort to take the chill out of international relations among the Western powers.

President Eisenhower meets with Premier Mollet in Washington Feb. 26-27, and the French leader then will go to Ottawa for talks with Prime Minister St. Laurent.

On March 21, Eisenhower and Prime Minister Macmillan of Britain meet in Bermuda for four days of talks, following which St.

Laurent will hold two days of conversations with Macmillan.

WURRA WURRA
Fears were expressed that Western Canada fish are worrying themselves to death.

Dr. Richard B. Miller, chief of the University of Alberta's zoology division, said in a speech that biologists are baffled by unaccountable deaths of fish which were apparently in perfect physical condition.

Perhaps they died of loneliness. They were among thousands newly-planted in streams and lakes.

DEER POACHING
The Ontario legislature saw a flare-up over whether State Secretary Dulles has been poaching deer on his Canadian island retreat near Kingston.

No, no, no, said the U.S. state department in Washington and the American Embassy in Ottawa. Fishes never shoots deer, in or out of season.

Premier Frost of Ontario assured the disturbed legislature that anyone—but anyone—who is caught shooting deer out of season will be prosecuted.

Ross Whitcher, Liberal member for Bruce, had charged that the government permitted Dulles and General Motors executives to shoot deer all year on their private properties.

SPURN REFUGEES
British miners rejected a proposal that they accept Hungarian refugees as "buddies" in the coal pits.

Despite urgings by officials of the national coal board, miners in 15 Yorkshire pits voted against the proposal in pithead balloting, following similar action in a Monmouthshire collier earlier.

CONFIDENCE seems to be returning to the fur industry as the Suez trouble is fading into the background. At the Hudson's Bay Company's Fur Sales auctions in New York, a massed collection of more than 22,000 seal and mink types advanced 10 per cent over December levels. Official company comment stated that the sale was an excellent one, excellent all the way through, very strong competition, house and colors, the auctioneer noted. There are a few of the prices: Lutetia, 97 per cent sold, top males $64, females $33; Cerulean 95 per cent sold, top males $49, females $22.50; Cerulean Stewart and Cerulean Spring types, 91 per cent sold, top 56, females $47, females $23; top 56, females $25; Axurene 100 per cent sold, top males $78, females $36; Jasmine, 100 per cent sold, top males $60, females $28.50; Argentea, 93 per cent sold, top males $33, females $16.25.

One buyer declared "they certainly are not giving anything away in there," as he turned away from the auction not able to purchase as much as he would have liked. Edmonton Fur Auction pace in the bidding. Attendance at the sale was near capacity and the turnover was from 90 to 100 per cent. Reasons given for the high turnover were varied but most of them boiled down to the fact that buyers have a market for what they bought at the sale.

In a recent issue of Women's Wear Daily is a half page ad entitled, Famous Fur Mink, 14,000 raw mutation mink pelts from the American Fur Auctions in New York. Ten years ago Fromin Bros. were producing 50,000 silver foxes. Now we presume they are not producing one-one hundredth of that number, or probably they have come out of it altogether.

At the Edmonton Fur Auction held early this month ermine was 100 per cent sold. A total of 13,000 brought prices ranging from $3.50 to $5.10. An offering of 1,400 marten was 65 per cent sold. Prices ranging as high as $27.50. All of the 1,000 wild mink were sold. MacKenzie River large and extra large brought $32.50 to $43. Smaller ones sold for as low as $9. to $16.50. A total of 72 per cent of the 2,000 Sapphire mink was sold with males bringing $21 to $30 and females $12 to $17.

A chinilla piece said to be made completely from Canadian chinillas, has been produced in Montreal to the design of Seymour. Using about 35 skins it is a shrug cape, 18 inches deep at back, single hook front closing and a little rail collar which can be worn upstanding to frame the face. The skins are a clear bluish grey.

New York buyers dominated the standard mink sale at the Finnish Fur Auctions in Helsinki. A cable report from there states that 90 per cent of the standard mink sold with females moving at a so very lower pace. All told, 80,000 standards were offered.

A total of 51,172 standard mink pelts were 85 per cent sold with prices advancing 5 to 7 1/2 per cent in a two-day sale at New York. The York Auction Company last week. Comparisons are with January levels. The merchandise was not high-class but the goods were wanted by coat and suit interests and that caused the big demand. Observers stated that the cloth and coat market served as a true price stabilizer on poorer merchandise; while fine merchandise was absent European interests were buyers of half-bloods.

A slightly firmer tone in ranch mink, notable in sapphires, silver and standard rancher mink was recorded at the second day of Hudson's Bay Co.'s general auction in Montreal last week. In spite of pre-sale misgivings about general market trends, the latter part of the sale was about $1.50-$2 above January levels. The 24,000-skin offering was 77 per cent sold with New York buyers dominating. Sapphires also held up well, selling 61 per cent, while Ranchers present in the salesroom declared themselves satisfied that their goods, held back at previous sales, were not being cleared at better prices.

In pastels, however, buyers' ideas did not meet with shippers' limits, with the result that action was noted mainly in the few better grade bundles, which sold at unchanged to slightly easier prices. The company reported on the selling as follows: Pastels 40 per cent sold, unchanged to slightly easier; silverblues 58 per cent sold at firm; sapphires 61 per cent sold, firm; and standard rancher 77 per cent sold. Top in pastels (26,537 skins) was $28 for straight males. Rangers were straight males $14.25-$26; females $7.75-$11.75 Stewart males $18.75.

B. Y. P. Give A Fine Entertainment

A jolly group of young people from the East Point Baptist Church presented a most enjoyable programme in the Kingsboro Hall on Feb. 13, 1957.

