NOTABLE CAREERS.

Mary Cowden Clarke spent 16 years on the "Concordance to Shakespeare."

Edison's contributions to the science of electricity have all been made in less than 20 years.

Charles Dickens lived 58 years, from 1812 to 1870. His literary life began in 1835 and ended with his death, thus covering a period of 35 years.

Napoleon's military reputation was made between the battle at the bridge of Lodi, in 1796, and the great disaster at Waterloo, in 1815, a period of 19 years.

Michael Angelo Buonarroti enjoyed a long life, from 1475 to 1564. Over 40 years of artistic effort were his, during which time he executed an immense number of masterpieces.

The enormous mass of poetry which Wordsworth gave to the world was written between 1793, when "An Evening Walk" was published, and his death in 1850. His active life therefore covered 57 years.

Goethe was born in 1749 and died in 1832. His literary life began with the composition of "Gotz von Berlichingen," in 1773, and ended with his death, thus covering a period of 59 years. His last three years were spent in revising a complete edition of his works for the printer.

The Met Man.

He will probably never grumble again, no matter how late she is in keeping an appointment. They were to meet at the bridge, the Brooklyn end, and from there start for their destination, which was in Brooklyn. There was one thing she made up her mind to, and that was that she would not be late. And she was not. But there was no one to meet her. She waited minute after minute and quarter hour after quarter hour, but no husband. She began to be very angry, when suddenly a bright idea occurred to her. "I'll warrant," she said, "that that man is waiting for me on the other side of the bridge." She took the next car and went over. There he was, calmly chatting with a friend. In the car she remarked to him that she had waited some time. It is she who tells the story. "And I had all the car with me," she says in the course of her recital, "and he couldn't say a word. Then when he got over to the Brooklyn side I took him up to the policeman who was standing there. 'Officer,' I said, 'do you know when I came on to this bridge?' 'Why, yes,' he said, 'I noticed you because you waited so long. You came here just an hour ago.' And to think that man was standing there as calmly as possible, without a thought that he had a wife anywhere in the world!"—New York Times.

Missing Fire.

"Glad to hear your son is getting on so well in the volunteers, Wicks. I understand he is making quite a stir in the regiment on account of his shooting."

"That's right," said Wicks proudly. "He's going in for the Bisley shoot next year. That boy can use the rifle, and I'm going to let him develop his talent. He'll be one of the best shots in the world."

"Well, I hope for his sake that the old idea isn't true—that the next war is really a continuation of what we do here."

"What do you mean, sir?"

"However good a shot he may be in this world, I suppose you hope he will miss fire in the next?"

Wicks is telling it to all his friends now.—Strand Magazine.

Her Charity Work.

"No, Dr. Whitehead, I'm sorry, but I'm doing all I can afford to do for charity."

"And may I ask through which channel your charitable work finds an exit?"

"Certainly. I haven't missed a charity card party in two seasons."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Cork Legs Were Scared.

One day in 1880 Senator Hampton was going on his crutches from the senate chamber to the house of representatives. In the middle of the big rotunda he met a very large man, also on crutches. He was a member of congress from Illinois, a Republican, whose name I cannot now recall. Hampton stopped him and kindly asked his name and how he had received his injury. After giving his name the congressman said amputation was necessary by reason of a shot he had received in a fight with Hampton's cavalry. He did not dream he was talking to Wade Hampton himself. "I am Wade Hampton," said the senator. "If you have the leisure, please sit down and let us talk." Hampton had lost his leg after the war, when thrown from a mule while deer hunting. The amputation was identical with that of the congressman, and they fell a-talking. Up to that time neither had found a cork leg he could wear, and they discussed cork legs for a great while. They parted, after mutual professions of esteem. The next morning I heard the congressman tell the story in the committee room, and there never was a man who had a higher regard for Wade Hampton than he had. I believe Hampton later found a leg he could wear.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Beat Him Down.

Two Irishmen were cleaning a window in a tall building. To facilitate their work they had stuck a board out of the window, and Pat stood on the end of it which was outside and Mike on the end inside to balance. Suddenly Pat shouted:

"Mike, I've dropped me sponge."

"That's all right. I'll go down and get it."

When he got to the street, he found Pat in a heap on the sidewalk and exclaimed:

"Well, well, how did yez git down here so quick, Pat? I can all the way down, but bedad yez hav beaten me."
