Expressing gratitude is something we are liable to forget all too easily.

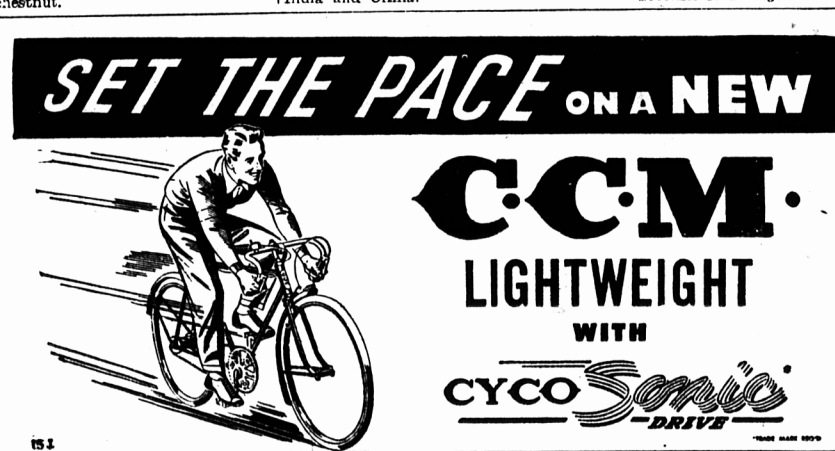

"In a parish in Japan lives an old couple who are very poor. No one seems to know just how old they are but how poor they are is quite clear! Long ago their only child abandoned them for an easier life and left them to be cared for by anyone who might take pity on them.

"At Christmas time they were given a few gifts. Among the latter was a cigar for the old man who thoroughly enjoys an occasional smoke. It must have been a rare luxury for him.

"Then one day after New Year's he gave to the parish priest a return gift. Since in Japan you must never look at a present in the company of the donor he brought it home. It was carefully wrapped in several folds of department store paper. He opened it and found half a cigar, half of the one which he had wrapped up for Christmas distribution. It was undoubtedly the best and most worthy gift the old man could offer.

"Expressing gratitude is something we are liable to forget all too easily. It is not that we are so ungrateful as we are thoughtless. But we should do more—by making a return gift. How small it is, has no significance if it comes from our heart—A prayer of thanks, a smile, a kind word—return gifts without price!"
