

Gen. Franco Wins Battle With Dissident Students

MADRID (AP)—The Spanish regime of Gen. Francisco Franco appears to have won a major battle with dissident university students, but the conflict is far from settled.

A major factor in the government's victory—apart from ending public street demonstrations by students—was in preventing the spread of the dispute to industry.

During a two-week period, student assembly followed assembly and demonstration followed demonstration in Spain's largest centre of learning, Madrid University. There were several tentative offers from industrial workers to support a student strike. Or students were asked to join a labor demonstration.

Students rejected these offers. As the last week ended, most pressure by students on the government appeared to have fizzled. A part of this easing resulted from firm police action. Attempts by students to hold a prohibited downtown demonstration were squelched.

Another part appeared to be plain disinterest by many students who said: "We have had enough of this play, let's get back to our work and our books."

The fortnight of intense student activity, however, brought problems at Madrid—and other universities into the open. It appeared the Franco government was prepared to face these and take some action.

Foremost among the students' complaints was that of representation. Most of the action was aimed at abolishing the Sindicato Español Universitario, or Spanish Student union, because its leadership came from above rather than through student elections.

Most observers doubted whether the government would bow to demands for abolishing the SEU entirely. But it was likely the education ministry and other official bodies would be ready to negotiate compromises, to give students more direct representation in their affairs.

The influential news paper A.B.C. published a telegram from various students including a communication from student delegates of several schools at the university.

These proposed a "face-to-face" meeting between elected student representatives and the competent authorities as the best means of settling further student troubles. It appeared most government leaders were in accord with this desire.

One factor still unanswered was the degree of political inspiration sparking the recent student disorders.

Active members of several anti-Franco political groups confirmed that they had supported the student opposition movement.

Spanish university students could represent a substantial political force if unified. But there are dozens of factions ranging from those adhering to the government-sponsored SEU to extreme left-wing or Communist-orientated groups—probably smallest in number but most active.

Madrid University the country's largest, now has an enrolment of about 40,000, including both regular and special students, a university spokesman said.

Conservatives Seem Headed For New Dief-Balcer Crisis

By MICHAEL GILLAN
OTTAWA (CP)—The Conservative party appears headed towards another crisis over policy differences between Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and Quebec Premier Jean Lesage.

Mr. Diefenbaker has indicated within the caucus, sources say, the party should take a strong and prolonged stand against the government's proposed formula to permit provinces to take over certain well-established, shared-cost programs.

RIPLEY'S BELIEVE IT OR NOT

It is understood Mr. Balcer, who has threatened before to quit the party over policy differences, is interpreting the recent caucus discussions as an ultimatum—either support Mr. Diefenbaker on the issue or get out.

The party has been meeting in caucus every morning this week and is to hold another session today.

The opting-out legislation is scheduled for debate in the Commons at the present session after the Canada Pension Plan bill is approved.

PAPER PREPARED

Sources say the anti-formula position has been enunciated in a paper prepared by Erik Nielsen, member for the Yukon. The paper apparently advocates strong opposition to the formula and to the proposed formula for an amending procedure to the British North America Act, not expected to be debated until this fall at least.

Both Mr. Balcer and his colleague, P. A. Martineau (Pontiac-Témiscouingue) are understood to have spoken in caucus against the Nielsen position. Informants said there were no ultimatums to the Quebec wing but that Mr. Balcer and others are interpreting it as such.

The issue is contentious for Mr. Balcer because impetus for the opting-out formula came from Quebec Premier Jean Lesage, whose government wants to acquire greater autonomy over areas originally assigned to the provinces in the BNA Act.

After Mr. Balcer's bid to force a leadership convention to replace Mr. Diefenbaker was rejected in February, the Quebec leader said he would remain in the party for a while yet.

EXPECTED TO WAIT

It had been expected he would wait to hear the tone of Mr. Diefenbaker's stand on the formula in the Commons before making a decision on whether to quit or remain.

The turn of events within caucus, however, could speed up a decision.

Another of his colleagues, René Paul (Berthier-Maskinonge-Delaunoy) left the party recently to sit as an independent in the belief there was no chance of changing Mr. Diefenbaker's mind.

Mr. Balcer's position on the formula has drawn support from some moderates among English-speaking members of the party.

Some who oppose the constitutional amending proposal are nevertheless opposed to a stand against the opting-out formula. Their argument is that the bill introduced by Finance Minister Gordon contains no provisions that would weaken federal control over the economy.

The bidding:

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
3 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass
Pass Dble. Pass Pass
Redble.

Opening lead — Jack of diamonds.

I am reminded of how much luck there is, even in duplicate bridge, by this hand which I ran into while leafing through some ancient files.

The deal occurred during the Vanderbilt team of four championship in 1960. I had the North cards and my partner with the South hand was Helen Sobel.

We landed at four spades redoubled on the bidding show. No doubt I was guilty of optimism in the bidding, considering that I had opened as dealer with 12 high-card points, had three jump leads to three spades, and followed all this with a redouble of four spades. However, right or wrong, it was just as well that I did what I did, in view of the outcome of the hand.

West led a diamond Mrs. Sobel ruffed in dummy, cashed the ace of clubs, ruffed a club, ruffed a diamond, ruffed another club, and then trumped another diamond on which the ace fell.

She then forced out the A-K of spades, and the result was that Mrs. Sobel made the contract with an overtrick for a score of 1,430 points.

When our teammates, sitting East-West, played the hand at the other table, the bidding went as follows:

North East South West
1 ♠ Dble. Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass
Pass Pass

East (Charles Goren, playing with Waldemar von Zedwitz) resisted the temptation to double, but came forth with the killing opening lead of the king of spades. He continued with the ace and another spade, thus demolishing any chance dealer had of making the contract.

North eventually went down one and our team gained 1,530 points on the deal. I must admit that our team was very lucky to have North wind up as declarer at the second table instead of South, and this happenstance, combined with Goren's wise choice of a trump lead, enabled us eventually to win the match.
