Mother.
BY JACOB B. DOCKENDORFF.

Mother! that tender, magic word, First by the infant lips expressed; What golden memories are stirred Within this lonely breast As 'mid the throng that passes by I hear a childish voice exclaim:
Mother! and see the form that fast Enfolds the one that lisped that name.

Then in my solitude I sigh For that dear mother far away.
And all her loving constancy And care from day to day, As through the course of childhood years She nursed my tender, feeble form; Forgetting toil, enduring fears, Content to shield me from the storm.

Methods I see that careworn face Turned lovingly upon me now, And every line of sorrow trace Upon the anxious brow That tells as naught but mother's can The deep concern her bosom feels For me; but who can understand All that a mother's heart conceals?

In the lone watches of the night, When all are lost to consciousness, She weeps and prays that all is right—That God will keep and bless Her boy in all his wanderings, And bring him to her once again Ere her poor, tired spirit wings Its flight beyond life's toil and pain.

Mother! His hand shall ever be Held forth to guard his children well;
And all that I have lost in thee I find where'er I dwell In Him; then weep not, mother dear, Since He protects your wand'ring boy;
The Union He denies us here Will prove, in Heaven, a greater joy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

More About Vancouver City.

LETTER II.

SIR,—In my last I gave a few hints which may prove of some service to those who would come to Vancouver to better their fortunes. In this letter I intend giving your readers some idea of the city, outside of its advantages (?) to speculators.
The Fraser River empties itself into the Strait of Georgia through two outfalls, forming a delta at its mouth. About three miles from this delta is Burrard Inlet, a sheet of water almost land-locked, and into which, at all times of the year, vessels of any size can enter. The entrance to Burrard Inlet is called the Narrows. On a peninsula, having Coal Harbor on the east, and English Bay on the west, stands the modern City of Vancouver.

The scenery around the city is what first attracts the visitor, and is far more attractive than the city itself. Away to the southeast, in the State of Washington, looms up the lofty summit of Mount Baker.
On the opposite side, and about six miles distant from the city, across the Inlet, stretches a chain of mountains, averaging in height from 3,000 to 6,000 feet, and which, in certain states of the atmosphere, present a very beautiful appearance.

The city is well sheltered on every side, and the cold easterly winds, which we feel so keenly in the east, are unknown here.
In the background the city is sheltered by the Olympian Mountains, and on the North by the Coast Range. The Island of Vancouver shelters it from the ocean. The principal streets are graded, but those which are not graded are very dangerous for teams, owing to the mud, which, in the winter season, usually gets worked up to the depth of two and three feet in places.
But here we have all the advantages of modern invention to assist us in travelling, such as the electric railway and light, and we have also an abundance of good sidewalks, thanks to the plentifulness of lumber and sawmills in the vicinity. Vancouver can also boast of a waterworks system, a fire department, and a police force. The city is also soon to be connected with New Westminster by an electric railway, and the problem which the real estate agents are now trying to solve is the question as to how high a price should they ask for the land in the immediate vicinity of this coming modern improvement. We have the telephone, a dock for shipping, a hospital, and also a park which lacks nothing but a great deal of improvement to make it one of the most delightful spots in nature.

We have numerous benevolent and fraternal organizations here such as the Free Masons, Oddfellows, Good Templars, Knights of Labor, Knights of Pythias, Locomotive Engineers, United Workmen, Foresters, Sons of England, etc., and a St. George's, St. Andrew's, and St. Patrick's Society. We have also a public reading room, Young Men's Christian Association and Women's Christian Temperance Union. The eleven churches of the city comprise 3 Presbyterian, 2 Methodist, 1 Baptist, 3 Episcopal, 1 Congregational and 1 Roman Catholic.

