

Sukarno Appears Shaken By Revolt In Indonesia

Mystery still surrounds much of what has been going on in Indonesia, but it is evident that President Sukarno's government has been badly shaken. Here, for the first time, is an uncensored recapitulation of how the recent revolt developed, and what has followed. The writer, chief of AP's Southeast Asia services, has followed Indonesian developments closely for the last nine years.

Opening lead—queen of clubs. Nobody ever contended that Endplay Charlie was a really great player. His bidding was bad, his defense was mediocre, and his dummy play, except for his one outstanding talent, left much to be desired.

But when it came to endplays, nobody could touch Charlie. He could smell an endplay a mile away, and he was never happier than when he was executing one. This tale of his was really exceptional, and if the rest of his game had only been on a par with it, he would have been regarded

Strike Action Threatens CBC

TORONTO (CP)—The Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists announced its membership has voted more than 73 per cent in favour of strike action if necessary against the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

The ACTRA membership of 3,300 includes writers and performers in radio, television and films. The ballot was mailed from Toronto Friday, Oct. 1.

Negotiations between the union and the CBC resumed Friday, Oct. 15, for one day after the BC offered to increase opportunities for Canadians in the 1966-67 program season.

The union had been seeking a work guarantee by having the CBC pledge certain sums annually to be spent on Canadian talent. Talks continue this week.

ACTRA's national president, Henry Comor, says the strike vote will give the negotiating committee the solid backing of the membership from coast to coast.

APPROVED MOVE

Sukarno, already in a disturbed state, apparently was convinced and approved a counter-coup. He proceeded to Hulin Perdanasumrah, an air force base. This is the headquarters of Air Vice-Marshal Omar Dhanl, first military leader to publicly support the coup—but later to down Untung's group after it failed.

Untung had organized five battalions in the Jakarta area for his strike. The precise whereabouts of the generals marked for arrest were well known.

The bloody work began. Untung's followers went in with guns blazing against the general's guards whenever there was a resistance.

Some generals were allowed to dress. Others were seized partly clothed.

A reception committee of Communist youth, men and women, awaited them. The six generals still alive and a loyal lieutenant aide were beaten, tortured and mutilated. The bodies were tossed into the hole.

FEARED ARMY

Sukarno feared the army as the greatest potential threat to his dictatorial sway over Indonesia. Deteriorating economic conditions produced increased criticism. The ailing, 64-year-old president felt the army might capitalize on these unsettled conditions to attempt a take-over.

The president knew leading generals were disturbed over the relationship Sukarno was building up with Communist China, which in turn supported the PKI led by D.N. Aidit.

While Sukarno did not trust the army leadership, he apparently also was angered by criticism directed against him by Aidit and his followers, centred mainly on Java.

Untung, who many believe was acting merely as a tool of the Communist establishment, contact with Sukarno around

SEIZED RADIO

The 7 p.m. newscast did not come on. A special regiment of commando troops, under direct control of army headquarters, was seizing the station without a fight.

Shortly after 9 p.m. Suharto came on the air to announce that the coup had been crushed. Demoralized rebels fled Jakarta, with little will to fight.

The Jakarta military command declared a state of martial law on Suharto's orders and a widespread crackdown on the Communists started.

Civilians said that later they saw truckloads of corpses and captured Communists being hauled away from the vicinity of Halim.

Confusion continued as to the whereabouts of Sukarno, but on Oct. 3, he made it known he was at Bogor, his palatial mountain residence 40 miles from Jakarta. His brief radio broadcast with a tired, dull delivery, confused the situation more. He did not denounce the coup leaders or associate the communists with it.

He said he was appointing Suharto to restore order.

TURNED AGAINST REDS

The death of the six generals was officially announced Oct. 4 and the army's crackdown on Communists went into full gear. Political parties began rallying
