Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Cotton were recently married at Tyne Valley Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Cotton is the former Marlene MacArthur, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald MacArthur, of Tyne Valley.

Misses Theresa and Antoinette Arsenault completed their teachers training course in Magdalen Islands. They are now home for summer holidays.

Week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arcade Arsenault of St. Chrysostem were, Mr. and Mrs. Camille Cormier and family, of Saint John, N.B.; Mr and Mrs. Edmond Arsenault, Summerside; Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Arsenault, and Mr. and Mrs. Arsene Gallant, and families of Miscouche.

Mr. and Mrs. Donat Arsenault and family, Saint John, N.B. recently visited Mr. and Mrs. Amand Arsenault.

Mrs. Wilfred Doucette and Mrs. James McInnis of Charlottetown visited friends and relatives recently in St. Chrysostem.

Mrs. Edward Arsenault and children and Mrs. Raymond Gallant and family of Wellington visited Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gallant, St. Chrysostem.

Mr. and Mrs. Jean Mark Arsenault, Summerside, were guests of Mr and Mrs. Rene Arsenault.

Remedies Said Drastic But Appear Warranted

Ottawa Citizen—The remedies proposed by Mr. Justice Norris are drastic, but in the context of the seamen's warfare they appear warranted. Evidently a moderate solution will not meet the present emergency—and the commissioner is right in so regarding it. . . . Parliament can and should adopt the commissioner's proposals for domestic action.

Moncton Times—The 275,000-word report is more than sufficient to condemn the SIU beyond a shadow of a doubt. The recommendations are many and sweeping yet they are obviously necessary in the light of the reign of terror which has marked the rule of the SIU on the Great Lakes. Gangsterism of any sort, be it under the guise of unionism, should be driven out as expeditiously as possible.

Winnipeg Tribune—The report urges the Canadian people to place power within the hands of government equivalent to the emergencies act of wartime. This is strong medicine which is not only distasteful but dangerous.

Justice Norris was most intemperate in his castigation of Banks. If the report can document only a portion of the charges made against Banks, proceedings should be taken against him in the courts. . . .

Montreal Gazette (Ind. Con.)—Precedents might be set for unions in general if these recommendations were carried into effect. But some precedent has to be set that tyranny within a union will not be tolerated.

However much the Canadian union movement in general may question some aspects of the Norris report, it will support the central principle of bringing the control of the unions back to membership.

. . . Mr. Justice Norris is not waging a vendetta. His report, rising above personalities in its final recommendations, seeks the far larger aim of assuring to union members and the public alike freedom under law . . .

Toronto Globe and Mail—The most important service of the Norris report is that it forces the United States and Canadian governments to face the fact that the existing labor laws of both countries are inadequate to cope with calculated labor violence and corruption.

It is possible to feel uneasiness about the broad powers proposed for the trustees, and about the advisability of a single monopolistic marine union. But the commissioner proposes the only course which is likely to root out the present corruption in the SIU and provide a temporary period of peace during which more lasting machinery for peace may be designed. Respectable unions, respectable companies and respectable politicians should have the common sense to recognize the emergency and co-operate in the remedies. . . .

Anti-China Campaign Launched In Moscow

MOSCOW (AP)—Red China's envoys to the Communist party "peace talks" here retired to the seclusion of their embassy Tuesday as Soviet propaganda organs pressed an anti-Chinese campaign.

The Soviet attacks were being conducted in the tones usually reseved for indignant outbursts against the West.

In one move, a former top official of the Soviet aid program in Peking charged Communist China had wrecked aid projects because of the ideological dispute between the two Communist giants.

Ivan Belobrov, former chief consultant to the Chinese ministry of iron and steel, told the Soviet news agency Tass the Chinese attitude slowed down the rate of Chinese development.

"Interparty (Communist) differences were transferred by the Chinese into the sphere of business contacts," Belobrov told Tass. "This began to act as a brake to the solution of quite clear technical problems."

BOLSTERS CHARGES

The interview with Belobrov was obviously aimed at bolstering charges by the Soviet Communist party that it was China which cut back on the trade-and-aid relations between the two countries. Western experts had said previously that the Soviet Union withdrew its help as a form of pressure during the dispute over control of the world Communist movement.

