

Two Pictures.

(From the London World.)

I.

A maiden, in a garden, dreaming
Of fairy prince and halcyon days;
Her head with sunny tresses trailing,
Bowed down beneath dim trellised ways.

A row of sunflowers by a paling,
A wicket left upon the latch,
A summer-house with woodbine trailing,
An ivy creeping o'er the thatch.

A footfall on the garden gravel,
A quickening heart, a whispered word;
A youth, burnt brown with foreign travel,
Come back to claim a hope deferred.

O happy, happy time of Love's beginning,
Ere even we can guess that storms are near!
Sunlight glancing, buds unfolding, thrushes
Singing,
Golden summer of the soul and of the year!

II.

A garret in a city byway,
A pale and woman all alone;
A weary wander on life's highway,
Poor and forsaken and unknown.

What need to knit the little stocking,
Or strive again for daily bread?
Why set an empty cradle rocking?
The nestling has forever fled!

"Yes, both are gone; perchance 'tis better!"
She sighs at length. "'Tis better so!"
Then bends to read a tattered letter;
Or turns to watch the falling snow.

Ah, bitter, bitter time of Sorrow's waking,
Ere even we can dream that hope is near!
Snow is falling, flow'rs are fading, hearts are Breaking,
Weary winter of the Soul and of the year!

FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS.

Concluded.

Four weeks passed away, and again Miss Priscilla had five hundred dollars in her possession—the amount paid her every month for the rent of some houses in another street.

It happened to be a stormy day in March, and she decided to leave the money in the house over night, as before, instead of taking it to the bank.

Doris is going, there can be no danger, she muttered grimly, as the crisp roll of bills were tucked away in the desk.

In the middle of the night she awakened suddenly to the consciousness that some one was in the house. She had plenty of nerve, and instead of covering her face with the bedclothes, she sprang up, drew an old wrapper about her and struck a light.

At the same instant there came a thud outside, as of a heavy fall, followed by a succession of groans.

Miss Priscilla knew at once what had happened. Running down stairs, she tore open the street door, and thrusting out her light beheld the figure of a man stretched upon the flagging. He had fallen from the balcony above while attempting to descend.

"Mercy!" she exclaimed. "You wicked wretch! It's a wonder you were not killed outright!"

"Hush," implored the wounded man. "For God's sake don't betray me!"

At the sound of that voice Miss Priscilla gave a violent start and leaned forward.

"You, Reginald! you?"

"Yes. Don't give me up to the officers of the law, aunt Priscilla—don't do it!"

She drew a quick breath, and understood all at once.

"You come here to rob me, Reginald?"

"Yes; I know when the rents were paid, and that you sometimes kept the money by you for a day or two. But here it is—every dollar. Curse the stuff! It has made me the wretch I am."

"Of course. I was in debt—hard up—and you would have refused me had I applied for help. There was no other way."

"How did you open the desk?"

"I have a skeleton key."

"Coward!" cried the woman, flaming up like a volcano. "And you could leave Doris, the poor child, to suffer in your stead? I'll never forgive you, never!"

"I shall keep the secret of your misdoings," she said, at parting. "But, take care that you never darken my doors again. Here are the five hundred dollars you risked your life to obtain. Take the money—it is all you will ever get from me."

The next day at noon, Doris Dreeme was returning home from the mill in her simple gray dress, when a grand carriage rolled down the hill and stopped just opposite. An eager, trembling old voice spoke her name.

"Doris, my child, come here and say that you forgive my harshness and in justice."

The next instant she was sobbing on Miss Priscilla's bosom. And while she lay there all was explained and forgiven.

Of course Doris returned with her aunt. But not to remain. A few weeks later the mill owner's hand-ome son, with whom she had long been in love, followed to make her his wife.

But Miss Priscilla has decided to take up her abode with the young couple, so all is well.

MARCH 1880.

OUR STOCK-TAKING SALE

during the month of February has been very successful; we have therefore decided to continue it through this month. The demand for patterns, as everybody knows, is always great, and we regret to say that in this line we have been particularly busy. The desire for "snips" has become chronic, but we trust a healthier state of things is in the future.

Our Dress Materials have had a steady sale, and give great satisfaction; their quality and unsurpassed cheapness make them very tempting. Black Cashmeres and Lustres are in great request, in "snips" of 8 to 16 yards.

We have recently received a new lot of Gents' Spring Overcoats and Suits, also a lot of Suits for Boys; all at very low prices.

Gents' wear of all kinds we find to go off very rapidly. We call especial attention to our Fine Black Broadcloth, Tweeds, Linders and Drawers, Ties, Paper and Linen Collars, Hosiery, &c.

Carpets, Hemp, Scotch, Felt and Tapestry, a very good assortment, and ridiculously cheap, Hearth Rugs, Door Mats, &c.

Table Damasks, Wool Table Covers, Linen Table Covers, Towels, 40 cents per doz. upwards.

Our Dress Fringes at 5 to 10 cents per yard, and Ladies' Dress Caps at 10 to 20 cents, are selling readily.

New Lot of Prime Teas just come in; our 32-cent is nearly run out, but we have on hand a few chests of 36-cent Tea, which we retail ONLY. Our 40-cent Tea is regarded as the best in the city; but all grades sell rapidly. We sell in caddies of 5, 8, 10, 15 or 20 lbs., neatly done up, so as to retain the flavor.

SEMINARY FOR YOUNG LADIES.

VISITOR:

The Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia

PRINCIPAL:

The Rev. John Padfield.

THIS SCHOOL offers, at very moderate cost, the advantages of a comfortable and pleasant home together with a thorough and refined education.

The course of instruction is the same as that of the best Schools in England and is founded upon the University Examinations for Women. Eight young ladies from this School passed the Local Examination of the University of King's College in June last.
This is the only School in Canada that has passed pupils at a University Examination.

The number of pupils is limited, rendering the School select, and while it possesses all the educational advantages of a large public school,
each pupil is enabled to receive that individual care and oversight which is so important, and which cannot be given in a large establishment.

Mr. and Mrs. Padfield are assisted by a staff of four resident governesses, besides visiting masters.

Parisienne French is taught conversation-ally. There are two resident French Governesses.

References given to parents of pupils.

cipal.
