THE disappearance of Edward Lyons is, up to the present, causing unusual excitement in Souris. Despite the most diligent search, nothing further than his hat, one mitten and saddle has yet been discovered. It is the general impression that on his way home he drove into the channel of the river and was drowned. Although the river has been thoroughly dragged, no further traces than the above can be found.

THE mate of the brigantine Siena, Hector McDonald, was drowned in a very mysterious manner on the night of the 22nd ult.—the night after that vessel left Trinidad. From the log book and crew we learn that on the night of the 22nd ult. McDonald, while on watch, fell asleep on the cabin. Three persons were on deck at the time: the deceased, the man at the wheel and another on the lookout. The sea was calm and the night very bright, it being moonlight. At 11.15 those on deck saw the deceased quietly resting on the cabin. Ten minutes later search was made for him, but he was nowhere to be found. The vessel was immediately put about and the direction which they came retraced, but he was nowhere visible. The man at the wheel says he saw nothing of him after 11.15, when he was lying asleep on the cabin. It is believed that during his sleep he rose and walked over the rail; but how this could occur without the man at the wheel seeing something of it, is a mystery. Mr. McDonald belongs to Pinette. He was a most exemplary young man.

FOUR INDIANS got enough rum somewhere on Tuesday last to "make glad come," and while under its influence joined in a combat on the road between Montague Bridge and Cardigan. The Advertiser says: "Enraged with drink, and true to their savage attributes, they pounced upon one of their number—Louis, the son of Sally—and almost butchered him. Our informant, who saw him lying on the roadside, bleeding and exhausted, states that his arm was almost stripped of flesh, his throat partially cut, one of his ears almost severed from his head, and his body frightfully lacerated. There is a law on our Statute Book forbidding the sale of intoxicating liquors to Indians, and imposing a very heavy penalty. But it would seem that the existing law has no terrors for any individual who sells these itinerant creatures that which, in any case, is little better than poison, but in theirs a certain means of destruction. It is high time this outlawry was put a stop to, and it rests with the proper authorities to investigate this matter, and bring the offenders to justice."

NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.

Secretary Sherman has addressed to Secretary Evarts an official communication setting forth the injustice of the Canadian authorities in debarring American seamen from receiving reward, which is given to captains and crews of vessels in distress and towing them to places of safety. This position of Canadian authorities is based on rights, which, it is claimed, belong to the seamen of each nation in the waters of their own country. It is therefore insisted that rewards of such service in Canadian waters belong exclusively to Canadian seamen. As this distinction is not observed in American waters our seamen are naturally indignant that they should be refused the reward of their bravery, on the ground that they are not Canadian seamen. The Secretary points out the custom that has always prevailed in this respect, and submits the matter to the Department of the State to be brought to the attention of the Dominion Government through the proper diplomatic channels.

The Manchester Guardian's Vienna dispatch says it is believed that the adoption in the lower House of the Reichsrath yesterday of an address in reply to the speech from the throne will create the assent of the Austrian members of the delegation to an additional credit for accomplishing the occupation of Bosnia, but at the same time commits them to record a vote of want of confidence in Count Andrassy's foreign policy.

The Standard's Paris correspondent telegraphs:—"I can state positively that the Powers are negotiating for a Conference respecting the revision of the treaty of Berlin, the idea originating in Berlin or Vienna."

Hon. Peter Mitchell.

(From the Quebec Chronicle.)

When the new Parliament of the Dominion is called together and the chosen of the people meet to deliberate for their country's good, there is one familiar face which will be sadly missed from the floor of the House of Commons, one gifted mind and kindly heart, whose absence from the councils of the nation will create a vain regret alike by Treasury and Opposition benches. We refer to the Hon. Peter Mitchell, whose public services during the long years since Confederation placed him in the foremost ranks of Canada's ablest and most devoted sons, and entitle him to the thanks of an intelligent and appreciative people. A man of clear head, sterling ability, and large business and political experience; independent in his actions, and fearless in the expression of his views; the soul of good nature, yet keen as a razor in debate, though too broad minded to descend to hair-splitting, Mr. Mitchell was exactly the last man whom the country could afford to spare at this trying juncture from active participation in the consideration of its situation and the legislative measures to be adopted for its improvement. In his dual capacity of representative of the people and member of the Government, he was the beau-ideal of a faithful servant of the public and a model of efficient and popular administration of one of the most arduous and important of Canadian State departments. All who recall his able management of our Marine and Fisheries service must admit the justice of these remarks and feel that, in paying this tribute to the honorable gentleman, we are doing no more than the duty which every impartial journalist owes to the talents and merits of the public men of his country, regardless of party.
