

TWO FAIR DECEIVERS.

Concluded.

It was noticeable that as the ladies became confidential with their lovers, they had less to say to each other; and it began at last to be quite evident to the real widow that the play must end for the present, or the denouncement would come prematurely. Circumstances favored her determination. One night Clementine with a radiant face came into her friend's room, and said, 'Fan, I have something to tell you. Cleve has asked me to marry him.'

'Now, Clement you have told him all; I know you have.'

'Not a word, Fan. He still believes me the widow Clare.'

'Did you accept him?'

'Conditionally. I am to give him a final answer when we go to the city in October. You are going to New York this winter are you not?'

'Yes. Our little play progresses finely. John Selden asked me to be his wife to-night.'

'I told you men think and act in pairs.'

'John is a noble fellow. I pretended to think his cousin had illused, he defended him until I was ashamed of myself; absolutely said, Clement, that you were a sufficient excuse for Mr. Clare's will. Then he blamed his own past idleness so much, and promised if I would only try and endure 'the slings and arrows' of your outrageous temper, Clement, for two years longer, he would have made a home for me in which I could be happy. Yes, Clement, I should marry John Selden if we had not a five dollar bill between us.'

'I wish Cleve had been a little more explicit about his money affairs. However, there is time enough yet. When they leave to-morrow, what shall we do?'

'We will remain here another month; Leveie will have the house ready for me by that time. I have written to him about furnishing the parlors.'

So next day the lovers parted, with many promises of constant letters and future happy days together. The interval was long and dull enough; but it passed, and one morning both gentlemen received notes of invitation to a small dinner party at the widow Clare's mansion in — street. There was a good deal of dressing for this party. Cleve wished to make his entrance into his future home as became the prospective master of a million and a half of money, and John was desirous of not suffering in Clement's eyes by any comparison with the other gentlemen who would probably be there.

Scarcely had they entered the drawing room when the ladies appeared, the true widow Clara no longer in the unassuming toilet she had hitherto worn, but magnificent in white crepe lisse and satin, her arms and throat and pretty head flashing with sapphires and diamonds. Her companion had assumed now the role of simplicity, and Cleve was disappointed with the first glance at her plain white Chambery gauze dress.

John had seen nothing but the bright face of the girl he loved and the love-light in her eyes. Before she could speak he had taken both her hands and whispered, 'Dearest and best and loveliest Clement.'

Her smile answered him first. Then she said: 'Pardon me, Mr. Selden, but we have been in masquerade all summer, and now we must unmask before seal life begins. My name is not Clementine Marat, but Fanny Clara. Cousin John, I hope you are not disappointed.' Then she put her hand into the conservatory to finish their explanation.

Mr. Cleve Sullivan found himself at that moment in the most trying circumstance of his life. The real Clementine Marat stood looking down at a flower on the carpet, and evidently expecting him to resume the tender attitude he had been accustomed to bear toward her. He was a man of quick decisions where his own interests were concerned, and it did not take him half a minute to review his position and determine what to do. This plain blonde girl he could marry; she had deceived him too—he had a sudden and severe spasm of mortality; his confidence was broken; he thought it was very poor sport to play with a man's most sacred feeling; he had been greatly disappointed and grieved, etc., etc.

Clementine stood perfectly still, with her eyes fixed on the carpet and her cheeks gradually flushing, as Cleve made his awkward accusations. She gave him no help and she made no defence, and it soon becomes embarrassing for a man to stand in the middle of a large drawing-room and talk to himself about any girl. Cleve felt it so.

'Have you done, sir?' at length she asked, lifting to his face a pair of blue eyes scintillating with scorn and anger. 'I promise you my final answer to your suit when we met in New York. You have spared me the trouble. Good evening, sir.'

