THE AMERICAN $8.00 Typewriter.

This is a well-made, practical machine, writing capitals, small letters, figures, and punctuation marks (71 in all) on full width paper, just like a $100 instrument. It is the first of its kind ever offered at a popular price for which the above claim can be truthfully made. It is not a toy, but a typewriter built for and capable of REAL WORK. While not as rapid as the large machines sometimes become in expert hands, it is still at least as rapid as the pen, and has the advantage of such simplicity that it can be understood and mastered almost at a glance. We cordially commend it to helpful parents and teachers everywhere.

Writes capitals, small letters, figures and marks—71 in all. Writes just like a $100 machine. No Shift Keys. No Ribbon. Prints from the type direct. Prints on flat surface. Writing always in sight. Corrections and insertions easily made. Takes any width of paper or envelope up to 8 1/2 inches. Easy to understand—learned in 5 minutes. Weighs only four pounds—most portable. Compact, takes up but little room. Built solid and simple; can't get out of order. Capital and lower case keyboard alike—easily mastered. More "margin play" for the small letters which do most of the work. Takes good letter-press copies.

Packed securely in handsome case and expressed to any address on receipt of price, $8.00, in registered letter, money order or certified check. We guarantee every machine, and are glad to answer all inquiries for further information as to this machine and also the "Yost." IRA CORNWALL, General Agent for Maritime Provinces, dec20

A STUDY.

It was my first table d'hôte dinner at the Hotel de Nico. As it was only evening the end of October, visitors to the south were as yet few and far between and of a distinctly uninteresting order. While my eyes were straying over the elderly company the Darbys and Jones gathered round the festive board I began to regret my choice of a domestic and involuntarily formed plans for beating a speedy retreat on the morrow. I was what is known as a crusty bachelor and, worse, of uncertain age. The former fact troubled match-making mothers more than myself, as my somewhat formidable independence rendered me comparatively content, and I did not yearn for the joys of a frisk of my own and some one else to spend my money.

My greatest and most absorbing interest was centered in humanity. I was an ardent psychological student and in consequence liked to surround myself with youthful society and watch the buds unfurling in the most interesting manner. As I disconsolately finished my bottle of Beauve—I was wearing very dull—a rustic of feminine garb attracted my attention, and I slightly turned my head a stately lady, gowned in black, accompanied by a singularly pretty daughter, passed the end of the table and were accommodated with seats exactly opposite me. The experience of years at once told me that the younger lady would form a most interesting psychological study, and I immediately assigned all thought of riveting up my room on the morrow and tossed myself with attending to the small wants of my charming vis-a-vis. She could not have been more than 18 years old, and her face was as sweet and innocent looking as a child's, though her principal beauty lay in her eyes, which were of a deep, lustrous blue and very large and full, with a dreamy, unfathomable expression.

Later in the evening I smoked a cigar with the manager, and in the course of conversation learned that the lady in black was a Mrs. Hilliard, widow of a county magistrate, and that she was wintering at Nico in the company of her daughter, a highly nervous and delicate girl. In the course of a few days I was able to render Mrs. Hilliard some slight service, and the acquaintance thus developed into a sincere friendship. She was a very chatty, well informed woman, and I passed many pleasant hours in her society while awaiting the result of my investigation of her daughter. The latter required a lot of knowing, and it took quite a month of constant intercourse with her before I felt that we understood each other. I discovered her to be an unusually pure minded and high souled girl of a very quiet and retiring disposition. Her mother frankly confessed that her she was a complete enigma.

"She has never been different, Mr. Blaine," she said. "It seems impossible to interest her in anything. From her earliest years she has been the same and never took to romping or toys like other children. If I were superstitious, which, thank heaven, I'm not—I should believe that poor Evelyn was under some malign influence. When she was at boarding school her fellow pupils used to say that her far seeing look she has in her mournful eyes betokened an early death or a tragedy. Of course that is all nonsense. Still I don't give a good deal to see her different."

"I suggested that there may have been an unfortunate circumstance to account for Mrs. Hilliard's despondency, but this her mother vehemently negated. "She has never shown the slightest regard for any one," she resumed. "I only wish she would be interested in the dawn of a new existence for her. She has had many admirers and several offers of marriage, but she has refused them all with cold disdain. She likes reading, though not novels, as you may suppose, but what I call good literature, and if she has a new book she will read it through. I have seen her spellbound at a Paley's recital or listening to an oratorio."

"Alas, you have no Paley's recital here to make the girl contented with her lot, and even to understand the girl's gloom, I am around at the stuffy furnished apartment and at its inmates, some of whom, enclosed in armchairs, were sleeping, not wisely, but too wisely, in their own ignorance. She likes reading, though not novels, as you may suppose, but what I call good literature, and if she has a new book she will read it through. I have seen her spellbound at a Paley's recital or listening to an oratorio."

Broken in Health

That Tired Feeling, Constipation and Pain in the Back Appetite and Health Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mr. Chas. Steele, St. Catherine's, Ont. "For a number of years I have been troubled with a general tired feeling, shortness of breath, pain in the back, and constipation. I could get only little rest at night on account of the pain and had no appetite whatever. I was that tired in my limbs that I gave out before half the day was gone. I tried a great number of remedies but did not get any permanent relief from any source until, upon recommendation of a friend, I purchased a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which made me feel better at once. I have continued its use, having taken three bottles and I feel like a new man. I have a good appetite, feel as strong as ever I did, and enjoy perfect rest at night. I have much pleasure in recommending Hood's Sarsaparilla. CHARLES STEELE, with care, Preparing Co., St. Catherine's, Ontario. Hood's Pills are prompt and effective, yet easy in action. Sold by all druggists. 25c.
