The Navy officially launched a new career in its Air Branch with presentation Friday of wings to six "Observers Mates" at RCN Air Station, Dartmouth, Nova Scotia.

They are the first Air Branch personnel in the Canadian Navy who are not commissioned and will be the "Third Man" in an Avenger aircraft - latest RCN anti-submarine carrier plane. Other Navy aircraft are single or two-seaters.

They will go to 826 Squadron, destined for the carrier H. M. C. S. "Magnificent" sometime in the future. Another class of O. M.'s is now underway at the air base.

Their duties cover operation of all radio and radar sets and anti sub search apparatus. The course was 17 weeks long, and qualified them as third class rates October 29th.

To pass they must know some electronics, communications, anti sub warfare, airport traffic control, simple navigation, aircraft recognition, medical aspects of flying and survival and dinghy drills.

Regulations state they are to remain members of the A/C Branch for an initial period of two years. Then, approximately half will be selected to continue as Observers Mates throughout their careers, qualifying for further advancement as such.

The balance will return to normal ground duties, qualifying for further advancement in that Branch.

The course is open to Able Seaman Aircraft Controlmen who have been a year in that rate. They must have a Junior matriculation (including mathematics) and must make at least 5% in the Navy's intelligence test.

Officer in charge Observers Mates is Lt. (observer) R. I. W. T. Goddard, DSC, RCN; their class officer is Lt. (C) Edward Brooman, RCN, (both of Toronto). Instructors include CPO Robert Hogg (Leaside, Ont.) and PO Robert Geale (Port Colborne, Ont.).

NEW FLY SWAT. HAMBURG, Germany, Nov. 6 - (Reuters) - Hermann Wolf, 47, pressed a button and, he says, all the flies in his workshop dropped dead. He was testing his "super-sonic death ray." Wolf claims that the gadget, which weighs 25 pounds and looks like a portable radio, kills insects by making a screech so high-pitched that humans cannot hear it.

LUMINOUS PAINT. CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 6 - (Reuters) - Shame-faced Egyptian police admitted today that a $3,000,000 haul of "radium" they took in a raid last week was luminous paint worth 85 cents. The police said last week that they believed the "radium" had been smuggled into Egypt from Britain or stolen from a plane passing through an Egyptian airport.

Story Behind Recent Revolt In Puerto Rico

By James Fowler

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Nov. 6 - (AP) - A silver-tongued speaker with a burning, personal hatred of the United States...

A handful of fanatical men who would follow him to the death... A plan for revolution gone awry.

That, in brief, is the story behind the events that blew up in a fantastic climax last week with an attempt upon the life of the President of the United States.

But the story really goes back to 1917, when Pedro Albizu Campos, after being graduated from Harvard University, became a lieutenant in the United States army.

The army placed Albizu in a Negro regiment and his hatred of the U. S. begins from that day.

Today Albizu, president of the tiny but noisy Nationalist Party, is in closely guarded custody. His short-lived revolution has been crushed after taking 27 lives. His followers are being rounded up in droves.

The Puerto Rican Government, moving warily, is determined that nothing shall be done to make this 63-year-old fanatic a martyr.

Everything possible is being done to minimize the abortive revolt in the eyes of the 2,000,000 people in this island territory of the United States.

Life Insurance Official Approves New Legislation

WINNIPEG, Nov. 6 - (CP) - Gordon C. Cumming, president of the Canadian Life Insurance Officers' Association, said recently he thinks the legislation proposed by the Government concerning insurance company profits, will meet with the general approval of both policy holders and shareholders.

He was commenting on Finance Minister Abbott's announcement last night that legal limitation will be placed on the proportion of profits which may be distributed to shareholders.

Mr. Cumming commented: "For many years the larger companies have been transferring to shareholders less than the 10 per cent allowance that is at present permitted. In the period 1922 to 1948, which includes years of prosperity, depression and war, the shareholders of Canadian companies received in the aggregate less than five per cent of the profits distributed. The best interests of policy holders have always been the primary concern of company managements."

"Life insurance shares have always been highly regarded by conservative investors and as a result the yield thereon has been correspondingly low. Prices that have been bid for some shares recently would seem to indicate a speculative interest without regard to the value of the shares from a purely investment point of view."

"Such a situation is not a healthy one and it is to be hoped that the announcement by the Minister of Finance will tend to clear the air."

Mr. Cumming did not comment on the nature of the speculative interest. There have been reports, however, of heavy buying of the shares of some companies at greatly increased prices. This may have led to a fear that new interests coming into the companies might bring about a change of policy which would take advantage of the legal limit allowed for distribution of profits.

The shares of Canadian life insurance companies are not listed on stock exchanges, and transactions in them are, in effect, private.

There was much discussion on this and not being able to reach any conclusion it was decided to leave the matter until a later date.

Ralph Rayner expressed the value of the United Churchman and urged the Young People to promote this paper as much as possible.

Evelyn Underhay then spoke about the Christian Youth Caravan and her experiences with it this summer. Christian Youth work has been described as one of the best things that has happened in our Churches in recent years and it is hoped that more Young People will have the opportunity and privilege of serving with this new type of work.

The Young People of the Maritimes have an objective of $100,000 to raise this winter to support Caravans for the summer of 1951 and it is hoped that P. E. I. will do their share to support this very worthwhile project.

The report of the resolutions committee was read and moved by Hadden MacLeod and seconded by Betty King.

