The Late D. Monro, Esq.

In to-day's paper appears a notice of the death of D. Monro, Esq., of Alberry Plains. He emigrated to this Island from the Isle of Skye some 45 years ago, being then about 20 years of age. His father was a doctor, and from him he obtained a considerable knowledge of medicine. He partly prosecuted his studies for the profession, but his father having died while he was yet young, he was unable to complete them. His skill, however, was such that he was enabled to become very useful among the people, especially in the early years of settlement in this province, when medical practitioners were few. Mr.
Monro sat in the House of Assembly for Belfast district from 1853 to 1857. He was a supporter at that time of the Liberal administration of Hon. George Coles, and he continued to be a true Liberal until the day of his death. He was a Justice of the Peace for Queen's County, and a member of the Board of Health for Belfast. He was for a time Commissioner of Small Debts. In all these positions he conscientiously discharged his duty. In the community in which he lived his memory will not soon be forgotten.—Patriot.

Drift of American Partyism.

(Ottawa Sun.)
All evil passions appear to have been let loose, in the present political campaign, in the United States. Riot, bloodshed, and at several places open deliberate murders have taken place. This bodes ill for that system of Republicanism which has been adopted by our cousins and neighbors.
These frequent struggles for party mastery, are becoming more fierce and bloody every four years. Indeed it is not difficult to imagine a not distant time when the armed and uniformed mobs of partisans of to-day may be succeeded by regular armies going to war for the presidency. Next will come a dictatorship, to be followed by tyranny, and perhaps a general dissolution of the Union.

If the American people were wise they would abolish the presidency altogether.
That office is really incompatible with a true democracy and is only a foolish imitation of a monarchical idea. Its tendency is naturally towards absolutism, and in absolutism it will end as similar offices have always ended in every nation and in every age where and when they were established.
On account of the vastness and peculiar position of the United States they may prove an exception to this rule. But a time may come when the great body of the people will have become heartsick and weary of the unending turmoil, violence and casualty of demagoguery, and consequently accept the rule of a strong man as preferable to that of the mob.

We have infinite faith, however, in the abiding love of freedom inherent in the American people, but if they would preserve their liberties they should reform their system, bring their best men to the front, abolish the machine, do away with the presidency, vest the supreme power in the House of Representatives, and make official peculation a capital crime.
No system of government yet devised by man was ever perfect. One after another all have failed, and tyrants have invariably risen to power on the ruins of popular rights. Considering these facts it is hopeless to expect that the Great Republic will be an exception in history unless indeed there should be a revolution among the people that will reach down to the very foundation of society, and result in the establishment of government on the only firm Republican basis—Liberty, Equality, Fraternity.

OVERCOATS.—L. E. Prowse has just received a job line of Worst Overcoats, which he will sell for $7.50 each. [dy & wky—1884]

The Redistribution Bill.

ARRANGEMENT OF SEATS AS PROPOSED BY THE "STANDARD'S" DRAFT.

According to the London Standard's version of the proposed Redistribution Bill, there will be 668 members of the House of Commons, of whom 465 are allotted to England, which gains 6; 30 to Wales, which remains stationary; and 70 to Scotland, which gains 10. In England all boroughs with a population of less than 10,000 lose their members, as do also Cricklade, East Retford, New Shorham, Stroud, Aylsbury, Wenlock, Macclesfield, and Sandwich, the last two on account of their corruption. Hereford and Rutland also lose a seat, while one member is taken from every borough with less than 40,000 people. The total gain of seats is thus 119, of which 56 will be given to the Counties of Cheshire (2), Cornwall (2), Devon (2), Durham (4), Essex (2), Gloucester (2), Hants (1), Hertford (1), Kent (2), Lancashire (12), Middlesex (5), Monmouth (1), Nottingham (2), Somerset (1), Sussex (2), Wilts (2), the North Riding of York (2), and the West Riding of York (11).

