PRIDE IN THE PULPIT.—John Bunyan had a great dread of spiritual pride; and once, after he had preached a very fine sermon, and his friends crowded round to shake him by the hand, while they expressed the utmost admiration of his eloquence, he interrupted them, saying: "Ay! you need not remind me of that, for the devil told me of it before I was out of the pulpit!"

CAUGHT.—A good story is told of Baron Platt, who, when once visiting a penal institution, inspected the treadmill with the rest, and being practically disposed, the learned judge philanthropically trusted himself on the treadmill, desiring the warden to set it in motion. The machine was accordingly adjusted, and his lordship began to lift his feet. In a few minutes, however, he had quite enough of it, and called to be released, but this was not so easy.—"Please, my lord," said the man, "you can't get off. It's set for twenty minutes; that's the shortest time we can make it go." So the judge was in duress until his "term" expired.

BAD MEMORIES.—The human memory is proverbially a leaky vessel, and sometimes, like a filter, it retains the refuse of the matter committed to its keeping, and suffers the more valuable portion to escape. There are specialities in forgetfulness which are exceedingly annoying, and make the parties afflicted by them look like fools in society. Yet these unfortunate peculiarities do not necessarily imply mental weakness. Persons of extraordinary intelligence have been known to forget their own names, and there are others who are as oblivious of dates as if they had never seen a numeral. A memory that clings like an ape's tail to whatever it embraces, is truly a great gift; and yet the faculty may belong to a simpleton incapable of usefully applying anything that it remembers.

ATTACHMENT OF A WIFE.—Daniel Webster once said:—"There is nothing upon this earth that can compare with the faithful attachment of a wife; no creature who, for the object of her love, is so indomitable, so persevering, so ready to suffer and die. Under the most depressing circumstances, woman's weakness becomes a mighty power, her timidity a fearless courage, all her shrinking and sinking passes away, and her spirit acquires the firmness of marble—admirable in its firmness—when circumstances drive her to put forth all her energies under the inspiration of her affections.

FAINTING.—Ladies do not faint in our days, at least but rarely. If one can trust a perfect mass of evidence, oral and written, syncope, at the end of the last century, and up to the 35th year of this was a habit with ladies. A story without a swoon was impossible until lately. Let us thank Heaven comfortably that our mothers, wives, and daughters have given up the evil habit of becoming cataleptic at the occurrence of anything in the least degree surprising.—The Gentleman's Magazine.—[The ladies do not lace quite so tightly as they used to do. Hence the improvement.

"If there is anybody under the canister of Heaven that I have in utter excrescence," says Mrs. Partington, "it is the slanderer, going about like a boy constructor, circulating his calomel upon honest folks."

FRIENDSHIP.—"That's a very stupid brute of yours, John" said a Scotch minister to his parishioner, the peat dealer, who drove his merchandise from door to door in a small cart drawn by a donkey; "I never see you but the creature is braying." "Ah, sir," said the peat dealer, "ye ken the heart's warm when friends meet."

If all the letters in the alphabet were to run a race, which letter would be first in starting?—The letter s.

A REASON FOR IT.

Judge Ray, the temperance lecturer, recently made the following statement in one of his efforts in Ohio:—

"All those who in youth acquire a habit of drinking whiskey, will at forty years of age be total abstainers or drunkards. No one can use whiskey for years in moderation. If there is a person in the audience before me whose own experience disputes this, let him make it known; I will account for it, or acknowledge that I am mistaken."

A tall, large man rose at this juncture, and folding his arms in a dignified manner across his breast, said,—

"I offer myself as one whose experience contradicts your statement."

"Are you a moderate drinker?" inquired the judge.

"I am."

"How long have you drank in moderation?"

"Forty years."

"And were never intoxicated?"

"Never."

