LOUIS ARMSTRONG and his vocalist, Velma Middleton, are seen at the mike as Satchmo vocalizing, gives out with some of his own.

Armstrong And His Band Please Large Audience

Ole Satchmo's been and gone. But to nearly 2,000 fans that attended last night's exhibition of jazz at its best, that "gim-me some skin" guy, Louis Armstrong continues to become a legend of the musical world.

Included among his repertoire of fabulous jazz classics were his usual outstanding instrumental arrangements of "Summertime," "When the Saints Go Marching In," "St. Louis Woman," "High Society" and "I Get Ideas".

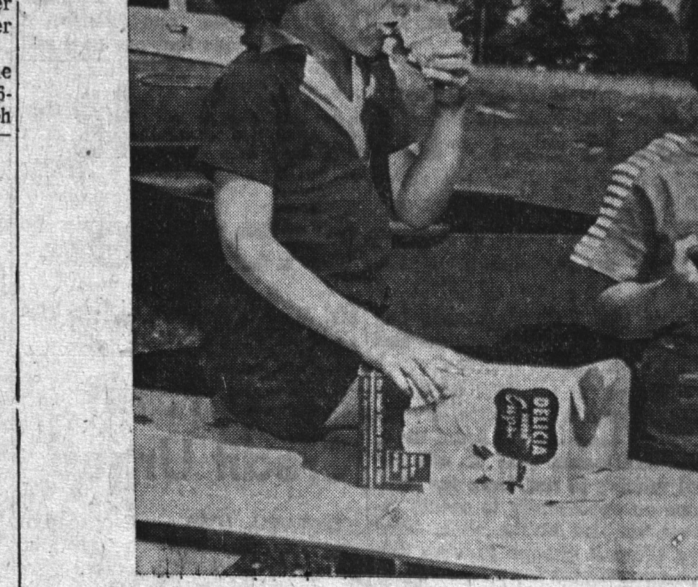

Louis, the man who set the pattern for the development of American jazz born in the slums of New Orleans, was brought up in the jazz center of the world; in and around Liberty and Perdido boulevards, the Pearson plan eliminates Nationalist China, a permanent member of the Security Council.

The expectation here was that Khrushchev would be reluctant to attend a summit-level meeting of all 11 Security Council members.

But the latest word from Moscow suggests that Khrushchev is so eager to get to New York—he has long wanted to see the United States—that he is willing to overlook the presence of Nationalist China.

Nikita's Plan Corresponds Closely With Pearson Idea

By ALAN HARVEY Canadian Press Staff Writer OTTAWA (CP)—Nikita Khrushchev's original call for a summit meeting on the Middle East crisis corresponds closely with the plan for top-level talks outlined in the Commons this week by Opposition leader Pearson.

There is one big difference. Mr. Pearson wants the talks within the United Nations. Mr. Khrushchev's original announcement last Saturday did not mention the UN. The Russian leader said Geneva should be the site.

Now, Mr. Khrushchev has given qualified acceptance to summit talks in the 11-nation UN Security Council.

But he has one qualification—certain unspecified Arab countries must attend. Diplomats here are uncertain how rigid this stipulation will prove to be, but at first sight it appears to give Khrushchev more room for manoeuvre.

TO DRAG OUT TALKS? He can use insistence on Arab representations as a means of prolonging pre-summit negotiations, if that is his purpose.

The objective of Mr. Pearson's plan was to meet the conditions Khrushchev originally outlined, and at the same time have the talks in the UN arena.

Mr. Pearson's proposal: Let the UN Security Council name a subcommittee comprising Britain, the United States, France, Russia and—by special invitation—India.

These countries would meet under chairmanship of UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld—"anywhere, any time," Mr. Pearson told a reporter.

The date and venue would be selected by Mr. Hammarskjöld. Khrushchev's original proposal is identical from the standpoint of composition. He would have the same participants—the Western Big Three, Russia and India—and he would have Mr. Hammarskjöld in the chair.

FIRST OMITTED UN Although he now has signified willingness to hold talks in the UN Security Council, his first call did not say anything about the UN.

