Lord Beaverbrook's Sunday Express suggested the possibility of a "final meeting" of the Princess and the pilot. Lady Hambleton, 22-year-old former Italian courtesan, declined to identify the other guests.

SEEMED CHANGED—The princess and Townsend last met openly last October, when Margaret announced publicly she was not marrying the divorced Second World War hero because of his job as British air attaché in Brussels. The princess, 25, tried to shake off the emotional strain of a romance that stirred the world by pitching into her royal duties with new vigor.

But Margaret has seemed changed to a great many of her friends. She has been especially careful to avoid giving occasion for rumors of a new romance.

Buckingham Palace broke precedent to spike two rumored romances before they had time to spread far—denying publicly in May that Margaret was becoming engaged to Prince Christian of Hanover and then scotching a marriage she was going to marry Prince Bertil of Sweden.

The palace had always in the past ignored rumors involving the private lives of members of the Royal Family.

Townsend, who has resigned his post as air attaché in Belgium on effective this fall, came back to England last week ostensibly to make plans for a round-the-world tour in a jeep.

Townsend told reporters a few days ago that though he had many offers of companionship on his jeep tour, some from women, he had decided to travel alone. He expects to start out in October and be gone 18 months.

The Sunday Express said: "No last-minute meeting before he sets out would be possible. In September the princess leaves Britain on a journey of her own—a tour of Africa and Mauritius"

Visiting Organist Gives Fine Recital

Mr. W. E. Fletcher, A. R. C. M., A. T. C. L. was heard in a delightful half hour recital last evening before the regular evening service of Trinity Church. Mr. Fletcher who is guest organist at Trinity during the month of July played six numbers including two of his own compositions. The church was almost filled to capacity for the recital and service of praise at which Rev. Dr. Ashford was guest preacher. Assisting in conducting the service were Rev. Howard Christie and Rev. A. S. Weir, D. D.

Taking as his subject, "Never Marry When In Love", the preacher pointed out that the matter of falling in love was not in itself sufficient reason for marriage. He concluded by urging his congregation to take Christ into their lives as a remedy for solving their daily problems.

Dr. Ashford will be the preacher at Trinity for the remaining Sundays during this month.

Massachusetts Leads Way In Housing Elderly People

By DICK SINNOTT

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — A $15,000,000 housing program for elderly Massachusetts residents is making some of the state's senior citizens feel they're "sharing a bit of heaven."

The first of 87 projects designed for residents over 65 years old opened its 24-apartment doors to 30 persons last January. Known as Carey Court, it is a two-story brick building nestled in a settled neighborhood on a shady street two blocks from the main thoroughfare.

The oldest tenant is 87; the youngest 65. The average age of five married couples, 18 widows and one widower is 74.

LIKE TONIC

Since moving into their compact comfortable three room apartments the old folks at home say their environment is "like a spring tonic."

"I'm 81," says Mrs. Gertrude Hodge, a retired watchmaker, "but for the last five months I haven't felt a day over 30."

The Massachusetts State Housing Board put its housing design for the elderly on the drawing boards two years ago after studying plans for older age housing in all parts of the world.

In its survey the housing board learned that its plans must contain sound psychological as well as sound building aspects. Chief among the psychological factors the board discovered, was the older person's tenacity to cling to old associations. As they grow older, their pictures, furniture, friends and habits become ever more important.

FAMILIAR PLACE

Carey Court is built in familiar surroundings. The old folks can still shop at the old store, visit the same library and worship in their own church.

"Everything has changed but nothing is different, only newer and nicer," says Mrs. Helen Chamberlain, 70, a retired nurse. The plan calls for a minimum rental of $41.50 a month on each apartment. Rent includes heat and water. The annual income ceiling is $3,125 for single persons and $3,750 for couples.

Each apartment is similar but color schemes vary.

Older folks don't see so well, so glass has been used abundantly throughout the development. Entrance halls are glass-enclosed and king-sized picture windows invite you to three times normal daylight into living and bedrooms.

LOWER STEPS

Each apartment is laid out like the numeral seven. Entering, a "V" or steps into the living room, which runs the length of the 7. To the left is a kitchen, through the hall is a bedroom and beyond that is a bathroom. A fire escape leads from the bedroom of each upstairs apartment.

The housing board discovered that old folks frequently have difficulty climbing stairs—not so at Carey Court. Steps are lower and residents are not required to lift more than seven inches. Exclusion of front entrances, thresholds have been abolished.

Bathrooms have built-in seats and grab bars.

Kitchens have sink, stove and refrigerator arranged side by side within a five-foot area. Under the sink is a handy disposal; a roomy pantry closet with low shelves.

ALL ELECTRIC

Because older people often have difficulty detecting odors, all appliances are electric. Other safeguards are luminous light switches, triple lighting and "trouble bells," one in the bedroom, another in the living room, are the apartment watchdogs. If a tenant is suddenly stricken or a suspicious noise is heard, he can summon outside help merely by pressing the bell button.

So far the "trouble bell" hasn't been used, but "it gives you a nice feeling to know that help is as near as the next apartment," says Mrs. Isabelle McQuillan, 74, a retired watchmaker.

Bill Burke, 71, a retired fruit and produce dealer, thinks the development's major asset is the "feeling of independence it gives."

"Most people our age have little to look forward to," says Burke. "But we have a bright, busy life. We know we haven't been forgotten. Yes, we've been helped, but they haven't taken any of our freedom away."

