P.W.C. News & Views

Only three more weeks until Christmas exams roll around once again. This week will see the last of the college social functions for the first term. The last dance at P. W. C. will be Friday night with a co-ed dance celebrating Sadie Hawkins' day, which is on the twenty-ninth.

Now that the winter season is rolling around once more everyone's mind turns to the thoughts of hockey and basketball. In the field of hockey, a house league has been started under the management of Edward "Moon" Mullins, comprised of six teams from the college. So far there are over a hundred applicants for the different teams. The first league games started last Monday, and there have been several others since. The best players from these teams will be picked and placed in the regular Welshmen team for play in a competitive league outside the college. They plan to create two teams, a senior and juvenile. These two teams will probably begin their practices during the Christmas holidays.

Earl Nicholson has consented to coach the Welshmen hoopers again this year. It is the general opinion that P. W. C. has a much stronger team for the league this year. They will be playing against other teams in the newly formed city league, with other teams the Saints and the Y. The team has been late in getting underway for practices, so probably will not play in league competition for some time.

Along with obtaining the time at the Forum for the house league games, the student council has also been thinking of the other students who just prefer skating and have started a free skate for all students of P. W. C. on Thursdays at noon hour.

The Bulletin and the Times will be appearing soon for the last issue of this term. It is expected that the editor and staff of the Bulletin will have the second issue out early this week. The first issue met with tremendous approval and this new one will probably be even better. The Times is calling for material to be in before this Thursday, so a copy—the Christmas issue—sometime in the next week can be expected.

Prince of Wales feels it has some good debating prospects in second year and are planning for a debate against Summerside High School about December 15th. They have picked the two best debaters from each second year section and from these six they will choose their team of three for big debate.
