German Problem Key To Ending The Cold War

LONDON, (CP)—Britain asserted Tuesday that Russia must agree to a free and united Germany as the first big step toward ending the cold war.

Acting Prime Minister Richard A. Butler told the House of Commons that Britain, France and the United States are firmly agreed that Germany is the "key problem" now dividing Russia and the West.

He urged Russia to accept the Western powers' invitation to a foreign ministers conference on Germany and Austria proposed for late September.

He said this conference would not be a substitute but rather a prelude to a possible later conference of Big Four leaders.

Key Problem

Butler said it has become "increasingly obvious in recent weeks that the key problem in Europe and in Western relations with the Soviet is that of Germany."

"Before the German problem can be settled or a peace treaty negotiated or even discussed with the Soviet Union," Butler added, "there must be a free all-German government able to negotiate such a treaty and free to decide its own international relations."

He said these proposals provide "the only basis for a Germany united in freedom. It is our hope that the Soviet government may see their way to negotiate with the Western powers on this basis."

Turning to the Far East Butler said "we have every reason to hope that the Korean armistice agreement can be signed without further delay."

He said an armistice would "open the way for a settlement of other outstanding problems in the Far East."

Attacks Policy

Former Prime Minister Clement Attlee, attacked the government's stand on Germany and said it might block rather than promote a cold war settlement with Russia.

Attlee said he was "not at all happy" about the proposed foreign ministers' conference and suggested that Russia should be invited to a wider Big Four conference rather than one dealing only with Germany and Austria.

"I do not think a settlement will be obtained except in the context of some larger settlement," he declared.

Attlee also denounced proposals for a post-armistice political conference on Korea. "This is a matter not for one or two states but for the United Nations," he said.

Amid Labor cheers, Attlee said he frankly doubted that the recent Washington talks between the three Western foreign ministers had brought peace any closer.

Two types of balloons are used for the "Winds of Freedom" project. One explodes at high altitude, scattering messages. The other sinks slowly.

Those that drifted over the Iron Curtain during the night of July 13 carried three messages.

One pamphlet gave an account of the June 17 workers' riot in Berlin and the purge of Lavrenty P. Beria, Soviet vice-premier and police boss.

Another contained a facsimile of the Czech crown and the message: "Czechs, know this: the regime is what you think. Power lies with the people and the people stand opposed. With unity and courage, organize your strength. Down with the collective. Inist on workers' rights today. Demand concessions—tomorrow, freedom."

The third contained an aluminum coin bearing a picture of the West Berlin freedom bell and the inscription: "All Czechs and Slovaks for freedom—all the free world for Czechs and Slovaks."

Commenting on the action, Prague Communist newspaper Rude Pravo said "even Hitler's his days never dared to violate Czechoslovakia's sovereign territorial rights in such a way."

The rental for about 50,000 polling stations at $32 per station—including the cost of space and other fees—will be up about $400,000.

An additional expenditure not counted up in the 1953 election cost is that of the office of the chief electoral officer—Nelson Castonguay—which will be about $320,000. He works between elections but at election time expands his staff to about 60.

Peiping again emphasized that one thing which must be settled before any armistice signing was the safeguarding of Indian troops. Such troops would have custody of anti-Red prisoners while Red "explanation teams" tried to persuade them to return home.

South Korean officials, who view India as pro-Communist, have said the appearance of Indian troops might result in bloody clashes.

Sterling W.I. Mark 40th Anniversary

Members of Sterling W. I. and their husbands celebrated the 40th anniversary of their Institute on June 10.

The celebration took the form of a delicious turkey dinner at Lake View Lodge, Cavendish.

The dining room and tables were decorated in blue and gold, and a beautifully decorated birthday cake with 40 candles was presided over by Mrs. Wallace MacKay and Mrs. John McGuigan, both charter members.

Grace was said by president Mrs. Elmer Fyfe. A minute silence was observed in memory of members who have gone on to higher service.

Mrs. Wallace MacKay related some of the struggles in starting an Institute 40 years ago.

Courses of flowers were planned on the charter members by Mrs. C. A. Woolner and Mrs. Alban Bolger.

Mrs. John MacGuigan and Mrs. Thomas Bolger, both charter members, gave a talk on earlier days of Sterling W. I.

Supervisor Miss Robin and assistant Mrs. Manning gave a talk on Institute work. A sing-song with Mrs. Lorne MacEwen at the piano followed.

Mrs. J. E. Fleming extended a vote of thanks to Miss Mary Stewart. Two solos by Coady Myers were much enjoyed.

The remainder of the evening was spent in social chat, games, and music. The singing of Auld Lang Syne brought a pleasant evening to a close.

Agricultural Institute Members Welcomed Here

A warm welcome to the city and Province was extended to members of the Agricultural Institute who are holding their annual meeting here at the Vocational Training School this week.

Extending the welcome were Mr. R. B. MacLaren, president of the P. E. I. Branch of the Institute, Hon. C. C. Baker, Minister of Agriculture, and Mayor J. D. Stewart of the city.

Following the brief opening meeting the members left for sectional tours which took them to many areas on the Experimental Farm and to the Upton Farm.

