LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Ingersoll's Character.

DEAR SIR,—Kindly publish, in the interests of truth, the following letter:—
118 North Adams Street,
Peoria, Ill., Aug. 11, 1889.
John Mackenzie, Esq.,
Summerside, P. E. Island, Canada.

My DEAR SIR,—Your favor of 6th inst., with a copy of the pamphlet entitled "Ingersoll Unmasked," came to hand yesterday. For your kind courtesy I thank you. Col. Ingersoll and I have been close and intimate friends for about thirty-two years; we were law partners for many years; our families have always been on the most intimate terms. I doubt whether any man lives that is better able to form a true estimate of his merits or demerits.

So far as the infamous libel contained in "Ingersoll Unmasked" is concerned, I know that Col. Ingersoll would never pay any attention to it. It can have no injurious effect upon his reputation as a man of profound learning, an orator, and as possessing every element that constitutes a man admired and respected by all who have had the privilege of his acquaintance and confidence.

My interest in the pamphlet arises from the fact that in his "list of witnesses" he says "the authority for the poverty of the Ingersolls, through the worthless lives they had lived, when they came to Peoria, is Judge Putrough, of whom they rented their office."

"I had a dry scaly humor for years, and suffered terribly; and, as my brother and sister were similarly afflicted, I presume the malady hereditary. Last winter, Dr. Tyson, (of Fernandina, Fla.) recommended me to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and continue it for a year. For five months I took it daily. I have not had a blemish upon my body for the last three months."—T. E. Wiley, 145 Chambers st., New York City.

"Last fall and winter I was troubled with a dull, heavy pain in my side. I did not notice it much at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost unbearable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the stomach and liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared and I was completely cured."—Mrs. Augusta A. Furbush, Haverhill, Mass.

The New York Murderers

LAUNCHED INTO ETERNITY.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The four murderers received the farewell visits of their friends and relatives early last evening and about ten o'clock were taken into the yard for a last experience of air and recreation. They smoked, laughed and chatted as if they had no connection with the ordeal of the coming day. The party, finally asked to see the gallows. He examined the structure carefully, shook the uprights with his hands and seemed satisfied with their stability. "That's all right," he said, "but it isn't an artistic job; it should be painted black." The other three took a turn around the prison and a cursory look at the gallows. After night prayers by the priest they were shut in their cage. Nolan and Lewis went to bed immediately, while Packerham wrote farewell letters, and Carolin, both to lose the enjoyment of the remaining hours of his life, did not retire until prevailed upon to do so by the priest. At midnight all were asleep. Warden Osborne and Hanganan Atkinson arrived at the prison about 4 o'clock this morning. Packerham awoke shortly afterwards and upon being told the time, arose and washed and dressed himself carefully. The others were soon up, Carolin, who had been restless all night, acting very nervously. For 15 minutes not a word was spoken. "It will soon be over now," he said. This remark caused Nolan's lip to quiver, and the youngest of the murderers began to show signs of weakening. Nolan in dressing paid particular attention to the arrangement of his necktie, while Lewis spent most of the time shining his boots. The condemned were then marched from the cage to the chapel, where sixty-five minutes were consumed in saying mass, after which they returned to the cage, where a bountiful breakfast was partaken of. After the last rites of the church had been administered, the men were led to the gallows. Nolan seemed hardly to realize his position, and regarded the surroundings curiously. The men mounted the scaffold with a firm step. After the priest's fervent farewell, they were pinned, black caps adjusted, the trap sprung and the bodies jerked into the air in the shortest possible space of time. Both died easily, but were allowed to hang 30 minutes, though death was apparent in 15 minutes. While this scene was being enacted, preparations were completed for the hanging of Carolin and Lewis on the other side of the prison. The hanging of these men in several aspects is perhaps unparalleled. Ten minutes after Carolin and Lewis had a priest came out. Lewis walked unsteadily for the first dozen paces, but quickly recovered himself, smiled and looked fearlessly around him. Carolin had the butt of a cigar between his lips and was puffing vigorously, blowing great clouds of smoke in the faces of the priests. His face was deadly pale, and the scowl upon it was almost diabolical. Spitting the cigar stump from his mouth, he broke into blasphemy that terrified the spectators. Atkinson had just pinioned his legs when Carolin, looking suddenly at the priests, suddenly exclaimed, "I die an innocent man. God damn it, I didn't do this thing." Lewis, who had been pinioned, half turned his head and said, "What's the matter with you anyway? Why don't you die like a man?" "I will die like a man," shrieked Carolin, his face turning perfectly livid. "I will die like a man, an innocent man." The words were scarcely out of his mouth before Atkinson clapped the cap over the murderer's face. Lewis's face was covered at the same moment and the trap sprung. Instead of bounding up as Packerham and Nolan did, they went into the air with so little force that there was scarcely any rebound at all. Lewis immediately began to struggle in the most sickening manner. He threw his arms about wildly and gurgled and choked. For fully ten seconds his body turned and swayed, and the contortions were so painful that the men turned away their heads. He was finally strangled. Carolin's body also violently contorted, but uttered no sound. The weight fell at 7 o'clock, and at 7:10 both were dead. The four bodies hung for half an hour, and were then cut down and put in plain coffins and taken away in hearses by friends. All the murderers strangled, but the deaths of Packerham and Nolan were comparatively painless. The remains will be buried to-day in Calvary Cemetery.

