LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Mr. Editor,—Please be kind enough to permit me to ask a few questions through your columns. 1st. Why are contractors allowed to obstruct the passage on the sidewalk by placing earth and lumber thereon? Secondly. Why the city authorities do not attend to the crossings of Prince and Easton and Hillsborough and Easton streets. With reference to those crossings, I may say that in wet weather they are a disgrace to the city and great inconvenience to the public in general and to foot passengers in particular. Hoping that those small matters will be attended to without delay.

I remain yours, etc.,
ESQUIRE AND GRUMBLER,

One "Observer" as Viewed by Another

Sir,—In the Patriot of the 12th inst.
I find that "Observer" sees fit to strike Mr.
Munn, whilst that gentleman is engaged with the editor of the Patriot. If there is one man meaner than another 'tis he who will strike an opponent when his hands are already engaged. But still more base and contemptible is the creature who after he commits the dastardly act thrusts his hands in his pockets, thus hoping to escape detection. Let "Observer" lay not this flattering unctious to his soul, for he is well known, as there are few in the Cardigan District who would be guilty of so vile an action. He begins his communication by finding fault with Mr. Munn for writing for the EXAMINER and thus neglecting his official duties.
But, before he finishes, he asserts that Mr.
Munn is not the author at all. This, of itself, is sufficient to show the extreme vindictiveness of "Observer," and as an index of his intelligence and knowledge of what he writes, he states that Mr. Munn is supervisor of the 9th District of King's.
If this is the section that appears to the mind of "Observer" to be most notoriously neglected, Mr. Munn is not to blame as he has no jurisdiction over that District.
Not wishing to lift the mantle of intelligence from the worthy shoulders of "Observer," I at the same time may inform him that Mr. Munn is Supervisor for No. 8. "Observer" states that the roads are neglected and uncomfortable and soon will be impassable. Lucian tells us that Alexander began propagating his false teachings among the Paphlagonians as they were the most ignorant and stupid of the people. "Observer" must consider the residents of Cardigan district to be of the same stripe if he imagines that they will swallow this gross delusion when the most incontrovertible facts to the contrary are daily before their eyes; yet there are two classes whom it would be extremely difficult for the Government to legislate for their comfort. Those whose members are constitutionally diseased and those who are approaching the last stages of political diarrhoea. Hence the moanings of "Observer."

He asserts that Mr. Munn did not write the articles that appeared over his signature in the EXAMINER. Whether it was Mr.
Munn or Bellzubb that was their author, I will not assume the province of determining. I will leave that to "Observer," who from his professed knowledge of the two would naturally be inclined to confer the honor on the master whom he most assiduously serves.

Mean while, I remain,
Yours,
ANOTHER OBSERVER.

Personal—Gossip.

It was Queen Victoria who dubbed Tom Thumb "General."

The London season has been short but brilliant and the town is now rapidly emptying.

Sir Charles Tupper, High Commissioner for Canada, has re-opened treaty communications with France.

The widow Thumb, it is believed, will come into possession of over $300,000.
This is a pretty large figure for such a small figure.

The report that the Premier would go to Manitoba in August next was a mistake.
Sir John Macdonald will not be able to do so this summer.

The Queen remains at Windsor and seriously feels the Princess Beatrice's departure for a continental watering place for the benefit of her rheumatism.

It is all very well for a man to believe that the earth revolves on its axis, but when he becomes thoroughly convinced that he is himself the axis the less you have to do with him the better.

"Why am I not a nephew or niece of Mr.
Benjamin Hammond, of Walmassillas, Bradford," exclaims the editor of London Truth. "Last week he celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday, on which occasion he presented thirty nephews or nieces with £740 each."

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain denied that Mr.
Cobden predicted the universal triumph of free trade within five years of its adoption by England. A wicked Tory thereupon turned up the very speech of the great free trader in which the prediction in terms most explicit, was contained. Tories and retroctionists should be suppressed.

Rev. J. F. Avery, pastor of the Tabernacle, has been spending the past fortnight in P. E. Island. He has been the guest of Hon. John Lefurgey, of Summerside. On Saturday the rev. gentleman left the Island to pay a short visit to his friends at Sackville, N. B., and is expected home about the first of August.—Halifax Herald.

There is a movement among the Conservatives to elect Lord Salisbury as the leader of the party, deposing Sir Stafford Northcote. The combative spirit of the peer is more in accordance with the feelings of the party than the timid, feeble and vacillating policy of Sir Stafford Northcote.
The Council of the Conservative Union proposes to bring the matter up at an early meeting, and should the resolution be carried, Sir Stafford Northcote will resign the leadership.

The fashion of sea-bathing has made good swimmers of a great many ladies, and they are putting their abilities to good use. Already this season several lives have been saved by lady swimmers at the summer resorts. A daughter of ex-Secretary of the navy Borne saved from drowning two children who had been carried out by a receding wave while bathing at Cape May.
At a watering place on Long Island a Miss Laury saved a minister and another gentleman who had ventured too far, neither being able to swim; and Miss Fanny Reigal, at a little village on the Delaware, plunged into a mill pond without taking time to remove any of her clothing, and rescued three little children who were imperilled by the upsetting of a boat.

Captain Webb's proposition to undertake the shooting of Niagara Falls on a wager of $10,000 calls to mind an incident of the reign of Czar Nicholas, half a century ago, or thereabouts. Looking out of his window one day, that monarch saw a large and interested crowd on the bank of the Neva.
He sent an officer to find out the cause, and learned that a man had bet five rubles—$3.75—that he could run across the river on the ice, which was then in that treacherous half-liquid state caused by the commencement of the spring thaw. The man performed the perilous feat, received his five rubles, and then Nicholas had him arrested and flogged with a hundred stripes; "for," said the Czar, "a man who will risk his life for such a sum is capable of committing any act of baseness for a similar consideration."

As Capt. Webb ascended the tower at Hotel Pemberton, Boston, Thursday evening to make his second dive, there were 3000 anxious faces steadily watching his movements. He raised his arms as a signal to Reeves' band to play a chord, at the conclusion of which his arms fell and he dashed head first from the dizzy height, but before he reached the water he turned completely over, striking with great force.
He disappeared from sight, but soon appeared above the surface, exhibiting signs of great exhaustion. His attendants as soon as possible, hurried him quickly to a room in Hotel Pemberton, where he received careful attendance. On examination it was found that his neck, arms and back were a mass of swollen and feverish blis-ters. The captain was removed to his home on the beach. At a late hour, he said that he would try and exhibit again that night or give up the business forever.
