They were prepared to fully support an exhaustive survey and study of cattle marketing in the province.

"After considering fully our position, it was decided to act on this suggestion, and accordingly, the formal application forms were completed in May — about one year ago — and filed with the director of resources for routine processing with the ARDA, authority at Ottawa. We were optimistic, of course, that since the suggestion for this study had come from provincial and federal resources development authorities, there would be no delays in activating the study.

NO REPORT OF STUDY

"To date, we have received no report of such a study, and, in fact, our latest information is that no unconditional decision has yet been taken in regard to our application," the association president reported.

"This, then, gentlemen, is where the whole matter stands at the moment," he concluded.

Mr. Dalenback suggested that the whole question of a marketing yard is a part of the study that is being made by ARDA, in the province.

Mr. Lockerby added that producers are also at fault because they do not support their own organizations sufficiently to make them effective. They can be effective only in proportion to the degree of positive involvement of those whom the organization is intended to serve, he said.

Directors for the various counties are: Kings, Donald MacQuarrie, Rosemeath; Jack MacKinnon, Brooklyn; and either Russell Buell, Abney, or Clif Reid, Rollo Bay; Queens, Cliff Holmes, Kingston; William Hayden, Cherry Valley; Albert Orr, New Glasgow; Prince — Clair Mayhew, Margate; Herbert Matthews, Alberton; Max Thompson, Lower Tryon.

ried a news release stating that ARDA had turned down the stock yard proposal. Prior to this press announcement, no official notification had been received by our association regarding the matter, and your board immediately undertook an investigation of the whole situation, by conference, correspondence, and telephone," Mr. Lockerby stated.

"Our investigations brought brought forth many curious factors: detailing of these at this time could accomplish no useful purpose. Suffice it to say that the directors were forced to conclude that the ARDA, authority was not prepared at this time, to give support to the stock yard proposal."

In subsequent meetings and negotiations, Mr. Lockerby continued, "we were advised by the provincial director of marketing, research, and resources development, that the ARDA, administration was interested in the project, but suggested that a more complete feasibility study should be made, and that they

KEITH KENNEDY looks at a portion of the 11,000 baby chicks he put in his poultry house at West Royalty a few days ago. When the chicks — they're all pullets — are in production Mr. Kennedy will have the largest egg production plant in the province. He expects to gather 10,000 eggs a day when they reach peak production.

Poultry Farm At West Royalty Soon To Be Largest In Province

Keith Kennedy, West Royalty, will have the largest egg production in the province when the 11,000 baby chicks he started to brood several days ago mature into laying hens in early autumn.

Mr. Kennedy came here to start to poultry farm at West Royalty in 1952. He had 500 layers to start with and increased that gradually to the 4,500 he had through last year.

This is almost a 250 percent increase and operation is so nearly completely mechanized that the native of Southport, P.E.I., expects to handle the labor or chore with one assistant.

12 CASES PER HOUR

They do their own grading at Kennedy Farm and they can handle an average of 12 cases of 360 dozen eggs per hour, he told The Guardian.

Despite the best that modern equipment can provide the human eye is still required for egg candling purposes, through the rest of the grading operation is mechanical.

But Mr. Kennedy believes that even that may be eliminated, in large measure at least, by further development.

Electronic equipment may be developed to do the candling job automatically, or the breeding of the chicks may possibly be advanced to the point where there will be very little candling needed in future laying flocks, Mr. Kennedy suggests.

It's an unusual sight to see 11,000 baby chicks in the one large pen. The hot-water-heated brooder is 144 feet long, and there are thousands of the baby chicks on either side of it.

Baby chicks are so attractive mostly anyone would appreciate them, but Keith Kennedy gets a thrill out of every stage of the poultry operation, he said. "Otherwise I wouldn't be in it." A mechanical engineer from McGill University—he took his degree in science from Acadia—he had been practicing his profession in California for about three years, when he and Mrs. Kennedy—she's a Montreal girl—suddenly decided to head for the island.

MAKING MONEY

Mr. Kennedy was making money in his chosen profession but suddenly he decided that the rat-race of rush hour traffic just wasn't worth it. It took him an hour to get to work in the morning. It required one and one-half hours to get home in the evening.

Coming back home he started modestly in the business of egg production. Last year he decided to install all of the equipment and modern labor-saving devices available with his 4,500-hen flock. It was either prove the idea was workable, or get out of the business, he said.

Apparently the idea did prove economically sound, for he's headed for another production year with the 250 percent increase in capacity.

He finds the operation a challenge, notes that the competition is tremendously keen—there's no comparison with 1952—and really enjoys it.

Legion Branch In Summerside Has Much To Celebrate Today

SUMMERSIDE — The George R. Prokes V.C. branch of the Royal Canadian Legion here celebrates its fifth anniversary today.

The home, erected at a cost of $200,000, officially opened its doors Feb. 6, 1960, and since then has contributed much towards community projects. Major General Peakes, then minister of national defence, was in attendance at the official opening.

Shortly after the home opened its doors a sportsman's dinner was held with a large number of national sports celebrities in attendance. Again in 1962 the home held a sportsman's dinner and the proceeds of the affair went towards the purchase of football uniforms for Summerside High School.

This is only one of the many projects in which the home has engaged since its opening. It has sponsored sports and in hockey a Legion-sponsored junior team brought a Maritime hockey crown in 1963-64 and this year emerged with the Island title.

In the realm of baseball last year a junior team brought home a Maritime title after having won the Island championship the previous year.

ANNUAL DONATION

The home also contributes $1,000 per year to the Prince County Hospital and last year made a donation of $5,000 to the hospital extension fund. Two $500 student scholarships are also given each year by the branch.

Membership last year was the highest in the history of the branch with a total of 611 regular members and 245 social members.

It also has an active ladies' auxiliary with a membership of 75 at the present. During the course of a year the auxiliary, which will be celebrating its 30th anniversary this June, serves in the vicinity of 10,000 meals.

Chairman of the building committee in 1960 was Mercier Mulens and that same year he was named president of the branch. Assisting him on the project was Joe Clark, Lorne Monkley, Keith