Personal.

The death is announced at Montreal of Frank Gonlette, probably the oldest railway employe in the Dominion, he having commenced railway work as a brakeman in 1836, on the Champlain road, the first in Canada.

Boulanger is a life member of the Canadian Society of St. John the Baptist, and is popular among the French population. The suggestion is made that the general may find an asylum in Quebec, and form a court of loyalists about himself.

Andrew Young, author of the hymn, "There is a Happy Land, Far, Far Away," is 80 years of age and still vigorous. In 1839 he heard an old Indian air that impressed him deeply, and composed words to it. So the hymn was made. It has been translated into ninety different languages.

Wm. D. Howells believes with Anthony Trollope that a novelist should no more wait for inspiration in his work than a shoemaker or a tailor candler. They both act upon the principle that writing novels is purely mechanical work, like writing lawyers' briefs for instance, or book-keeping.

A Judge of the United States Supreme Court is slapped in the face by a desperado, who is immediately shot by a Deputy Marshal of the United States. The Judge, who has taken no part in the affair whatever, is accused by the desperado of a wife of murder, is arrested on a warrant issued by an obscure California Justice of the peace, and is now out on bail. This queer chapter of incidents is the result, not of peculiar American laws, but of peculiar American manners. In theory the same things might happen to an English Judge, but they never will.

"Chicago, Aug. 11.—One thousand men and women in a starving condition, tramped down from the Spring Valley coal mines to the Rock Island depot at midnight, and waited three hours for a car load of provisions which was on its way, accompanied by John Warner, Mayor of Peoria. The crowd went wild with delight when they heard of this relief and paraded the streets of the city with torches."

Ingersoll's admirers are not particularly interested to know whether Ingersoll's life, like that of St. Paul's, was commenced in sinfulness. It is sufficient for them to know that each of them repudiated the orthodoxy into which they were born and that each have become immortal.

Ingersoll needs no unmasking; his fault, if fault it be, is that he wears no mask. Braden is already unmasked, and the Church will find that she is warming into life a viper that will sting her. He speaks of "slangy puff." Here is a sample of his style. Replying to the Transcript, he writes of the editor: "He will not be stuffing a Canuck infidel with Peter Funk's balderdash." Compared with this "bloom" and "flourishing" is elegant.

How appropriate here, with some slight change, is Ingersoll's aphorism: "Once a donkey kicked a lion. But the donkey was in Alberton, the lion at Roskewy."

JOSEPH READ,
Summerside, August 24, 1889.
