A Clear Statement of Facts. FREEHOLD FARM

Our competitors in the WALL PAPER trade seem to be anxious to advise the public as to what kind of Rolls to buy, whether 8 yard, 12 yard or 16 yard. For the convenience of customers we keep all kinds, and allow you to judge which is the most preferable. There is one statement we cannot but challenge. They say that they sell 16 yard Rolls at the same price competitors ask for 8 yards. Do they? We quote 8 yd. Paper from 3 cents per roll up, not Remnants but staple stock; 16 yard Rolls from 6 cents up. We are clearing our 12 yard ENGLISH WASHABLE at 15 and 17 cents per roll. These papers are worth 45 cents per roll. We give no bluff but genuine bargains.

Our first shipment of New American Paper, direct from the factories (in 16 yard Rolls), has just come in, and you will at once see they are the finest ever shown in Ch'town. BAZAAR COMPANY, Papermen

THE FIRST IN ORDER. Indignation Meeting at 40 FARMERS SPEAK OUT STRONGLY.

The farmers of the above settlement met at their schoolhouse, Wednesday, on the 28th ult., to give their opinion on Mr. Peters' taxation speech. The meeting was called to order by appointing Mr. William D. Compton to the chair and the undersigned Secretary.

Mr. R. Money was the first speaker. He reported that the policy outlined, and showed in full the details of the old tax, which he maintained was directed against the then absentee proprietors. He was not, he said, prompted by party feeling in the matter; it was full of the farmers to throw party to the winds and give the aristocrats to understand that though born to toll, they had enough brains to assert their rights. Would Mr. Peters be allowed, he asked, to suggest his game of bluff. By getting up a "tuppenny" quarrel between the farmers he hoped to take their eye off the all-important point. He attributes the downfall of Davies to the fact that he was not a good speaker, and paid more tax than the one who had a poor place. He says: "Brown had a farm on one side the road and was a poor man, and was prosperous. Smith had one on the other side of the road and became poor and miserable. He asked, then, would it be fair, that Brown pay more than Smith? Now, Mr. Chairman, Smith gave his money to a reckless whisky dealer, it is not for me to meet the bill, and should Mrs. Smith go steal for the purpose? God knows her times are tight enough without that. Before dropping this matter, let us make another comparison. This same Brown started in life with $5000 and became what we find him. His brother started also with $5000, but being of a more speaking disposition, concluded to put his out in little mortgages, which would bring a surer crop in his seasons. Would it be fair for Brown to pay in full for the maintenance of law and order to keep his brother in pecuniary season of his gains. Mr. Davies deserves credit for facing the music as far as he led, but he stopped short where he should have put in his best step. He incurred the displeasure of the mortgagee, and concluded by taxing according to worth, but kept in favor with the money class. Mr. Peters has learned at his expense, and will not annoy merchants, mechanics, and farmers more. The only way in which he will make the poor farmers and mechanics think a few cases of "rot-gut" will be their own way. (Loud and prolonged cheers.)

Mr. J. McCreary was the next called. He handled Mr. Peters' figures in a merciless manner. He said it was not to discuss party politics we had met, but to come to a ground to defend a common cause, and as a farming community three party lines to the ground, and stand shoulder to shoulder for our rights. We find Mr. Chairman, a scheme of taxation proposed by Mr. Peters, which if followed to go into operation, would be ruinous to the farmers of the Province; we find the enormous sum of $100,000, to be raised principally from the farmers, while the rich, the money lender and his "altered dog scot free, as well as Charlottetown, Georgetown and other towns and villages. This amount, however, appears small to Mr. Peters, that he compares it to a little price in Charlottetown. Mr. Chairman, will give you an idea of his knowledge of our wants. He says he can raise the whole business with 3 cents to the acre. Now taking the area of the Island—and a large part of it is not taxable—all it would realize would be a little over $30,000. Does Mr. Peters expect the balance to come from this "hole in the wall" bank business that is going to run on his own responsibility? What on earth does the man mean? I thought the Government were responsible for all their actions. He likely intends amassing the bank loans with the Scotch. It is his business. You will find, Mr. Chairman, that if the tax is allowed to be raised in the manner outlined it will exceed 7 cents per acre, even with our dollar statute labor. But perhaps Mr. Peters intends counting it on his boneward track, when it will have assumed three times its proportion. He says we should not get on our feet, but to get on our feet, we can earn $300 of it back again at the road machine. During Mr. McCreary's handling of the matter he was loudly cheered.

Mr. J. Lader was then called upon, who in a spirited manner dealt at large with the proposed mode of taxation. He said Mr. Peters might not have to pay the tax, but he would pay for it. He said that he was not a farmer, but he was a man, and he would pay for it. He said that he was not a farmer, but he was a man, and he would pay for it. He said that he was not a farmer, but he was a man, and he would pay for it.

Mr. J. Lader said he thought Mr. Peters had made a very wrong estimate regarding the nature of our farmers; in fact, they were the most feeling class of men on earth, and to show their sincerity, Mr. Chairman, I will pledge my word and honor that Brown will never say a word about having to pay more than Smith. And I will go further. I promise you solemnly that Brown will not let Smith's children go hungry to bed, for to my own knowledge many a chunk of meat and bag of potatoes has been slipped across the road between day and dark. Mr. Peters had better send his matter between Smith and his brother and not mind Smith. (Loud and long cheers.)