The Post Office of Vancouver requires a special description. When our Post Office was built it never could have been intended to supply the requirements of a thriving town like Vancouver. The most interesting and busy scene in the city takes place within its walls once a day. The time is from the arrival of the eastern mail until about five o'clock. When the mail arrives all the wickets are closed until the letters and papers are assorted. During the time arrives, the expectant citizens come flocking from every quarter. The persons who are fortunate enough to get near the wicket are lucky indeed, providing that they can hold the position. Generally long before the assorting is over the office is crowded to overflowing, and many are compelled to wait outside in the rain. I say in the rain, for you must know that at this season of the year it rains almost constantly.
Then it is to be seen a wonderful variety of people and umbrellas. Everybody is in earnest, from the tawny heathen Chinese to the fair-haired son of Sweden, and a person who is lucky enough to get inside can remain there an hour or so providing he or she is robust enough to stand the jam and tobacco smoke. The smoking is continued not for the reason that the citizens wish to be rude, but because the unfortunate individual who forgets to take his pipe or cigar from his mouth before entering the jam cannot afterwards find room sufficient to perform the operation. But the post office is just the place to go if you wish to find a friend, for it "brings out" all the stragglers that the churches and societies fail to catch. The motto in this case seems to be "First come, first served," and that rule is so well carried out that everybody gets there first, which only goes to show that the wisest and most honored sayings sometimes fail and become entirely impracticable. In concluding my remarks upon the post office I wish to say with all honor to the gallantry of the citizens, that sometimes they allow the ladies to be served first. However, there is now in course of erection a suitable building, which will no doubt remedy this sad state of affairs, and, it is hoped, increase the chances of the letters being delivered safely and promptly.

Across the harbor from the city is the Indian Mission, a tidy, white-washed little village. It is built low down at the foot of the mountains and its white walls make a very pleasing contrast to the dark green verdure which clothes the lofty background.
In viewing the mountains from the city one would be led to believe that their bases reached to the water's edge, while in reality they are five or six miles away.

Vancouver has every means of communication with the outer world. Steamers ply regularly between the city and China, Japan and Australia, at intervals of about six or eight weeks. We have daily communication with Victoria, tri-weekly with Nanaimo, and also with Portland, Seattle and San Francisco.
A line of railway will soon be in operation between Vancouver and the American coast ports.

Hoping that these few facts may find a place in your valuable paper, and thanking you for space in the past, I remain, yours sincerely,
JACOB B. DOCKENDORFF,
Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 20, 1891.

Game Protection.

SIR,—As the season for game is past but will soon return again, I would wish to call the attention of the Game Association to one point in particular, and that is night shooting, which is very destructive to game, not only in killing, but it tends to scare them from the feeding grounds, to which they resort at night. If there be not an act in force, the Association should see, at the next sitting of Parliament, to have one passed and rigidly enforced under heavy fines for the firing of a gun after sunset and before sunrise. But if not, if such work be allowed to be carried on for a few years more, our bays and rivers will be deserted by the feathered race, in which they now abound.

A GUNNER.
Grand Tracadie, Jan. 28, 1891.

Meeting at Grand Tracadie.

As by notice specified, a meeting was held at Corran Ban Bridge on Wednesday, 21st inst., touching the question of a Breakwater in Tracadie Harbor. The meeting was well attended, for the question is a vital one in these parts.

P. C. Kelly, Esq., occupied the chair.
The meeting being called to order, letters from Messrs. Davies and Peters, expressing regret of unavoidable absence, were read by the Secretary, and the subject of the meeting fell under consideration.

The inconveniences to local and gulf fisheries generally arising from the want of a breakwater, and the immense importance of a good shipping port to the farmers of the surrounding districts, were fully considered by the several speakers. The following resolutions were read and adopted:

Whereas, in recent years immense sums have been expended on the protection of the fisheries, and whereas, said fisheries are almost entirely carried on in the Gulf of St. Lawrence; and whereas, the condition of Tracadie Harbor, which is almost central on the north side of the Island, is such that fishermen experience great difficulty in pursuing their avocation, and schooners of any considerable size are unable to enter either for refuge or for trade.

Resolved, That in the opinion of this meeting, the fisheries, which cost so much, should, by the construction of a breakwater, be placed within reach of the fishermen; and resolved, that this meeting petition the Minister of Public Works for redress of grievances; and further

Resolved, That the Minister of Marine be memorized that he may use his influence in the Department of Public Works to obtain the prayer of said petition.
Among the speakers we were pleased to note Dr. Jenkins, who, some years ago, as representative of this district at Ottawa, laid a petition embodying the same request which we now make before the House, and urged the prayer thereof in the Department of Public Works.

At the conclusion a vote of thanks was tendered the Doctor for having kindly attended the meeting, to which he briefly and fitly replied, and meeting adjourned.
