conditions

In some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil is rapid. For this reason we put up a 50c. size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children.

In other conditions gain must be slow, sometimes almost imperceptible, health can't be built up in a day. For this Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment, food rather than medicine, food prepared for tired and weak digestions.

CHAPTER XX.

Harry looked relieved when he saw who it was.

"Hello, Alice," he exclaimed. "Wandering around like a ghost! Why, what is the matter?"

She hesitated a moment, looking down, and then glancing suspiciously at me.

"I want this letter posted, and I don't know whom to trust."

"Letter! Oh, Alice, whom is it for?" cried I, entreatingly.

"Egbert Lloyd. I have told him to come here to-morrow. I must see him, speak to him; I must have all this mystery made clear. He can do it. So I have told him to come."

Harry was evidently much disturbed. I could tell by the twitching of his face and the movement of his hands. Alice looked at him keenly, and then walked away towards the front door.

"Where are you going? I will post your letter," said he.

"No, no; I will go out with it myself. I have been trustful too long."

She quickened her pace and had her hand upon the door when Harry, shaking with suppressed excitement, crossed the hall hastily, and stood with his back against it.

"Wait," said he, hoarsely. "You don't know what you are doing. If you care for Egbert, think how your suspicions will pain him."

"If my suspicions are true he deserves to be pained. If they are not, and I don't believe they are, he will be delighted to have them cleared up, and we shall be happy again."

Harry evidently did not share this view.

"Look here," he said at last, "you can see that this is an important step you are going to take, accusing a man of very serious things. You must take somebody's advice. Will you take my father's?"

She stared for a few moments thoughtfully before her.

"Yes," she said at last, slowly. "I don't mind hearing what Uncle William has to say."

Alice could not judge as well as I could the great relief this decision afforded Harry. He sprang away from the door, dragging Alice towards the staircase. I followed as a matter of course. We found Mr. Jones writing. He looked up with rather a wan smile, and seemed to ask us with his eyes what fresh trouble we had brought for his consideration.

"Uncle," began Alice "I want to write to Egbert. I want to see him to ask him questions, if possible to confront him with Miss Stanton. Harry and Winnie want to prevent me seeing him; but I cannot rest until I have done so. Am I not right?"

Mr. Jones leaned back in his chair, considering a few moments, just as he did when a client brought him a difficult case.

"I think you are right," he pronounced at last, in a judicial tone. "It is only fair to the young man himself. Write to him yourself, telling him to come."

"I have written," and Alice produced her letter. "I meant to give it to Harry, but I'm afraid he wouldn't post it."

"Go and post it yourself, then," said her uncle, simply.

Without another word Alice turned to obey with alacrity. Harry looked at his father with an anxious face. I thought he perhaps wanted to exchange a few words with Mr. Jones, so I followed Alice out of the room, leaving father and son together.

Harry, however, after a hurried good night, ran after me. We all three got down into the hall together, and Alice, seizing a garden hat, ran off with her letter, while Harry and I lingered at the front door.

Instead of indulging me with a few affectionate words, as I expected, he peered out into the darkness, watching his cousin's light dress flitting down the drive.

"You will look after her well, and you will not leave her alone to-night?" he said, in a guilty sort of voice.

"I always stay with her up to the last," I answered, surprised and anxious.

"Up to the last won't do," said Harry, rudely. "You must stay with her all night, and—and behave like a wise girl, if you can."

With this he darted down the drive and I saw no more of him that night.

I could not understand him. I was staring out into the darkness, listening to Harry's retreating footsteps and watching for Alice's return, when I perceived on the left, close to the edge of the lawn, a figure which I took for hers. It lingered, however, instead of coming to the house.

"Alice!" I cried, and then as she did not come, I stepped down on the path and called again.

Instead of answering, the woman glided away among the evergreens, and I recognized that it was not Alice at all but Bertha Stanton.

Had Harry seen her? Or had he only guessed that she would be haunting the place again that night? I could not tell; but the reason of his warning now seemed clear. Seeing that on the sound of my voice she must have gone down the drive, I gave chase, examining the trees on the right and left all the way along as I went, and fancying that from time to time I heard a rustle or caught ...ppse of a skirt. I passed Alice, returning hurriedly from the post. In reply to my questions she said that a woman had passed out of the gate as she came in. She had not noticed her particularly, supposing her to be a friend of one of the servants.

I did not tell her my suspicions, but Alice watched me curiously as I left her and passed out through the brewery yard and asked the man on duty at the door if he had seen a woman pass.

He said, "No," and looked at me suspiciously; but he called Higgins at my request. The night watchman, who now held me in much disfavor, asked me surlily what I wanted.

"I want you," I said, "to be on the lookout to-night. That strange woman is about the place again."

