The Stars Say

By Genevieve Kemble

For Tomorrow A TENDENCY to initiative and strenuous action, with the effort to pace things up at a fast and furious tempo had best be kept under reins of tact, diplomacy, and discretion, in order to conserve and bolster up assets — to keep matters well in hand.

For the Birthday Those whose birthday it is, may find themselves in a turbulent as well as critical state of affairs, and this will call for complete discretion rather than fast and furious action.

A child born on this day may have a very conflicting set of emotions, feelings and urges, with strenuous and aggressive efforts offset by an undertone of subtlety and craft.

A Country Garden

WILD GEESSE Tonight with snow in the November air, Over the roof I heard that startling cry Passing along the highway of the dark — The Wild Geese going South. Confused commands As of a column on the march rang out.

Beautiful sunny days to work in the garden as I write, and many plantings and transplantings done. If it were possible to garden all winter in this climate something would still remain to be done, and that is why gardening is so enjoyed.

There are many annuals that are suitable for house culture and at this time it is difficult to find room for all the plants, Petunias, Carnations, Nasturtium, Calendula, fragrant Southernwood and Stocks.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

We gave Jamie, elder grandson of ours back to his school today, and James coming in from the choring he assumed wholly while the younger farmer continued the plowing, professed to missing the children. "It's queer, Ellen," he commented "what a hold they get on a fellow's affections!"

The plowing is reddening the ground of summer and in spite of the ever shortening daylight is progressing satisfactorily and as the two agree in view of the fact that several pieces await the plow "It's at least a good start!" James broke a Sabbath silence recently, after we had been listening in to a sermon of morn-

Not So Wonderful

An American visitor was disturbed because his stories of the wonders of his country made little impression on his English friends.

That Body Of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

DOCTORS, DRUGS, PATIENTS

One experienced general practitioner was giving some advice to a group of medical students. He stated that he had visited a large number of patients that day and that for some he had prescribed a drug or drug to combat the epidemic colds that were afflicting so many individuals; he did not prescribe any drugs for others, being satisfied with the competent nursing they were receiving.

He explained that he prescribed no drugs in these latter cases because they had been his patients for years and had enough faith in him to feel that if they were not given drugs it was because he didn't think they needed them.

Generally speaking, if a patient sends for a physician, it is because he feels that he needs a physician's care and in the majority of cases expects the physician to prescribe drugs — to relieve pain, enable him to sleep, strengthen or enrich his blood or relieve other symptoms.

In Medical Clinics of North America, Dr. Howard P. Rome, Associate Professor of Psychiatry, University of Minnesota, states in his article "Doctors, Drugs, Patients" that the majority of patients place their faith, their dependence on the physician, and therefore look upon a prescribed drug as likely to be the answer to their needs.

"There is an important symbol meaning to the taking of a drug. It is as if it emotionally united the patient with a powerful force. In this unconscious union there is strength and at least a temporary drug are able to provide immunity to stress," says Dr. Rome.

This faith in the physician, this absolute dependence on the physician's ability to "take care of everything" removes tenseness and anxiety from the patient. With tenseness of mind and body and freedom from anxiety attained, the patient relaxes and so gives his fighting forces every chance to bring about recovery.

However, every patient hasn't this complete faith in his physician. He knows that the physician is competent but he also knows that the physician, with all his knowledge and sympathy, can't know how much he is actually suffering and wants a drug — a powerful drug — to relieve his pain and anxiety.

From the above we learn that the doctor must know his patient as well as he knows his drugs if he is to help his patient.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Wait For Love

Man 29, Too Young To Make Marriage Of Convenience

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 29 years old, a college graduate. My interests are varied. I am fond of both study and reading and also athletic sports, music, dancing, etc. I like the society of women, but have never been in love. Now here is the problem: I have a fine job. I am tired of boarding houses and want a home of my own, but picking a wife is a very serious business when you have no special urge toward any one particular charmer. Now can I shop around among the few girls I like best and pick out the one nearest my desires and marry her and expect happiness? If I use this cold, calculating method of choosing a wife, would this thing called love, which I seem to know nothing about, be likely to come along and make a good bid to break up my home? Is it possible that because of my varied desires and interests I have never, or never will, find one girl with whom I could be satisfied?

HESITANT

ANSWER: Of course, the marriage of convenience has logic all on its side. It would seem that it would be a far wiser thing for a young man to pick out his wife with his head instead of his heart. But it doesn't seem to work out that way in real life, for man does not live by bread alone, and our observation shows us that the most successful marriages are not the suitable ones entered into in cold blood, but those that were founded on that mysterious thing we call love.

HIRE A HOUSEKEEPER

So my advice to you is not to marry. If you must have a home get a housekeeper. You can hire one cheaper than you can support a wife. Believe me, son, there is no one of whom you can get so weary as an enforced companion who isn't your soul mate.

Don't trust to falling in love after marriage. It seldom, if ever, happens. Marriage is a disillusioning process that is more likely to separate people than it is to bring them together. If you marry a girl you don't love, you will see her every fault and blemish magnified. Her every peculiarity will get on your nerves and you will far more likely come to hate her than you will to be enamored of her.

Furthermore, there is the almost certain that sooner or later you will meet the woman of your dreams and fall in love with her when love can mean nothing but tragedy to you. A man in his fifties or sixties might be justified in marrying a woman to get a housekeeper and somebody to make him comfortable, but it is certainly foolery for a lad of 29 to do so. He still has time for love to come to him.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: How can you tell when your boy friend or girl friend loves you? There is so much camouflage in these days, one can hardly be sure. People use words so carelessly when it comes to such a serious matter as this.

DOUBTFUL ELSIE

ANSWER: People certainly do use words so carelessly in these days that they have lost virtually all of their meaning. So now, in love, it has become a case of actions speaking louder than words. In trying to determine if the girl and boy friend really do care for you, you have to go by what they do and not by what they say.

It seems to me that the real test of love is always unselfishness. Watch that. If a boy puts your happiness above his own; if he is willing to sacrifice his own pleasure for yours, if he is always paying you little delicate attentions, doing the things that will please you, bringing you little tokens that show his thought of you, try me.
