The important suit fashion for fall includes the newly defined, double-breasted, double-breasted jacket. Arthur Jablow uses it for a handsome, sheer wool fabric in a shade of the color, Elizabeth beige. The deep jacket hand suggests an easy break in the silhouette and the collar is neatly plotted with long green lapels reaching into the double-breasted closing, highlighted by a cluster of water roses.

WE AND OUR NEIGHBORS

A Bargain Is a Bargain Is A Bargain-Perhaps

Ruhamah S. Frank

These are "Sale" days in town with real bargains and I keep thinking of some of the "fabulous bargains" offered in one Fifth Avenue shop on my last visit to New York. I keep thinking — and laughing — and good laughs bring forth more than money, these sale items. I DID NOT BUY were bargains after all, for me!

A bargain is a bargain is a bargain. On an idle afternoon I strolled through the above mentioned shop and halted before a counter where a small sign indicated sweaters "reduced for clearance." They were jumbled together in a shop meant for made "Laski" miss. I said to the clerk who had been gazing disingly as if their sales price was too low to bother about method of display. I would have liked a perfectly fresh sweater — but then, I considered, these could be of good quality and you can't expect Everything in a sale garment.

PEAK OF FASHION.

The draped furban is "the" shales of green satin. Then, in which means that it is also the smartest, heads, and appears at every price level, always a good buy. It is the important note peaked furban fashioned of green velours and richly draped in two Nearby was a counter with hats. I should have known better but perhaps — Fished out a simple untrimmed hat of velvet — one of those "looker" hats and looked at the price tag. $25.00 reduced from $40.00 — another staggering bargain. I did not take advantage of it!

By then I felt more than a little naive in my judgment of high class merchandise. But I would redeem myself yet. On our way out of the shop we passed some evening gowns also marked "On Sale." They were on separate racks and I suspected that the price would be high. Pointing to one lovely dress of filmy white material, I said to my friend, "That dress looks simple enough but I shouldn't wonder if it costs over $300.00." It did. The price was $75.00! Ah, well, in the name of Gertrude Stein's oft-quoted poem, "A rose is a rose is a rose" — a bargain is a bargain is a bargain.

I REALLY LIKE HIM
Still speaking of sales, I overheard one clerk — a man-clerk — say to another at the close of a sales day, "Now don't get me wrong. Mr. K is nice enough. I really like him — but when you customers like him and I'd love to see him go. You know that Mr. K can be a Pussu too, when they buy?"

GREWICH W. I.
Mrs. Aldus Mackenzie, Morrell, was hostess to the Green with W. I. for their October meeting. The members were entertained first by two T.V. plays, "The Secret of the Red Room" and "Fox Hunt." Then with the president presiding the meeting opened with the Institute, followed by the Mary Stewart Collet. The president extended a welcome to Mrs. Mackenzie and her mother, Mrs. F. MacLaren, a former member of our W. I. also to other visitors.

Roll call was answered by 9 members with an article for future card parties. Minutes of last meeting were read and signed. Business was discussed, library money had been handed in to St. Peter's W. I. Red Cross Capsules were received, a set of "Science Cabinet" ordered. The programme material for 1958 was handed in and three members were appointed to prepare programme book.

The sick and School committee gave their report and school Mrs. Battray gave a report on Mrs. Battray's reading by Mrs. Battray and a card talk on Rural Youth, was held at Green with W. I. for their October meeting. Mrs. Mackenzie gave a very interesting talk on "Run, Run, Run" led by the Moral W. I. Program for the evening consisted of a reading by Mrs. Name (late, deceased) Mrs. in St. Peter's and vicinity invited to attend. Lunches are to be sold.

assisted in serving by Mrs. Mrs. Mackenzie, Mrs. Lore MacLaren, Mrs. Melvin MacLaren. During lunch hour we were again entertained by T. J. A vote of thanks was extended to the hostess and the meeting adjourned.