The remainder will be given to the great towns, Finsbury having in future 6 members; Lambeth, 6; Mylebone, 6; Hackney, 6; Birmingham, 6; Liverpool, 6; Manchester, 6; Chelsea, 4; Leeds, 4; Sheffield, 4; Westminster, 3; Southwark, 3; Greenwich, 3; Bristol, 3 and Westbury, 2; while the new boroughs of Croydon, St.
Helen's, Aston, Barron-in-Furness, and Yarmouth will have one member each, and West Ham two. In the case of the counties, the single principle in allotting seats has been to give them so far as possible in proportion to population, each London borough, for example, obtaining one representative for every 80,000 peop.

In Wales, Pembroke and Haverfordwest are to be united, and Radnor and Brecon are to be abolished, the three seats being given to Glamorganshire (2) and to Caparnagh (1). In Ireland, Athlone, B. ndon, Carlow, Clonmel, Coleraine, Duogarran, Dungannon, Downpatrick, Ennis, Ennis-killing, Kesh, M. Low, New Ross, Portlerrington, and Tralee will be disfranchised, while Galway and Waterford will lose one member, the eighteen seats being given to Cork, which will have six members; Antrim, Down, Mayo and Glway, which will have four; and Donegal, Kerry, Tipperary, and Tyrone, which will have three each.
Dublin, though not quite deserving it by numbers, will have four members. In Scotland there will be no disfranchisement; but South Leack will have four members, and Fife and Renfrew one additional member each, while Glasgow will have six members, Edinburgh four, and Aberdeen three.

As regards the method of election, the three-cornered system is swept away absolutely and everywhere, and the general principle adopted will not be to treat the great cities and counties as entities at all. They will be subdivided into wards or districts, each one of which, with certain few exceptions, will return two members. The single-seat system is not rejected, for Berkshire, Buckinghamshire, Dorsetshire, and some other counties will be divided into single-seat districts; but it is sparingly applied, and the approach to equality is only roughly and approximately made.
Still, the gross anomalies, if we leave out London, will become very few, and a singular little step is taken towards equal electoral districts, it being suggested that the new subdivision or ward should be called after the most important place within it.
The effect of that scheme will be that the apparent connection with the county or city will be lost, as it must be if equal electoral districts are ever adopted. We shall be curious to see if that proposal will cause irritation, or if the local conviction that everybody must know where, say, Edgbaston is, will overpower municipal and county pride. It will be observed that the plan of grouping boroughs, which finds favour with Tories from their hatred of urban feeling, is almost entirely discarded, though no grouped boroughs except Radnor and Brecon are swept away.

Students on the Rampage.

Some people imagine that we must go abroad for professors of vandalism and perpetrators of ruffianism, but the acts this week in Montreal, of a crowd of students of the Victoria and McGill Colleges, prove conclusively that we are possessed of a few who can equal the acts of outsiders. About eleven o'clock on Thursday night, in that city, a large crowd of students from Colleges, with an old torn flag, marched down Beaver Hill to Craig street, along Craig to Bleury, up Bleury to St.
Catherine, and along St. Catherine to Phillips square. On their route they extinguished street lamps, pulled and broke door bells, carried away sign-boards, and shouted and yelled like demons. In order to prove themselves courageous, they surrounded Constable Merin, on Bleury St., who they dragged along. After dragging Constable Merin for some distance, they lifted him on their shoulders, and having carried him until they reached a good pile of mud, they dropped him into it and then cleared off. After leaving Merin, the gang encountered Constable Leprieux, on St.
Catherine Street, and a shout was immediately raised to "Hang the d—d copper to the lamp-post." Some of them then advanced toward the constable, when he let his fist fly, and in comparatively short time had put half a dozen, or more of the students hors d' combat. The remainder now began to consider that discretion was the better part of valour and left him alone, and, taking to their heels, went tearing westward along St. Catherine street. No arrests have yet been made, and the police are not in a position to identify even one of the brave one hundred.
