

MR. AND MRS. JAMES CONNOLLY

MR. AND MRS. KEVIN COSTELLO

Double Wedding Ceremony Is Solemnized At Basilica

A double wedding was solemnized in August at Saint Dunstan's Basilica when Marie Lillian and Lorraine Anne, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Redmond, became the brides, respectively of James Joseph Connolly, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Connolly, and Kevin Francis Costello, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Costello, all of Charlottetown. Rev. Gerald Tingley officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The organist, Mrs. Joseph Dougan, accompanied James Flanagan as he sang appropriate hymns.

The brides were given in marriage by their father.

Marie Redmond wore a floor-length gown of nylon crystal with Empire bodice of nylon lace, long lily-point sleeves, and detachable train. Her headpiece was a crown of three organza roses holding in place her bouffant shoulder-length veil. She wore a pearl necklace, a gift of the groom, and carried a cascade bouquet of tallisman roses. Her sister, Gail, as maid of honour, and the groom's niece, Terry Connolly as flower girl, wore identically styled floor-length gowns of tangerine crystal charm, with matching floral headpieces. The maid of honour carried a nosegay of tangerine-tinted carnations, and the flower girl a basket of tangerine-tinted mums.

Bernard MacKinnon, brother-in-law of the groom was best man, and ushers were his brothers, Michael and Charles Connolly.

Lorraine Redmond was gowned in a floor-length sheath of Guipure lace, fashioned with a fitted bodice and long tapered sleeves. The train was also of lace, and the bouffant shoulder-length veil was held by a single organza rose. She carried a cascade bouquet of pale yellow roses. Her pearl earrings were a gift of the groom. Attending her as maid of honour was Marie Costello, sister of the groom, in a long gown of green crystal charm with matching floral headpiece, and carrying a nosegay of green-tinted carnations. The flower girl, Brenda Roberts, a cousin of the bride, wore a dress alike in style and colour to Miss Costello's and carried a basket of green-tinted shasta mums.

Terry Cullen, the bride's neptew was ring-bearer.

Mr. Costello's best man was Frank MacDonald, and ushers were James MacLean and the bride's brother, Edmond Redmond.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Community Centre, with Harry Callaghan as master of ceremonies. The mother of the two brides received in a royal blue gown with matching hat and a brown squirrel cape. Her corsage was of blue-tinted carnations. Mr. Costello's mother was in beige with matching lace jacket, beige and brown accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations. Mr. Connolly's mother wore an aqua flowered dress, white accessories and a corsage of aqua tinted flowers.

The toast to Mr. Connolly's bride was proposed by his brother-in-law, Wilfred Cullen, and the toast to the new Mrs. Costello, by her uncle, Henry Bourgeois. Dorothy Smith and Cheryl Connors were in charge of the respective guest books.

On a honeymoon trip through the Maritimes, Mrs. Connolly wore a pink three-piece suit with matching picture hat, and black accessories, and a corsage of pink carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Connolly are now residing in Charlottetown. Mr. and Mrs. Costello travelled to the Pocono Mountains, Penn., and the New England States, the bride wearing a gold three-piece suit with brown picture-hat, brown accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The couple are now residing in Halifax where the groom is studying for a master's degree in social work, and the bride is an X-ray technician at the Halifax Infirmary.

Out of province guests were: Mrs. Joyce Kelly, Brandon, Man. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bourgeois, Mr. and Mrs. Armond Bourgeois, Moncton, N. B.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Connolly, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. Mary Donnelly Toronto, Ont.; Bernadette Costello, Hamilton, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Michael McNiece, Matawan, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Halpenny, Boston, Mass.; Mrs. Elizabeth McGuigan, Halifax, N. S. (Photo by C. D. MacKay)

MARY HAWORTH

Woman Fears Romance After Three Divorces

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Twenty years ago, at age 15, I foolishly married Guy, 19, to escape from my harsh and cruel father. It was a mistake and we were divorced 18 months later, after which I moved to California to start anew.

At 19, I married Stan, a brilliant music student whose mother gave him a handsome allowance until the completion of his studies, whereupon she made him financially independent with a gift of a great deal of real estate.

His mother asked me to sign a quit-claim to any share in the gift, which I did unthinkingly, although I was expecting his child. Soon afterward Stan suffered a nervous breakdown from which he never recovered. I was allotted $60 monthly for the child's support.

Again I started to rebuild my life. Six years later, in 1959, I married Lee, a charming intellectual architect. Meanwhile, I had been working and investing in rental property. Shortly after our marriage Lee quit his drafting job to write a book. By 1962 I was weary of the business world and begged Lee to take a job and write in his spare time.

Instead, he obtained title to one-half of my rental property, which California law permitted him to do, and left for Europe, to live on the proceeds and write, he said. Thus in 1963 my third marriage ended. Again I returned to work.

I built a house in the Los Angeles suburbs and joined "Parents Without Partners" to make new friends. Then last year I met Carlos, 25, a Greek whose able family practically adopted me and my son, who is now 13.

Because Carlos is 25 and I am 35, I hesitate to encourage his affection for me. Although he is honest, industrious and a vital part of my life, I wonder if I am making another mistake.

I've come to Athens (Greece) to make my home. Carlos writes to me daily and his latest letter says he can't live with me. I am sure he will propose marriage and I do love him. Have I the will to fail?