The following are the resolutions.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Continued from page 2. "Whatever shall I do?" Her two sisters, one standing at attention beside the top of the bed the other at the foot looked at each other helplessly. "You just crawl in!" James coaxed above the din "and your grandmother'll say them for you - for tonight!" But I don't want her to say them for me - I was-a-nt you-u-u!" she objected loudly. And who would say that a grandfather's Now-I-lay-me did not reach past the night-clouds to obtain on her behalf, safe passage until "morning light!"

"That's enough of Hallowe'en, Ellen," James whispered as we crept slowly down the stairs "better for her if she'd been in her bed by dark. I'm blessing if that's not the other lad stirring now!" But it was only the wind of night complaining about the eaves of the house across the lane, where strange little things were "out" for the evening. Not that it is usual to sit for any length of time, because even in the midst of a fascinating story and in the silence prevailing we are reminded to come back to our duty. "He's uncovered by this, Ellen - I just bet he's in any event you'd better get up to see if it won't take but a minute. And perhaps you'd better close the window, Ellen - it's not too healthy to have it open in frost! Did you fancy she looked a little peaked today? Perhaps going to come down with an illness - the dear!"

These incidents October's last day brought to us - of children's Hallowe'en - children who are no longer babes but are fast growing up. It returned to us a parting, when the fish-man of Summer made his last round of the year. This afternoon his smart truck carried in a gesture to it "salt mackerel, Matamoras and cod, no more fresh fish. This," he indicated the stiff breeze and cold, of the dying year "looks as if Summer's pretty well over! Well, we've only got to let her go... and look ahead to the Spring! Not been a bad Summer - good crops! And isn't that what the farmer wants? Oh, yes," he remembered, "I've brought you a present - from a nice woman far and ever away from here. Now don't say," he chuckled as James ranged up alongside bent on obtaining Winter supplies of his wares, "that a man never brought you a gift!"

Granddaughter smiled as she stroked the silken plumage of the silver gift-wings. "I guess perhaps," she said softly, "these aren't of a mommy-goose or a father. Might be," she nodded, "the thought stilling any regrets over a loss of life on our behalf, "it was a young silly thing that once was these - one that didn't like babies, or wouldn't watch at night while the others slept. A no-good goose these came off. And you'll have to put them away, or else the first thing you know, granddaddy will have them out cleaning a stove-pipe!" But James looks up from his reading to hear the return of the truck, and to say: "Wasn't it good to get everything in from the field today, before October was gone from us?"

Until tomorrow - Diary - Good-night.

COUNTRY GARDEN

Continued from page 1. Violet lilac and a snowball tree as companions. It is very important to plant the tulips where they will look their best with a good background of evergreens or flowering shrubs. Lilacs and Spireas are suitable, and blossoming fruit-trees are lovely with tulips nearby. In the culture of bulbs is simple... good drainage is necessary and soil rich.

I imagine from the sketch that the fence marked on it is the boundary on one side. If there is a good view of something lovely, it is better to keep that open, but usually a grouping of shrubs will be the best treatment and they will make a splendid background for a border of hardy perennials. The ground should be prepared this Fall, well dug and manured.

There are many varieties of shrubs and perennials suitable for this border, but my time is up for this week and I shall write more about this garden next week, before I go it is necessary to tell you that it is most important that all flower borders must have good drainage, it is the most important part of gardening.

United Church Y.P.U. Fall Rally

The Fall Rally of the Young People's Union of the Eastern Presbytery was held in Bay Fortune United Church on Wed. Nov. 1.

The afternoon session opened with an impressive worship service led by Dundas Y. P. U. with appropriate hymns were sung. Mr. Hadden MacLeod presiding. Responsive Reading was Psalm Selection 712 led by Miss Jean Duncan followed by Scripture reading by Miss Lexie MacDonaid. Mr. Angus MacLeod then led in prayer. The organist was Mrs. W. A. Bruce.

A most cordial welcome was extended to all present by Leslie Underhay of Bay Fortune Y. P. U. This was fittingly responded to by Miss Betty King of Central Y. P. U. The President, Irene Bruce capably conducted the business period.

In the absence of the Secretary, the minutes of the Spring Rally were read by Evelyn Underhay and approved as read.

Those present were reminded of holding Annual meetings early in December and forwarding lists of officers and membership fees to our Secretary Treasurer.

Ralph Rayner and Evelyn Underhay then spoke on the Coaching Congress to be held in Charlottetown, Armistice week-end.

Our Presbytery delegate to Maritime Conference, Mary Gill, Underhay, gave a very interesting account of her days spent at Conference.

The following committees were appointed: Press: Mr. Parker Jewell, Sec'y. Resolutions: 1. Hadden MacLeod, 2. Betty King, 3. Miriam Wayne.

The afternoon discussion period was under the capable leadership of Ralph Rayner, Mr. Herbert who was a delegate to National Council.

The benediction was pronounced by Rev. John MacKay.

The Group then adjourned to accept the kind hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Reid Underhay who gave the use of their lovely home where box lunches were shared and tea was served by the hostess.

Mr. Arthur Vesey, during the social hour led the group in a rousing sing-song.

The opening session opened with a brief business period. The minutes of the afternoon session were read by the Secretary and approved. Roll Call was responded to by 140 members representing 12 Unions, besides a large number of visitors.

Mr. Reginald Clarke referred to literature which was available for any wishing to obtain Y. P. Material.

Rev. John MacKay spoke briefly about the Y. P. Camps and urged the Young People to express their opinions as to whether they would prefer week-end Camps or ten-day Camps.

There was much discussion on this and not being able to reach any conclusion it was decided to leave the matter until a later date.

Ralph Rayner expressed the value of the United Churchman and urged the Young People to promote this paper as much as possible.
