MR. CLARKIN AND THE SCHOOL BOY

The School Boy, like Mr. Clarkin, has no desire to enter into controversy, but to let the facts of history speak their own message. How does the case now stand?

1. Mr. Clarkin has not denied, nor can he, that Clement of Rome writing about the year 95 A.D. asserts that Paul's preaching extended to the "farthest limits of the west." Any one who can read the original will agree that the above phrase is justified by the meaning of the words. In quoting the original, Mr. Clarkin omits the article which is of some importance showing that it means not any boundary but the particular western boundary. In the learned Dr. Harmack's Leipzig edition of the text it reads, not as Mr. Clarkin gives it, "epi terma to dusesos ethion" but "epi to terma to dusesos ethion" "Terma," certainly means "the utmost limit," and "dusesos" is of figurative nature meaning "to set like a star in the west." Are we not then incorrect in translating it as the furthest boundary or limit of the west? In the opinion, therefore, of one who ought to know, St. Paul, did like a star, go on till he at last set in the western boundary of the Empire.

2. Mr. Clarkin has not denied, nor can he, that the above phrase in the Roman literature of the time meant Britain. To look at the map cannot change the meaning of the phrase as understood by those to whom it was addressed.

3. Neither does Mr. Clarkin assert it as a historical fact that Eleutherus Bishop of Rome was called Pope by the Church of his time. The church of that day knew nothing of the modern Papacy.

4. Mr. Clarkin has not denied the fact that Gregory Bishop of Rome who sent Augustine to England in 597 A.D., denounced as the forerunner of Antichrist any prelate calling himself universal Bishop, Hear the Bishops own words when he refused to allow him self to be called by such a "proud, superstitious, profane and blasphemous name." "Contrary to the Gospel and the Canons." "Whoever calls himself a universal priest or desires to be so called is the forerunner of Anti-Christ." When the Patriarch of Alexandria addressed him as universal Pope he replied, "I beg you will not to speak of my commanding since I know who I am and who you are. In dignity you are my brother, (an equal) in character, my father." The truth is, Gregory had no more power over the church of that day than the Archbishop of Canterbury has over the Church of England today. In outlying places where missions were opened up he, would send missionaries and of course would have jurisdiction over them, even after they became flourishing churches and had bishops of their own; but this is quite a different thing from the universal sway of an infallible Pope.

5. Mr. Clarkin does not deny that the British Church refused to acknowledge the supremacy of Augustine on the Bishop of Rome, but he says this was simply rebellion on the part of the British. It was no more rebellion than it would be if a Diocese of the Roman Church refused to submit to a Bishop of the English Church in our time. Those Bishops of the British Church had a perfect right to reject the authority of the Roman Church to which neither they nor their predecessors had ever submitted. They offered to cooperate with Augustine if he proved to be a humble Christian man, but when they found him proud and papal they rejected his overtures.

6. The only question Mr. Clarkin denies is that the British Church imprisoned Wilfrid for appealing to Rome in 662 A.D., but he allows Wilfrid was imprisoned by the King for thus appealing to the Bishop of Rome. There is, however, no doubt, that Wilfrid (even if it was the King who at first imprisoned him and which was consented to by the Church) was, after another further appeal to Rome excommunicated by the Church, and when the Bishop of Rome summoned the Archbishop of Canterbury to a conference about the matter he refused to attend.

Yours, etc., A. SCHOOLMEY.

THE POLICE MATTER.

Sir,—I have stood by the police of this city on more than one occasion, but never for one moment to countenance harsh or cruel treatment. Whilst I don't agree with all your correspondent "Justice" has written in your paper of two days ago, yet if half is true of the manner in which that young lad who was intoxicated was used, then I want to see an investigation before the stipendiary magistrate and the police committee. These poor fellows, yes I say poor fellows, become intoxicated according to law, and if they must be arrested let them be arrested according to law. I as one citizen will protect a drunken man so far as it is consistent with the circumstances. He has his rights as well as his sober brother that votes for open doors and free rum. I know not who the policemen are and I care not, if they are guilty of the offence as charged them, they should not be continued on the force one day.

DR. MACNEILL'S REMOVAL.

KENSINGTON, March 26—This community was surprised to hear, today, that Dr. MacNeill has sold his property here to Dr. D. McKay, and is to move in a few days to Charlottetown, where he purposes continuing the practice of his profession. Dr. MacNeill located here fifteen years ago after his graduation at McGill University, and from being a stranger he soon became known in a wide circle as a very skillful and attentive physician and surgeon.

Mr Geo Lees was a passenger in the train from the west this forenoon. Mr. Lees addressed a meeting at Granville, New London, last evening, on the subject of pork packing.

At the Hotel Davies, A J King, Halifax; Chas Nicholl, Montreal; T R North, Toronto; W S Davison, Halifax; Edith Cox; Morell; Thoyld Edmundson, Montreal; W Tweedy, Albert n; Geo W Hibbett, Georgetown.

Messrs Olive and Waring, Steamboat inspectors, will be passengers in the Stanley on Monday on return to St John. They made a special trip to Charlottetown to inspect the Northumberland and Princess in order that they might not interrupt the summer service for this purpose.

Advices from Tignish state that a Dr. Delaney, from Magdalen Island, has arrived there and it is strongly suspected that he has brought to the district a large supply of Liberal boodle. He will be closely watched. He is reported to be a "git of the deepest dye."

Herace Haszard Esq., President of the Board of Trade, returned from Ottawa this forenoon. He assures THE EXAMINER that there is no question as to the subsidy to the direct steamer, and of an improvement in our telegraphic arrangements. With regard to the second winter steamer, he says they went into the matter very thoroughly and he believes that in the near future the steamer will be forthcoming.

Hon. H. C. McDonald, Attorney-General, was a passenger on the Stanley today on return from Ottawa. Hon. Mr. Warburton stopped over at Quebec to transact some private business and will be home on Monday or Tuesday. Hon. Mr. Richards has gone to Boston and New York. Hon. Mr. McDonald informs THE EXAMINER that the delegates submitted a written statement of the claims of the province upon which arbitration was desired, and the government promised to give the matter their serious consideration.

—At the end of the Hackett trial the Chief Justice of Canada, Sir Henry Strong was constrained to say "I ADMIT THAT THE OFFENCE PROVED IN THE PRESENT CASE WAS OF A TRIVIAL AND UNIMPORTANT CHARACTER AND THE APPELLANT WAS ACQUITTED OF ALL THE OTHER CHARGES, of which the particulars contained a great many." Should not Mr. Hackett, then be returned to the position he occupied as a result of the general election?

—Referring to the Intercolonial railway it is reported that "the government printing offices are working night and day on supplementary tariffs, on less than one hundred of these, practically restoring the old rates, having been issued in the past ten or twelve days! Such a spectacle, we will guarantee, has never been witnessed on any other railway in Canada. Fresh batches of tariffs are coming out daily, and it is said if the department keeps on at the present rate for another week or two things will be so tangled up that a score of accountants will be required to unravel them."
