Controversial Flag Mural Has Been Hidden, But Why?

Why? Did someone think Mr. Pearson, be-flagged as he is these days, might just as soon not be confronted with the Red Ensign-centred array of flags?

Not so, laughed a Confederation Centre official when asked about it yesterday.

The mural, although housed in the Confederation Centre, is not officially owned by the theatre yet, he said. It is expected to be donated by Senator Harold Molson. But the senator has yet to see the work, or at least a photo of it, the spokesman said, and if he doesn't like it, he may not buy it for the Centre. (The mural carries a $10,000 price tag.)

However, the mural has been on display for at least six weeks and was only covered since the Prime Minister arrived.

Lack Of High School Leaders Seen AYPAs Main Problem

Poor communication and the lack of efficient leadership especially at the high school level were named as the main problems facing the Anglican Young Peoples Association when that group held its first annual consultation division council in Charlottetown August 29-30.

Delegates also complained of very little assistance from the clergy and poor cooperation with the diocesan boards of religious education.

Suggested remedies included leadership and counselling training courses, and more interesting programs including, in the words of the national president, Greg Barlow, Vancouver, "not only religious, but also social, economic and the political issues."

There was also some discussion on the topic of eliminating the vest.

It was felt that the main function of the dominion council included keeping young people

Sept. Potato Spray Program Is Important

The recent period of showers, heavy dews, and warmer temperatures provided the most suitable conditions for the late blight fungus since mid-July. About this period, the fungus was producing spores in abundance which, with ideal moisture content for germination, will have increased the infections in fields in which proper chit rains and other measures have not been applied.

The spray program is likely to be of most importance in September and this is either July or August.

The tubers are now sizing rapidly. Growers are therefore advised to check their crops by pulling a few tops every few days so that top killers may be applied when growth has reached the stage where the maximum number of marketable potatoes are present. This advice is of special significance to growers of the variety Kennebec, a variety which has a strong tendency to over-size.