Clementine showed to no one her disappointment, and she probably soon recovered from it. Her life was full of many other pleasant plans and hopes, and she could well afford to let a selfish lover pass out of it. She remained with her friend until after the marriage between her and John Selden had been consummated; and then Cleve saw her name among the list of passengers sailing on one particular day for Europe. As John and his bride left on the same steamer, Cleve supposed, of course, she had gone in their company.

'Nice thing it would have been for Cleve Sullivan to marry John Selden's wife's maid, or something or other! John was always a lucky fellow. Some fellows are always unlucky in love affairs—I always am.'

Half a year afterward he reiterated this statement with a great deal of unnecessary emphasis. He was just buttoning his gloves preparatory to start for his afternoon's drive, when an old acquaintance hailed him.

'Oh, it's that fool Belmar,' he muttered; 'I shall have to offer him a ride. I thought he was in Paris—Hello Belmar, when did you get back! Have a ride?'

'No, thank you. I have promised my wife to ride with her this afternoon.'

'Your wife! When were you married?'

'Last month, in Paris.'

'And the happy lady was—'

'Why, I thought you know; every one is talking about my good fortune. Mrs. Belmar is old Paul Marat's only child.'

'What?'

'Miss Clementina Marat. She brings me nearly $3,000,000 in money and real estate, and a heart beyond all price.'

'How on earth did you meet her?'

'She was travelling with Mr. and Mrs. Selden—you know John Selden. She has lived with Mrs. Selden ever since she left school; they were friends when they were girls together.'

Cleve gathered up his reins, and nodding to Mr. Frank Belmar, drove at a fine rate up the Avenue and through the Park. He could not trust himself to speak to any one, and when he did, the remark which he made to himself in strict confidence was not flattering. For once Mr. Cleve Sullivan told Mr. Cleve Sullivan that he had been badly punished, and that he well deserved it. Harper's Weekly

CATARRH. Constitutional Catarrh Remedy CURES CATARRH.

Hear what a Reverend Gentleman says of the Constitutional Remedy.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., Brockville, Ont.:—
DEAR SIR—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long. I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your agent came to Walkertown in August, 1876, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head. A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,
W. TINDALL, Methodist Minister.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY SINCE THE CREATION OF MAN, OR SINCE THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE CHRISTIAN ERA.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS are acknowledged by all who have used them, to act quicker than any other plaster they ever before tried, and that one of these plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different: the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

Physicians in all ages have thoroughly tested and well known the effect of Capsicum; and it has always been more or less used as a medical agent for an outward application; but it is only of very recent date that its advantages in a porous plaster have been discovered. Being, however, convinced of the wonderful cures effected by DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS, and their superiority over all other plasters, they now actually prescribe them, in their practice, for such diseases as rheumatism, pain in the side and back, and all such cases as have required the use of plasters or liniments. After you have tried other plasters and liniments, and they have failed, and you want a certain cure, ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER. You can hardly believe your own convictions of its wonderful effects. Although powerful and quick in its action, you can rely on its safety for the most delicate person to wear, as it is free from lead and other poisonous material commonly used in the manufacture of ordinary plasters. One trial is a sufficient guarantee of its merits, and one plaster will sell hundreds to your friends.

Ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER, and take no other; or, on receipt of 25 cents for one, $1 for five, or $2 for a dozen, they will be mailed, post paid, to any address in the United States or Canada.

"THE ENAMORADO"

A DRAMA IN V. ACTS,

HUNTER DUVAR

THE above interesting book is for sale at all the Bookstores on the Island.

Col. Duvar is happy in having selected for the theme of his drama, one of the most romantic incidents of a romantic and soldierly time. The scene is laid in Spain, amid all the accessories of grave and gay, love and chivalry, poetry and song, with room for the display of many types of character,—knights and ladies, priests and soldiers, courtiers and peasants, cooks and clowns. Many lyrics in the author's best style are interspersed in the dialogue, which is, in general, quaint and sparkling. Price: Paper cover, 50 cents; in cloth, 75 cents.