Rev. D. I. McClare opened the evening's entertainment by leading a series of hymns. This was followed by a duet, nicely sung by Misses Anita Rose and Sandra MacGregor. Their selection was "At the end of a long, lonely day."

Another duet, "The Night Watch" was well rendered by Mrs. Elsie Bruce and Miss Jean MacGregor. Two guitar solos by Miss Betty Robertson were very much enjoyed. She sang, "You're calling me Sweetheart again," and "I'm a Stranger in My Home."

"Then came the male voices with "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," "This World is not my Home," and "Pop, goes the Weasel." These selections were very much enjoyed. D. I. McClare taking the lead, and Messrs. Kenneth MacGregor, Wilbur Jarvis, Harold Hunter, and Robert Rose with the four part harmony.

A quartette of four ladies, Misses Anita Rose, Joan MacGregor, Sandra MacGregor and Mrs. Elsie Bruce, dressed to represent the Deep South, sang "Yellow Rose of Texas," and "You are my Sunshine." The accompanist for the evening was Mrs. Clinton Stewart.

At this time, Mr. Ruseel Garrett was called to the platform to auction the Valentine decorated envelopes which accompanied the envelopes. The purchaser was required to eat the pie with the lady whose name was concealed in the envelope and on the pie. Tea and coffee were served by the Young People.

THE WEEK AT S. D. U.

In surveying the present situation at college after a week of surprises and jubilant activities, we detect a note of serene contentment in the general outlook. This week seemed more or less to conclude the brief period of laxity from all-out study which had crept into the fact that the first set of examinations for this term is about to spring its latent coil will undoubtedly turn many heads toward the book shelves. The onslaught of quizzes begins this Saturday for all classes.

The annual W.U.S.C. Formal, held on Monday February 4th in the College gymnasium, was a splendid success. The elaborate ballroom setting, the elegant and appropriate aspect of the event, Michael Quigley, the W.U.S.C. president on the campus, announced that more couples were accommodated at this year's event than at any previous one. Fine weather, held out very well, and the observance of St. Dunstan's day was a memorable one, marked by an extensive, well-regulated program.

In the annual hockey match between the faculty and the seniors the usual outcome resulted as the faculty better disposed to Divine aid, secured a clear-headed attack of the seniors and emerged as the winners of a close-fought game of goals and "spills."

St. Dunstan's day got underway in a festive manner when a banquet was held at noon. The dining hall was arranged in a most tasteful fashion, and all guests were in attendance. The atmosphere of the banquet lent itself well to the spirit of the Day. The guest speaker was Mr. John Eldon Green, who certainly proved himself a stranger to the college. The lecture, though left many impressions with the appreciative audience and presented clearly some points of special significance to the students, based on their work and achievements while at St. Dunstan's.

After a round of toasts were proposed by senior members of the student body, the president of the Students' Union, George Mullanly, on behalf of the students made an appropriate presentation day. Rev. R.V. MacKenzie, our beloved College Rector, for the last dozen years or more for his transfer last summer to pastoral duties in the diocese. The gift was presented as a token of appreciation of the dedicated spirit which Monsignor MacKenzie brought to his work, and of the exemplary manner of his priestly life, which was always so inspiring to the students.

There was much evidence of true college spirit in the remainder of the day's program. To enhance the significance of St. Dunstan's day and to bring out its real meaning, introductory outlines on the life and works of St. Dunstan were drawn up and distributed among the students; and thus for the first time many of the students were enlightened concerning the hallowedness which his name bears among scholars.

After the dinner everyone joined in with the singing of popular ballads. There appears to be no obstacles whatever in the way of building a larger Glee Club unit on the campus; for it was proven that nothing contributes more to individual enjoyment and collective participation than group singing. As a matter of fact, Father Arsenault, as a sideline to delivering his lecture on St. Dunstan brought along his well-coordinated French Chorists to perform at Notre Dame convent last Wednesday evening, and the vocal group received a magnificent response from the audience with each number. The chorists are being commended for their splendid performance, and their steadily-growing precision with various forms of songs is indicative of their progress.

Music certainly takes no back seat to the other activities on the campus as has been shown recently in the Music Appreciation series which has resumed, and a well-presented opera, "The Mikado," was given by Father Kelly, who also played another facet of the music picture on the campus was also brought into view by the production of the College Band played a program of marches and waltzes as part of the entertainment on St. Dunstan's Day, along with the play, "The Band is under the direction of Mr. William Bradward, whose tireless efforts in bringing the Band along seem to be producing gratifying results, as was evident from the rendering of such numbers as "Military Escort," "Royal Welcome Home," "Indian Boy" and "Norma's Dream."

The College Dramatic Society presented its second play of the year on February 2nd, St. Dunstan's Day. It consisted of a three-act drama under the capable surveillance of the director, Rev. Adrian Arsenault. The play approached very closely the old type of morality play, but it attempted for the most part to express a parable. It depicted the Biblical man of Faith. Despite the demands of the scenes, the play was well staged and enjoyed by many. The cast consisted of the following members: Bill MacNeil, Mary Elaine Trainor, Bill O'Neil, Roland Sullivan, Thomas Rice, Nancy Gillis, Jeanette Peters, Sheila Mulloy, Mike Quigley and Allison Gallant.

The basketball situation at St. Dunstan's has thus far this season been bright, and the outlook for the future appears quite promising indeed. The team is having its annual practice this Tuesday to raise funds for its expenses; the dance is being sponsored by the Amateur Athletic Association on the campus and we hope to see everyone possible there. Music will be by the Downtowners, and will be from 8:30 to 11:30. The Saints' senior team, (all of whom are of junior age) are awaiting final arrangements to be made concerning the playoffs for the Maritime Junior Championship against Moncton. The winner will, of course, advance into the Semi-Final round of the Canadian Junior tournament against a team from Central Canada.