Should I say "No" and perhaps live to regret it? Or should I say "Yes" and perhaps suffer the same consequences as before?

DEAR S.W.: As I see the picture, the losses you've suffered in a series of marriages aren't so much due to a will to fail, as they are the result of your having got off on the wrong foot in relation to life as a whole when you eloped at age 15 to escape your father's rule.

Your mistake of that time can't be charged wholly to your account, however. Your father's blundering misuse of guardianship powers surely contributed to your ill-advised actions.

Even if he weren't the fearsome tyrant you felt he was then, still your unstable history to date signifies that your character formation was twisted at the source, namely while subject to your parents' influence. So don't downgrade yourself

IDA BAILEY ALLEN

Potatoes With Cheddar Starred In A Casserole

BY IDA BAILEY ALLEN
Do you wash and dry dishes really clean? "Of course I do," I can almost hear you exclaim from coast-to-coast. Well, let's take a few moments to check up. Do you always:

1. Wash dishes, silver, glassware, etc., in clean, warm water containing a good detergent. The water should be as hot as the hands can comfortably stand. Do you continue to wash with a brush until clean to sight and touch?
2. Rinse twice in clean hot water?
3. Then sanitize by immersing dishes and utensils again in clean hot water, this time at 170 degrees or hotter for at least one minute. A thermometer is necessary for checking the temperature of the sanitizing rinse-water. Temperature cannot be determined accurately by touch, your hands would be burned.
4. Place in scalded wire rack to drip-dry, and cover with clean towels or paper towels to avoid dust or fly specks.

Do you follow this routine every time, step by step? "No, it's too much work, but I always take time to dry the unduly today by assuming that you've authored your checkered course unaided, and must, of faithful necessity, continue to make a mess of things.

Evidence indicates that you have a weakness for weakling males, pairing off with "Mom's boy" types who expect to draw strength from your devotion, without involving themselves in a mutually supportive partnership. They break away in distaste, it seems, when they discover your hopes of being man-mothered, as it were, by them.

About Carlos: I believe you are heading towards a fourth experiment in heartache if you take him seriously, as the realistic answer to your needs of love.

The only fair answer is: Get firsthand intensive psychoanalytic help, in fetching your psychological self forward from childish confusion to mature clear self-understanding, before you venture into marriage again.

ELLEN'S DIARY

The Long Vacation Over College Students Depart

Now folks on farms hope for the perfect harvest weather. Is there promise of it in the sunset? In the night's stars? In the sunrise?

"Dear me, but when I come to think of it, I can't say that I ever see the sunrise," a housewife offered with a chuckle the other day. "Unless" she added, "we're going off on a trip, and give it a thought. What's a sunrise?" she quipped.

It is a lovely thing these fine days here in our valley. Even though we should by rights be getting on with first chores, and the affairs of James' breakfast, so that he can get to his day's work, we stop a long minute to watch it brighten and extend that rift in the sky, above the line of wooded hills to the east. Presently it sets reflecting jewels in windows up the farmlands, sparkling gems at the first touch of its beams. It gilds the hilltops and, reaching across the shadows in the dip of valley, lightens the farther slopes. This is the sunny time there—the morning. By afternoon many of those sunlit areas are in shadow.

"Now when the morning-damp lifts, I'd say we'd get a spell at the harvest today," James said, pausing at the doorstep to take in the weather's signs. "Yes," he nodded. "And when it comes we should try to keep the combine moving. There's not too long a day now between dew-rise and dewfall, and there are a nice few pieces in all—to be saved."

"This afternoon then, gave the perfect harvest weather, with a caressing sun-filled breeze on the fields, and that mellow sheen of the harvest-tide over all. "Everything is so lovely now"

"There are always the partings—a great grandmother, a pretty, snow-haired lady of many summers, commented recently. "They begin with a little one's first school day. We give them away then—send them out into the world. Yes, the first parting is that morning they go." "Come, Ellen," James says, lifting the latch on the stairfoot door. "See the time! And remember?" he nods. "We are into the harvest days now!"

Until tomorrow . . . Diary . . . Good-night.

each layer with 1-3 of the Cheddar cheese, onion and green pepper mixed together. Finish by topping with bread crumbs, stirred with melted butter. Bake 45 min. in mod. oven, 375 degrees F., or until bubbling hot and lightly browned.

Thin White Sauce: In a 1-qt. double-boiler top, melt 3 tbs. butter or margarine. Remove from heat, add 3 tbs. flour and stir until smooth. Gradually stir in 3 c. milk; cook-stir until the sauce boils. Add 1 1/2 tsp. salt and 1/2 tsp. pepper (white preferred). Then cook 5 min. over hot water in the double-boiler.

Note: Fresh milk; or reconstituted dry skim milk crystals; or reconstituted evaporated milk may be used in making white sauce.

THE CHEF'S COLD CUTS PLATTER

Mesdames: Several varieties of cold cuts should be used, for color and flavor contrast. They should be arranged on the platter so they look important. To do this, center the platter with a low mound of lightly tossed shredded crisp lettuce. Arrange alternating kinds of cold cuts on this, such as salami, liver-wurst, veal loaf and bologna. Edge the lettuce mound with crisp rosy-red radishes, cherry tomatoes, and cucumber sticks. Place interesting condiments or relishes on a tray near by: such as Dijon mustard, Pizza catsup, horseradish-mustard or the "As You Like It Relish" columned yesterday. Un bon success!