"Well," remarked the judge, scanning his subject closely from head to foot, "yours is a singular case; yet I think it is easily accounted for. I am reminded by it of a little story. A colored man, with a loaf of bread and flask of whiskey, sat down to eat his humble meal by the bank of a clear stream. In breaking his bread some of the crumbs fell into the water and they were easily seized and eaten by the fish. That circumstance suggested to the darkey the idea of dipping the bread in the whiskey and feeding it to them. He tried it. It worked well. Some of the fish ate it, became drunk, and floated helplessly in the water. In this way he easily caught a large number. But the stream was a large fish very unlike the rest. It partook freely of the bread and whiskey, but with no perceptible effect. It was shy of every effort of the darkey to take it. He resolved to have it at all hazards, that he might learn its name and nature. He procured a net, caught it, carried it to a colored neighbor, and asked his opinion in the matter. The other surveyed the wonder a moment and then said,—

"Sambo, I understand's this case. Dat ar fish an' what dey call a mullet-head; it ain't got no brains."

"In other words," added the judge, "alcohol affects only the brain; and of course those having none may drink without injury."

The storm of laughter that followed drove the moderate drinker suddenly from the house.

A YOUNG FARMER of Cumnock, Ayrshire, considered that the daughter of a neighbour would suit him as a wife, and having made up his mind he proposed to the fair one without the usual preliminaries. The young lady's reply was, "Deed, Jamie; I'll take ye; but ye maun gie my duces o' courtin' for a' that."

A LAWYER who was sometimes forgetful, having been engaged to plead the cause of an offender, began by saying, "I know the prisoner at the bar, and he bears the character of being a most consummate and impudent scoundrel." Here somebody whispered to him that the prisoner was his client, when he immediately continued, "but what great and good man ever lived who was not calumniated by his contemporaries?"

Suburbs.—Precocious pupil:—"Please Miss Jones, what is the meaning of suburbs?"—Governess (who is extensively crinoline):—"The outskirts of a place."—Pupil, (seizing Miss J. by the dress):—"Then, Miss Jones, are these your suburbs?"

A wag that was journeying lately was put into an omnibus with a dozen persons of whom he did not know a single one. Turning a corner shortly after, however the omnibus was—upset. And then, said he, I found them all out.

A surgical journal speaks of a man who lived five years with a ball in his head. Jones says he has known ladies to live twice as long with nothing but balls in their heads.

AN IGNORAMUS had been sick, and on recovering was told by the doctor that he might take a little animal food.—"No, sir," said he; "I took your gruel easy enough, but hang me if I can your hay and oats."

Agricultural.

Haying. This is important work with farmers for the next month or six weeks. Don't let your grass injure by standing too long if you can avoid it. Every person carrying on a large farm, or even one of moderate size, should have one of the very best mowing machines. It is a very great help, and is to the farmer what the steam fire engine is to the freeman. It don't get tired, but works on cutting down the grass with great rapidity, no matter if it is clover, and badly laid and tangled.

Stir the soil.—The value of keeping all soils well stirred, among cultivated crops is not half understood by the great mass of our farmers. Don't let the land become hard and baked, but run your plough and cultivator through your crops and use the hand hoe thoroughly. The benefits derived from working the soil—keeping it mellow—admitting the air, etc., must not be overlooked if you wish good crops. Stir the soil.—Farm and Fireside.

Take Care of the Tools.—This is a trying time on farm machinery and shows the importance of good shelter for them, to avoid the alternate swelling and sprinkling by wet and dry. The cost of many a good and expensive machine may be saved by providing shelter for what you have, besides having the tools in better order for use when wanted. The backwardness of the season will crowd summer work into small space, and no time should be lost by not having every tool in the best of order and ready to put to use. The grindstone should always be kept housed from storms and suns, and handy to use. The sun shining on a stone hardens it in spots and causes it to wear unevenly, as does water soften it if one side is allowed to stand in the trough of water. Keep all edged tools, as well as hoes, shovels, spades, etc., sharp; more work can then be done and with much greater ease.

Hoeing. Look out and see that this work is done as much as possible before you begin haying, for depend upon it when you get into haying you will be very loth to stop for hoeing, and the weeds will get a great start so as to materially injure your crops.