"You're all strange women about 'ere, it seems to me," he said, drily. "As to being on the lookout, p'raps I'm more on the lookout already than you think for."

And his little eyes gave me such a shrewd glance that it struck me more forcibly than ever that he knew at least as much about the mystery as any one.

"What's become of your detective?" I asked, quietly.

"He's all right."

"He comes here still?"

"Reg'lar."

But Mr. Higgins was keeping something back, I felt sure.

However, as it was a waste of time to try and worm out of the clever little cockney anything he wished to keep to himself, I had to withdraw, feeling that I had done all I could to put him on his guard.

The brewery, with its many sheds and outbuildings, had so many nooks and corners where a person might lie hidden for days, that it was with many misgivings that I glanced from right to left as I went back to the house, where Alice and Mrs. Ellis were only waiting for my return to go to bed.

Full of Harry's fears and my own, I did not go to bed, but slipping upstairs before the others, hid myself in the large wardrobe in Alice's room. I felt like an idiot when Alice came up and retired to bed without any suspicion of my intrusion.

Presently I heard by her regular breathing that she was asleep; and feeling cold, cross and ashamed of my escapade, I was debating whether I should not creep quietly out and go to my room, when a faint noise of the door handle made me hold my breath. A little more soft fumbling, and I knew that some person had entered the room.

Should I leap out and seize the intruder? Should I keep quiet and see what happened? I decided on the latter course, for the main reason that I was afraid, though of what I scarcely knew.

Some one was moving about very softly in the darkness, for Alice's night light was not burning, as usual, by the bedside. Then I heard, as I held my breath, a hand stealthily drawing back the bedclothes.

Build Up.

When the system is run down a person comes an easy prey to Consumption or Scrofula. Many valuable lives are saved by using Scott's Emulsion as soon as a decline in health is observed.

A twelve year old boy at Parma has just had his heart washed. He was suffering from acute sericarditis, and his doctor, using an instrument invented by Prof. Riva, drew off the purulent serous matter in the sac, and then washed the heart and its serofibrous covering with a solution of biborate of soda. The boy recovered rapidly.

It Saved Our Child.

"My little daughter, three and a half year old, suffered three years with Eczema. Her little body was covered with the itching rash, and doctors did no good. Four boxes of Chase's Ointment entirely cured and saved our child. Her skin is clear and not a sign of rash is to be seen." Andrew Aiton, Hartland, N. B. Mr. Aiton is one of thousands benefitted by this unfailing cure for piles and skin diseases.

Kaiser Wilhelm's artistic tendencies have broken out in clothes. He designed the hunting costume which the Empress wears when she accompanies him on his shooting trips, while one he made up for himself pleases him so much that he has had a bronze statuette cast of himself clad in it and gun in hand.

Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Chase's Pills have gained popularity because they are a specific for the uric acid condition, prevent Bright's disease, cure Rheumatism and all Catarrhal conditions of the Kidneys and Bladder. They do this because they possess remarkable alterative, tonic and deuretic properities, exerting a wonderfully soothing influence on irritated or inflamed mucos membrance of the kidneys or bladder. One pill a dose. 25 a box. The cheapest medicine in the world.

The Constantinople correspondent of the London Post says: "It is officially announced here that Mr. Terrell, the United States minister, has not for the last 10 months mentioned to the porte the passage of a guardship through the Dardenelles. In fact cordial relations exist between the United States and Turkey.

Completely Knocked Out.

"I was so much run down I had to give up work, and I felt as if life was not worth living," writes Wm. W. Thompson, Zephyr, Ont. "I took Scott's Sarsaparilla and am now feeling as I did years ago." Scott's Sarsaparilla tones up the entire system, purifies the blood, and eradicates rheumatic and scrofulous poisons. Ask for Scott's and get it.

Sir William Vernon Harcour has written a letter to an enquirer, in which he says he shares the general regret at Lord Roseberry's retirement from the leadership. Sir William adds:—"This will be news to those wiseacres who are so assidiously trying to prove my hostility and rancorous

In a surprisingly short time. It's a scientific certainty, tried and true, soothing and healing in its effects.

W. C. McCOMBER & SON, Bouchette, Que., report in a letter that Pyny-Pectoral cured Mrs. C. Garceau of chronic cold in chest and bronchial tubes, and also cured W. G. McComber of a long-standing cold.

MR. J. H. HUTTY, Chemist, 528 Yonge St., Toronto, writes: "As a general cough and lung syrup Pyny-Pectoral is a most invaluable preparation. It has given the utmost satisfaction to all who have tried it, many having spoken to me of the benefits derived from its use in their families. It is suitable for old or young, being pleasant to the taste. Its sale with me has been wonderful, and I can always recommend it as a safe and reliable cough medicine."
