

Bakes Prize-Winning Bread For St. Stephen Fair

Feeding husky appetites on the farm means plenty of baking for Mrs. Hazen Russell, of Moors Mills, N.B. And at the St. Stephen Fair, Mrs. Russell's bread and rolls are plentifully decorated with prize-winning tags. Of course she knows a few things about ingredients! "I'm extra careful about my yeast," says Mrs. Russell.

"For going on twenty years I've been using Fleischmann's Yeast. I know I can depend on it—it's always good and lively."

It's true! Fleischmann's Yeast is made extra active to rise extra fast—to give you grand results every time. No wonder the majority of prize-winning cooks in the Maritimes prefer Fleischmann's!

OTTAWA, — The Liberals thought they had a sure fire winner lined up for the Winnipeg South Centre by-election this month, a candidate who would hold Ralph Maybank's old seat in the party column against the most determined assault the CCF could mount.

But when they asked him to run, he turned them down flat. The reason was simple: dollars and cents. He just couldn't afford to leave his lucrative drug store six months of the year for an MP's salary of $6,000.

A crusader might have; a man who was willing to make personal sacrifices because of faith in himself, his ideas and ideals, and his ability to perform useful service for the country as a Member of Parliament. There are such in the Commons.

However, more MP's enter public life because of personal ambition. But no matter why they are MP's, almost without exception they find they lose money at it.

Take the case of one MP, a young lawyer from an Eastern province. At home he has an apartment costing $80 a month. This session he wanted his wife and family with him in Ottawa, so he rented a house at $110 a month, intending to sub-let his apartment. But his landlord wouldn't let him, so he is paying a total rent of $190 a month. His other expenses are heavy. He's expected to contribute to every financial appeal in his home town — at least $10 a time.

His telephone bill runs about $30 a month, mainly because he cannot afford, politically speaking, to refuse to accept collect calls from his constituents. Another $20 a month goes for telegraph tolls. He has to entertain lunches at $1 each in the Parliamentary restaurant, plus liquid refreshments for which he pays the full Ontario government tariff. Occasionally he and his wife entertain in their home.

Political fence mending necessitates fairly frequent trips home during the session, and to Ottawa during the Parliamentary recess. His law practice suffers during his absence, and even when he's home attending to it, any of his constituents expect to get his professional services for nothing, just because he's in politics. And, of course, he's always fair game for a touch.

Even more hard up is the MP whose $6,000 is his only income—like one I know, one of the ablest and most conscientious members of Parliament, who makes ends meet only with the greatest difficulty. He lives frugally in Ottawa, rooming and boarding in a private home, riding the street cars to Parliament Hill, eating his lunches in the low-cost cafeteria, rarely visiting his home in the West despite the fact that he has a railway pass, because he cannot afford railway berths and meals. He has to live this way, because he cannot afford railway berths and meals. He has to live this way, because most of his money goes home to support his wife and two school-age children.

He is one of those who never sees his $2,000 expense cheque. This amount goes to each private member at the end of the year, but long before then he has borrowed $2,000 from the bank, and assigned his cheque to the bank to cover the loan.

Multiply these cases by several score, and you have one reason why Prime Minister St. Laurent is considering proroguing Parliament at the end of this month and opening a new session in the fall. A new session this year will bring each MP an additional $4,000 seasonal indemnity, making a gross of $10,000 for 1951.

What the members will net, after taxes and the expense of coming back to Ottawa in the fall, won't do much more than get some of them out of debt.

Religion and Life

By Very Rev. George C. Pidgeon, D.D., L.L.D., First Moderator of the United Church of Canada (Copyright)

Were we too doctrinal last week in presenting Christ as the Word of God through whom the worlds were made and who became flesh and dwelt among us? Our practical point was that Christ had brought into human nature divine elements that were not there before, and here is one example of their effect on human life.

Two or three years ago the Christian world was thrilled with the story of Pastor Son Yong Won of Korea. He was a minister of the Episcopal Church at Yosu and Sun Chong in South Korea. He had two sons who were at the head of the Christian movement in their schools. They were captured by a band of Communist youth, crazed with their fanaticism, and just because they were Christian leaders, both captives were shot by the leader of the band. Observers remarked that the boys died with a smile on their faces.

Soon the authorities got the situation in hand and the young murderer was arrested and sentenced to death. But the father of the young martyrs begged for his life. He said: "No amount of punishment will bring back my two sons; so what is to be gained? Better let us take responsibility for the boy and make a Christian of him so that he can do the work in the world that my boys have left undone."

The military authorities granted his request and released the young murderer on parole, putting him into Pastor Son's keeping. The impression made on the community by the contrast between the Christian spirit and the Communist spirit was deep and strong, especially so on the family of the youth reprieved.

The sequel of this incident is given in a letter from a Methodist missionary writing from Pusan: "When the Communists came last summer they provoked and tormented him (Pastor Son) in every possible way. When he refused to give up his religion three Communists paid him a visit one evening and argued and quizzed for several hours. Finally they pumped a volley of bullets into his body and left. Thus do Communists treat those who turn the other cheek."

English Episcopacy has produced many noble characters and martyrs for the faith, but here is one of the stature of Ridley and Latimer, rock-like in his loyalty to Christ and utterly possessed with Christ's spirit of forgiving love. This is the type of manhood by Christ's presence in human flesh. There is no appeal equal in effectiveness to a concrete example like this, and the story of Pastor Son and his witness to Christ given in life and death must be broadcast all over Korea and China. Men must see afresh in the stand of this hero-saint what Christ's love can make of our weak human nature—and the difference between the products of His grave and those of the only other system claiming world dominion. But how gloriously true are the words of St. John when illustrated by such devotion: "Of Christ's fullness have we all received and grace upon grace."

Let us not lose sight of the fact that the above is only one example out of many. The letter that brought this news concludes: "Over 400 Pastors and Priests have been deliberately liquidated, of whom 185 are Protestant." The plain fact is that we but faintly realize the resources brought into our nature by Christ's coming in the flesh. These martyrs were the spiritual leaders of our own spiritual children in Korea, who answered the call, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Look again at the way St. John states this truth: Christ, the Word of God, "came to His own home and His own people received Him not. But to all who received Him, who believed in His name, He gave power to become children of God, who were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

This new life links us with its Author whose love is matched by His power, and who is committed to the conquest of the world by love—and suffering love at that! Christ's policy and program for the winning of the world is now challenged on a world scale and the challenge must be accepted. The Church of Christ must rise to unprecedented efforts to make Him known in the glory of His grace and in the fullness of His power to change men into the image of God. It has taken an attack of world dimensions to awaken us to the need, and the followers of the Crucified must not allow the martyrs who are "following in His train" to die in vain. To us from falling hands they throw the torch; be ours to hold it high.

But life is not all tragic, and the spirit which would conquer abroad must first reign at home. To have Christ living out His life through us in the family, the social circle and the busy mart is an idea far from realization in Canada; the call is to crown Him here Lord of all. The resources which Christ has put at the command of her faith, the church must draw out for His Victory here and now.

VETERINARY SERVICE POLICY

The Prince Edward Island Department of Agriculture announces the inauguration of veterinary service units centered at O'Leary, Summerside, Charlottetown and Montague. These units will service all parts of the Province. The veterinary surgeons practicing in these areas are fully qualified graduates of the Ontario Veterinary College. They are specialists in the prevention and treatment of livestock diseases. These units will operate on a scale of fees which will not prevent anyone from using this service. There will be no charge made for travelling expenses. This will mean that no matter where you live the service charge will be the same. Farmers are invited to make use of this service in dealing with their livestock problems.