Hungarian Girl Abandons Boy Friend To Stay In The West

INGOLSTADT, West Germany (Reuters)—A lovely Hungarian girl who was unexpectedly flown to West Germany when Hungary's anti-Communists captured the airliner said here Sunday she abandoned marriage plans in Hungary to stay in the West.

But a Hungarian factory executive who joined her in asking Western asylum after making friends with her on the plane said it now was essential 19-year-old Iona Ontol would marry him.

Slim, dark-haired Iona, a factory worker who asked asylum in West Germany, said she would have been married in Hungary in about two months but was giving it up because "it would not have been much of a life."

"Both my husband and I would have had to work and we would have had no home of our own," she said.

She and Bela Horvath, a departmental chief in the Budapest textile factory where Iona worked, had no inkling of the escape attempt planned by seven Communist passengers on the plane flying inside Hungary. They were taking a routine trip as delegates to a textile exhibition and said they made friends for the first time during the flight.

TALKED OF FLIGHT

After the seven anti-Communists had captured the plane in a wild mid-air battle Friday and flew it to West Germany, Iona and Horvath discussed a West German offer of asylum and decided to take it together.

Asked whether they intended to marry, Horvath said: "Not at present—but it is possible."

Horvath himself was slugged with an iron bar when the seven anti-Communists struck out left hand, aiming to knock out a secret policeman known to be on board the plane.

An American intelligence officer said he thought two more of the 19 persons on board the airliner were still thinking about staying in West Germany. But police officers denied this.

Police Inspector Rupert Zwigg said Iona, Horvath and the seven original escapees will probably be taken to Valka refugee camp today, near Nuremberg. He said there was no doubt asylum would be granted the nine persons, after which they could leave the camp and seek work.

Three of the original escapees have expressed a desire to join the U.S. Air Force.

A hospital official said the secret policeman on board the plane, husky Ilek Doctor, 37, had suffered a skull fracture when the seven escapees overpowered him in a savage fight. But he said the policeman's life was not in danger. Other passengers who wanted to return to Hungary had also suffered fractures and might not be able to leave for some time, he said.

Building Fire Floods Subway In New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Firemen Sunday poured water for the second straight day on the gutted vacant building once occupied by Wanamaker's department store. Tons of water cascaded into subways, crippling service in two major lines.

At least 125 persons, most of them firemen, were hurt as the spectacular fire swept through the ornate five-story structure for years a landmark at Astor Place in downtown Manhattan. The building was abandoned by Wanamaker's last December and was being demolished. The blaze apparently started Friday night, but firemen were not called until late Saturday.

Water from fire towers and hoses, flowing at a rate of 100,000 gallons a minute, gushed through the building into the Interboro Rapid Transit and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit subways on either side of the building. Both lines connect Manhattan and Brooklyn via the Wall Street financial district.

The water washed out the roadbed and mounted to a depth of 15 feet in the IRT tunnel. Some 400 passengers from three stalled trains were helped to safety by firemen using ladders.

30 DAYS IDLE

City officials said a section of the Lexington Avenue IRT line may be out of service for about 30 days as the result of the flooding. Alternate subways are available but riders faced an added crush in getting to work Monday morning.

Acting Fire Chief Arthur J. Masset said of the blaze: "That is the worst fire I have ever had in 34 years."

It was discovered early Saturday night. Five alarms brought some 300 firemen and 55 pieces of fire apparatus to the scene, and thousands of spectators gathered in the nearby fire-lit streets to watch.

Flames shot through the windows and roof of the building. A

50,000 See Huge Orange Parade

TORONTO (CP)—An estimated 50,000 persons turned out Saturday to watch Toronto's four-mile long parade of Orangemen, believed to have been the biggest ever.

Officials estimated that between 8,000 and 10,000 Orangemen marched or rode in the parade itself. They represented more than 200 lodges marching to the music of 60 bands.

Lynch Surprises Rifle Mates At Bisley Shoot

BISLEY, England (Reuters) — LAC Vic Lynch of Mount Uniacke, N.S., shooting in pouring rain with a contingent from the 1st Canadian Air Division stationed in Germany, surprised his teammates Saturday by making the highest possible score of 50.

They were surprised because, said Sgt. Slim Hargreaves from Regina, "it is only six months ago that he asked me how to put the bolt back in a rifle and declared that he had never fired a service rifle."

Several British competitors also scored 50 in the match for the Daily Telegraph prize and a tie shoot will be held this week.

Fourteen marksmen made the next highest 49 including Lieut. Edson L. Warner of Lennoxville, Que., a member of the official Canadian team.

Officials Claim Potato Shortage Only Temporary

WASHINGTON AP — Agriculture department experts said today there isn't going to be a potato famine in the U.S.

"We were commenting on reports from several retailers that there was a possibility of a severe shortage."

The experts said today there has been a temporary decline in the movement of new-crop potatoes to market in some areas because of acreage reductions for early summer varieties and because rains have interfered with harvesting.

The officials said there should be ample supplies soon. This prospect has been reflected, they said, in declines in wholesale prices in recent days from temporary high peaks reached last week.

EARLY CROP DOWN

The early summer crop is down 16 per cent from last year but the department has forecast production of the late summer crop will be seven per cent above that of a year ago. This crop may be a little later than normal in moving to market because plantings in some U.S. areas were delayed by a late spring.

The fall crop, by far the largest of all the varieties, is being grown on a total acreage only 0.4 per cent below last year's acreage. Last year's fall crop was larger than consumers required. Surplus supplies were diverted to livestock feeds, starch and other by-products under a government subsidy program.