Methods of farming here were discussed with a great deal of interest by the visitors in the handling of grass silage and the new pole barn erected at Upton Farm to permit cattle to get on the range earlier in the season.

In greeting the guests Hon. Mr. Baker said that we were not particularly concerned with anything but the every day work of the men as scientists. He recalled the early days when farmers here changed from the type of oats, the old Island Black, then grown to several others being offered. He also noted the trend in wheat varieties at the same time.

In mentioning the difficulties encountered by farmers of another decade in trying to improve their product, Mr. Baker remarked that there was a desire on their part to have varieties of grain which would give greater yields.

"This had resulted in the types we now have which not only provide high yield, but have definite disease resistant qualities as well. One of them, he remarked, was a type of barley developed by Dr. J. A. Clark, formerly superintendent of the Experimental Farm here, called Charlottetown No. 80 and developed over 40 years ago. He added that it was still hard to beat.

Speeches by Mayor J. D. Stewart and Mr. B. F. Tinney preceded last night Mr. B. F. Tinney presided at a special dinner given to the visitors at Sandy's Restaurant. It was a typical Island meal of lobster and delighted the large number present.

In a brief address Mr. Tinney said the whole strength of the Agricultural Institute of Canada was built up by the members themselves who would have to put even more and more work into their efforts.

Mr. Tinney called on the national president of the Institute, Dr. George Smith, who addressed the gathering briefly. He stated that the Institute as a national body had no thought of interfering with governmental matters on either a Provincial or Federal level. He said it was because of this that the Institute had grown so strong, although slowly, and its aloofness from politics that protected it at all times. However, he noted, that he would like to see the time come when the Institute would be equally as strong at both Federal and Provincial levels.

Freight Rate Burden

Earlier in his talk Hon. Mr. Baker said that high freight rates are a burden on producers and he thought that higher yielding varieties of coarse grains, resulting in lowered imports of food stuffs would have an immediate favourable effect on our economy.

His Worship Mayor J. D. Stewart expressed the thoughts of the people of this city as he extended the official welcome and told the group what he hoped their deliberations would be successful.

In the afternoon the women accompanying the group were taken by the women's committee on a trip around the North Shore so they might see the Green Gables country. In the evening following a dinner they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Parent at the Experimental Farm. The heavy business sessions will begin this morning.

Everything Set To Go In Big Air Show Today

"Everything is set to go" were the words of Bill Sweet, promoter of National Air Shows of Columbus, Ohio, last night, as all aircraft touched onto the runways of Charlottetown Airport to participate in the big flying classic today.

Mr. Sweet, in an interview yesterday, stated this would be the largest flying show in Eastern Canada and with the addition of the F-86 Sabre Jets from R.C.A.F. Station, Chatham, N. B., and the Helicopter from M.M.C.S. Shearwater, all the more interest will be added.

Asked if the Jets would interfere with the scheduled show, Mr. Sweet replied, "certainly not, these Canadian jet pilots are the hottest in the world, and it will be a treat for us as well as the 'ground jobs' to watch them perform."

He was also particularly interested to learn about the helicopter's arrival. "These boys can even put them into a walk, and we will have appropriate music for them."

All in all, Mr. Sweet lives up to Zack Mosley's comic strip character in "Smiling Jack". He has been in the aircraft business for 27 years, first as a pilot and now is world famous as an aviation sporting events announcer. He has his own TV and radio programs over three of the leading networks in the U.S.A. He is guaranteed to please all attending the show with his descriptions of the goings on in the sky above.

Bob Packard, chief engineer with National Air Shows has been here since last week assembling the 1910 Curtiss-Wright pusher aircraft which will be flown at an amazing speed of 40 miles per hour. Put this aircraft alongside of the Sabres at upwards of 600 miles per hour and one will see the Golden Anniversary of Flying.

"We would like to return to your Island next year," said Mr. Packard, "so today you will see the best display we can put on. Our boys even make the most experienced pilot sit on edge with their antics."

Low Level Fly Past

There will be three jets from Chatham in fly pasts at low-level breath-taking speeds and along with them will be one other jet which will do several aerobatic manoeuvres before heading skyward again. It is also hoped that an attempt will be made to break the barrier of sound. If this is done, it will be announced beforehand, so that those in the vicinity will be warned to expect three loud explosions as first the fuselage, then the wings and finally the tail section of the aircraft breaks the barrier. The aircraft will be flying at approximately 750 m.p.h.

Persons will also be warned to prepare for the dive bombing scene. A small house has been erected on the airport and it will be bombed from the air. When hit, an explosion should be heard for at least 10 miles. With these extra events, persons in the vicinity would be well advised to park their autos in the provided parking areas away from any flying obstacles.

The big "flying circus" shapes up to be the finest ever shown here and with prospects of fine weather this afternoon, officials of 201 (Confederation) Wing of the R.C.A.F. Association anticipate a large attendance.

Routes for the . . . access to the airport have been published and those attending would be advised to follow signs. Officials would also like them to use these same routes out to avoid any traffic jams.