Despite the Soviet attacks, the Russians and Chinese were expected to resume their talks today.

The recent open letter from the central committee of the Soviet Communist party about the Moscow-Peking split and the trade between the two countries had dropped 67 per cent during the last three years.

This would mean that annual trade between the two giants of world communism had dropped to under $650,000,000—the smallest volume since 1950.

Reports of frictions between pro-Chinese elements and Moscow supporters in the leadership of Communist parties of Italy, France and India have reached here since the publication of the Russians open letter on the dispute on Sunday.

The ideological quarrel is mainly over how best to advance communism throughout the world. The Soviet Union says it should be done peacefully while China advocates violent methods.

Division Lines Appear At World Faith Parley

By ALEXANDER FARRELL

MONTREAL (CP)—Lines of division about the character and calling of the Christian ministry — largely between Orthodox and Protestant delegates—emerged Tuesday at the fourth world conference on faith and order.

Dealing with the topic is one of 16 conference sub-sections set up to tackle various doctrinal issues dividing Christianity.

Discussion in the sub-section focused initially on the question of whether the ordained ministry is meant, at least in the fullness of its power, to be priesthood — a ministry associated with the idea of offering sacrifice as the central act of worship.

The sub-section will also take up the related question of how it is supposed to be determined that a man has been "called" to the ministry.

A Greek Orthodox delegate said the priesthood, "the ministry offering sacrifice," was "the fullness of the ministry in the Ancient Law (the Old Testament) and in the New Testament this function is elevated because it is Our Saviour who is sacrificed."

Commenting on the working paper prepared for the sub-section, he said "we would prefer the term sacerdotal (priestly) ministry, instead of pastoral ministry, when we talk about that part of the ministry needed to accomplish the redemptive work of Christ."

SACRIFICE REPEATED

The Orthodox churches, like the Roman Catholic, hold the doctrine that Christ's sacrifice of his body and blood is repeated in the ritual of consecration and communion at mass.

The general Protestant view, as expressed by some speakers during Tuesday's discussion, is that such an act of worship is a memorial, commemorating a sacrifice offered once and for all.

Reporters have been admitted to section and sub-section meetings on condition that they not quote speakers by name without express permission.

A Protestant delegate said he is "troubled about the idea of a priest offering sacrifice before an altar, inasmuch as I don't see why this practice in the Ancient Law has any necessary equivalent in the New Testament or, there, in our understanding of the ministry."

Another expressed the same misgivings more bluntly when he said "In the epistle to the Hebrews (where Paul speaks of the priesthood of Christ) Christ presents his blood in the heavenly sanctuary as a sacrifice once and for all; there is no priestly order set up, there is no warrant here for the application of priestly imagery to the ministry of the church."

The biddings:

East	South	West	North
Pass	2 NT	Pass	7 NT

Opening lead—ten of spades.

Let's say you're declarer at seven notrump and West leads a spade. The contract is not bad because you have twelve tricks on top and many different ways of acquiring the thirteenth.

Thus, the diamonds or the clubs may be divided 3-3, and would be all over. Also you could make the hand by means of a squeeze, even if both suits broke badly, provided the opponent with the diamond length also had the club length.

In that case, you could make the hand by cashing three spades and three hearts, and your unfortunate opponent would be forced to relinquish his stopper in one minor suit or the other.

There is also a fourth possibility that is not so apparent. The defense might make a mistake if given the opportunity. This possibility cannot be ignored because it provides a way of making the hand even if one opponent has the diamond length and the other has the club length.

The best thing to do is win the spade with the ace and cash the A-K-Q of clubs. Since dummy has four clubs in clear sight, this can do no harm, because it must be assumed that neither defender holding four clubs would part with one of them if the other suits were led first.

In the actual case, West would show out on the third club and discard a spade.

You would now lead the queen and jack of spades. Note the position that West is put in when you do this. He must choose a discard when the spade jack is played. He has to discard a heart or a diamond, holding the 10-8-4-2 of both suits.

West may or may not make the right discard—it is not easy for him to choose correctly—but at least you've given yourself an extra chance to make the contract.

Note also that this method of play does not relinquish the possibility of a successful squeeze if either opponent is long in both diamonds and clubs.