Mr. Pearson worked out his formula last Sunday. In effect, he merely took the Khrushchev proposal and injected a UN flavor into it by proposing that the participants should be named as a subcommittee by the UN Security Council.

An agreement between the federal and provincial governments for joint financing of the $182,000,000 project will be concluded today when Agriculture Minister Harkness signs for Ottawa. The agreement already has been signed by Saskatchewan.

Mr. Harkness announced the planned signing Thursday in reply to a question in the Commons by C. O. Cooper (PC—Rosetown-Biggan), in whose constituency the dam will be built.

The big earthen dam, accounting for about half the total cost, will hold back the waters of the South Saskatchewan River for the dual purpose of irrigation and hydro-electric power.

Is Preacher At Central Christian This Sunday, Central Christian Church will welcome to their pulpit as guest speaker Charles P. Herndon, minister of First Christian Church, Lexington, Kentucky, where he has served for the past eight years.

Dr. Herndon is also President of Lexington's Christian Bible College an institution operated as part of the program of First Christian Church.

Possessing B.A., M.A., and D.S.L. degrees, Dr. Herndon has also served as a part-time instructor in Greek in the College of Adult Education of the University of Kentucky.

Christian education, evangelism and counselling as well as radio and TV work are other phases of the ministry which are of particular interest to Dr. Herndon.

On this, his first visit to Prince Edward Island Dr. Herndon will be accompanied by his wife and the eldest of his six children, Charles, Jr.

The American minister and his family have been anticipating this visit to Canada's "Garden of the Gulf" with a great deal of enthusiasm.

Dr. Herndon foresees this Province as "a place a quiet, peaceful idyllic environment."

U.S. Buyer Looks Over PEI Spuds

J. B. Kittrell, a seed potato buyer from North Carolina has been spending the past few days in the province gathering data on the condition and acreage of the Island Potato crop.

Mr. Kittrell has been buying Island potatoes for a number of years now and has found that business with this Province has been quite satisfactory.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Kittrell resides in Greenville, North Carolina, across the street from East Carolina College. On Wednesday of this week a group of students from this college made a tour of the Province and Mr. Kittrell had the opportunity of meeting them in Charlottetown.

Pea Harvest To Start Next Week The harvesting and processing of peas is expected to get underway the first of next week according to R. J. Heatherington, Manager of Prince Edward Island Frosted Foods, Ltd., at Sherwood. Other crops will follow as they mature.

The plant discontinued the processing of strawberries on Wednesday of this week. Mr. Heatherington said only 50 per cent of the intended berry quota was processed due to the poor quality of the fruit this season.

GOOD AND BAD He said this would put "all the good people on one side and the bad ones on the other side—something like that."

Mr. Jodoin also said that what ever comes of the CLC - CCF action, any unions that did not want to tie up with a political party would still be welcome to join the Congress, and those member - unions opposed were welcome to remain.

It was a union's "democratic right" to refrain from political alignment and he would see that it was safeguarded.

Looking to the possibility that the prospective political movement might one day form the government of Canada, Mr. Jodoin said the CLC would reserve the right to make representations to any government and to make constructive criticism, if it felt it necessary.

Unanimous (Continued from page 1) "bring fear" into the hearts of Canadians over the possibilities of these plans.

But Mr. Jodoin said "it is normal and natural" that unions should have an interest in political affairs.

CITES BAR BODY Other organizations, such as the Canadian Bar Association, took an active interest in political affairs. Yet when organized labor decided to do so, certain interests cried that this was a dangerous development, one that would be disastrous for the country as a whole.

"Organized labor doesn't want to dominate—it wants to co-operate," he said.

And it realized that to make any headway in a political direction, it must co-operate with many other interests with similar aims.

Mr. Jodoin said there are many liberal-minded people in Canada who want an opportunity to be real liberals, with a small l—"not liberally-minded Conservatives."

He invited the progressives of the Progressive Conservative party and the truly liberal-minded followers of the Liberal party to "come and get acquainted."

Personally, he favored a two-party political system for Canada, with one party on the right and the other on the left.

"Just a straight fight and let's find out who's going to win—the people or the corporations."

GOOD AND BAD He said this would put "all the good people on one side and the bad ones on the other side—something like that."