Messrs. Jardine, Robinson and Betts followed, confiding in strong language the proposed method of taxation, after which the following resolutions were put and carried unanimously: "Whereas, From the tone of Premier Peters' speech, it would appear that the Government intend placing the burden of Provincial expenditure on the shoulders of land owners, allowing merchant, mechanics, and money owners to pay free; and Whereas, Mr. A. Peters did pledge himself to support no mode of taxation that would fail to include all manner of worth, be it therefore Resolved, That this meeting do condemn any mode of taxation that would exempt possessors of money or property of any description, however placed, from bearing a fair proportion of the common debt; and be it also Resolved, That the present mode of taxation, as proposed, be not to be paid—by all means the most advantageous; We, therefore, call on Mr. A. Peters to redeem his pledge, and Mr. A. McLaughlin to support him, and do a recommissioned fellow farmers of this Province to express their views on the matter.

It was moved by Mr. Ewen McDougall and seconded by Mr. William Robinson, that a motion be passed, that the proceedings of this meeting be sent to the Patriot and Examiner for publication, with a request that the other papers will please to copy. J. McCreary, Secretary.

THE LOCK TUMBLED TO HIS TOUCH. J. M. Hill, the Manager, Wins a Bet by Opening a Safe in Five Minutes.

Phil Milligan, a well known liquor dealer, has ordered a brand new double-deck burglar and fireproof safe with three sets of double bolts on it for his saloon on Broadway, and thereby hangs a tale. To look at the big safe which has for two years past been doing duty in Milligan's place one would never suppose that a new one was needed. But one is needed, though Milligan never knew it until in a reckless moment he boasted about his safe to J. M. Hill of the Standard theater, and the latter contemptuously called it a paste board box. Then Milligan got hot. "Do you mean to say you can open that safe of mine?" asked Milligan. "No question about it, my boy. I can open it in five minutes," said Hill. "You're saying, Hill, you're crazy," said Milligan excitedly. "Don't you know that a man can't open a safe but his own self knows the combination? Great heavens, I'd bet any man on earth, unless he was the company's expert, $1,000 that he couldn't open it."

"I won't bet you $1,000," said Hill, "but just to make it interesting I'll bet you $100 and wine for everybody that I can open that safe in five minutes." "You can't do it; you can't do it in an hour," almost yelled Milligan. "No, a day or a year or a month, but you go on as you bet. Why, Hill, that's the latest part of any lock, and it's simply impossible for any one without a knowledge of the combination to open it. I'll give you a chance to get out of that bluff by paying for the wine."

"Bluff, bluff," said Hill. "I'll show you whether it's a bluff or not. The bet goes, doesn't it?" "Certainly," said Hill, and throwing off his coat and hat he got down on his knees on the floor and began working at the lock. For three minutes he worked on his knees, and then he was on his feet. The crowd stood around and watched. Four minutes passed away, and still Hill worked. The crowd stood on his toes, and he worked like a Trojan. Four minutes and a half passed and Milligan was smiling a broad smile when Hill sprang to his feet with a yank pulled the door of the safe open.

"What did I tell you?" he cried triumphantly. "Well, I'm dinged, Hill. How did you do it?" said Milligan. "I know a thing about safes," said Hill. "Exactly," put in Hill, and then all hands stepped up to the bar, and the next hour drank nothing but wine. Milligan paid the bet with a crisp $100 bill, remarking as he did so: "Hill, I'm worth $100 to know that you know the combination of my safe. I'll get a new one and let you open it. You can't open it in a quarter of an hour."

"Give me an hour to study it in, and I'll take that bet," said Hill. The opening act of the evening was awaiting the arrival of Mr. Milligan's safe. Hill says he is going to make Milligan pay up to his offer, and an exciting time is expected. Hill's knowledge of locks was a revelation to his friends, but when they ask him about it he simply smiles. "The opening act of the evening will be a revelation to his friends, but when they ask him about it he simply smiles. "The opening act of the evening will be a revelation to his friends, but when they ask him about it he simply smiles."

Where Hunting is Unknown. Besides the climate and scenery of the Bermudas, so much in contrast with the countries of the north, there are ease, quietude and content everywhere, so pronounced as to put the most fastidious at rest until after a few days' sojourn he has dropped gracefully into the prevailing contentment of the place. No railroads, no telegraphs, no factories to disfigure, distract or endanger. None of the hustle or bustle or toil of our progressive states. Nor is there any of the abject poverty and misery which are so palpably and painfully manifest among the poorest of our states. With a climate at all times pleasant, and well enabled of rendering three crops annually and sustaining a million of life with a wondrous variety of fish, the very best always available for the day.

Whether it is these elements of attraction, or the moral influence of the churches, found in every considerable settlement, that go so far to settle one's nerves and make life as a city dweller here is difficult to determine, but certain it is that no northern city can vie with these lands without feeling that they indeed are well worth seeing, and well worth knowing.—Dominion's Magazine.
