Revolving Art Exhibition For PEI Bureau At Aulac

Summer visitors to Canada's scenic Provinces this year will see a new wrinkle at the Prince Edward Island Information Bureau at Aulac, N. B., which is the turning off place for those motoring to Canada's Garden Province. A revolving art exhibition, featuring the paintings of Island artists, will be held at the Aulac Bureau during July and August. This will consist of, for the most part, paintings of Island scenes. The display will be changed every ten days or two weeks to assure variety and to give all Island artists a chance to be represented. It is expected that, among the visitors to the Island bureau there will be Canadian and American professional and amateur artists. Artists coming to Prince Edward Island for a holiday would have the opportunity of doing an Island scene which in turn could be exhibited in the Bureau.
