matters, and that when we see our friends about to make fools of down the punishment he deserves on himself for having proved a traitor to his wife and children.

I have small pity for any man who is weak enough to let a woman cajole and flatter him into forgetting his duty to his family and his honor as a man. He really isn't worth anybody taking the trouble to save from his folly, except for his children's sake, for it is they who have to pay the final price of his wrong-doing.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: My husband and I are in a perpetual argument about whether or not he should help me with the housework. He says: "My job is to support you and the baby and not to be a washwoman or nursemaid or cook." I say that after I have done my own housework besides taking care of a 15-month-old baby that I am so tired and nervous that I need a little help and that he might give me a lift by at least looking after the baby while I do the dishes. Would you advise us about what work each of us should do in the home?

THE QUARRELERS

ANSWER: I don't think that question can be settled definitely because there are too many angles to the situation. So much depends on so many different things, and particularly, as in your case, on the wife's health.

Evidently you are overworking. Not only affection and sympathy for you should prompt your husband to help you with the housework but prudence also counsels it. For if your burden isn't lifted a little you will soon have a breakdown and then he will have trouble as well.

In those cases where a husband supports the home and the wife is well and strong I do not think that she should call upon him to add the housework to his job, any more than he should expect her to help him out on his, but the situation is entirely altered when the wife is frail and delicate and not able to do all of the work alone.

Personally, I do not see why a husband and wife who love each other should count every lick of work one does for the other, and each be so afraid that he or she will do a little more for the other's comfort and happiness than he or she is entitled to. To my thinking the greatest happiness that life can give us is being able to serve those we love and make life easier and pleasanter for them.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 23 years of age, married and a father of two children. I am happily married and am crazy about my wife and babies, but in spite of this I am attracted by beautiful women and desire to have dates with them. What do you have to say?

ANSWER: Merely that you are like a lot of other men. You are polygamous by nature. But don't forget that in running after many women you will lose the one woman who really loves you.

Long-Time Bakery Contest Winner at Stanley Fair

At the 100th anniversary of the internationally famous fair at Stanley, N.B., special honors are paid Mrs. G. Edwin Sansom, whose record as prize winner stretches back over decades. Mrs. Sansom was named "Most Worthy Settler" by the fair in 1947, and is here seen with the silver trophy accompanying that honor. Famed for her entries of rolls and bread, Mrs. Sansom pays full tribute to Fleischmann's Yeast. "All the prizes I have won for yeast-raised baking were won with Fleischmann's Yeast," she says. "It's so lively and dependable, I wouldn't use any other."

No doubt about it. The majority of prize-winning cooks place their faith in Fleischmann's Yeast—proved dependable for 83 years.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. WILLIAM MORRISSEY

The death of Mrs. William Morrissey occurred at her home in Millview on Sunday, November 26, 1950. Mrs. Morrissey, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Murphy, was born at China Point in 1857. Following her marriage to the late William Morrissey, she made her home at Millview.

During her ninety-three years Theresa Morrissey was devoted to the simple and enduring things of life, surrounded by her family, she made of her home a place of comfort and hospitality. Her cheerful disposition, her genuine interest in both the joys and sorrows of her neighbours, the alertness and intelligence which she displayed in conversation, her deep and abiding faith, and her truly saintly character, endeared her to her intimate friends, and, in truth, to all members of her community. Above all else, however, she exemplified the ideal of Christian motherhood. She was completely devoted to her children, for whose care and development she assumed full responsibility when her husband died at an early age.

The surviving members of her family are: Jeremiah, Millview, with whom Mrs. Morrissey made her home, and who with the aid of his wife, provided tender care for his mother during her illness; Edmund, Vernon; Mary (Mrs. Charles Walker), Johnston's River; and Eileen (Mrs. F. F. Hynes), Charlottetown. One brother, Edmund, Charlottetown, also survives.

Her funeral, which was very largely attended, was held from her late residence Tuesday, November 28th, at 9:00 A. M. to St. Joachim's Church, Vernon River. Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. Urban Gillis, Rev. R. F. MacDonald, Seven Mile Bay, was seated in the sanctuary and officiated at the grave. The pall-bearers were Dingwell Jenkins, Harold Dupuy, Leo Hynes, George Jenkins, Alphonsus MacIntyre and Herman Duff.

May her soul rest in peace.

Card Of Thanks

The family of the late Mrs. William Morrissey extend sincere thanks and appreciation to all who assisted and remembered them in their bereavement.

the entire family without a sewing machine."

"Grain, formerly sacked for the market in the horse-drawn wagons is now hauled at forty miles an hour in trucks propelled with gasoline, to modern elevators operated by electricity. Spring wagons, buggies, and phaetons are things of the past. Pioneers in covered wagons that once followed the Oregon Trail westward could now travel the same route in fast cars on smooth paved highways."

Truly one possessed of four-score years or more can look back through the intervening time to point out amazing scientific discoveries and improvements, that have been found, and made mostly to benefit the human race. And we know that this New Year into which we now enter will not pass away without having also contributed its share... At Alderlea, where James reminds us he has "already gone into a good many New Years" the transition from old to new will not be noticed. "What do I expect of it?" James paused a moment to consider our question at supper. "Well," he replied "there's an old saying: 'Expect nothing and you will never be disappointed!' But," he smiled "we can be sure of this—it will be a very busy one for us."

Slices of cold roast pork was our fare, off that recently butchered and fortunately neither fat nor lean, but a nice layering of the two. Appetizing, we agreed after a surfeit of holiday fowl, which leaves one somewhat indifferent to meats. James likes to flavor his with a dot of "straight" mustard and for added interest he favors rings of sliced onion, raw and sweetened by a dusting of sugar. With toast for variety and steaming cups of tea—and strawberry jam to round it off, it was a meal to make one forget the sparkling frost pictures spreading along the panes. It continues to be frosty tonight, but our indoor comfort is assured in the sticks that crackle and burn merrily, setting the kettle to humming its low comforting tune.

One of granddaughter's kittens sizable now and according to her "able to handle any rat that comes" is purring as softly, snuggled beside James on the couch. It is on a quiet but very pleasant note like this we come into the New Year.

We remember this as a keen Winter day but beautiful. The spruces along the stream and in tiers now possessing the woodlands were darkly lovely against the flame of sunset. The millpond caught fast and as are the stubbles and furrows on either slope, covered lightly with snow. Then not a breath of wind moved. All was as still as if it were deserted. Even the saucy sparrows that by day had enlivened our sur-

Sweetest of memories are all that are left,

Of a beloved husband, one of the best.

To have and to love, then to part.

It is true to remember a loved one so dear

Though absent from me he is ever so near.

Unseen by the world he stands by my side

And whispers my beloved one, death cannot divide.

You cannot return so my tears are in vain,

But in heaven I'm hoping to meet you again.
