Royal Bank Meeting Here To Honor Two Centennials

W. Earle McLaughlin, chairman and president of the Royal Bank of Canada and John H. Coleman, chief general manager, and two of the company officials who with attend a Board of Directors meeting of the Royal Bank here today.

JOHN H. COLEMAN

Altogether there are some 30 directors and company officers here for the meeting being held in the Fathers of Confederation Building at 11 o'clock this morning.

By holding the meeting here the Royal Bank is paying homage to the men who met in Charlottetown 100 years ago, as well as taking an active part in Centennial Celebrations.

The holding of the directors meeting away from head office is not new for the Royal Bank. The bank feels it is an excellent way of taking the pulse of the different economic regions of the country. Earlier this year a board of directors meeting was held at Regina, Sask.

Not only is the Royal Bank helping to celebrate the centennial of the meetings of the Fathers of Confederation, but it is also celebrating its own centennial this year.

OWN CENTENNIAL

The Royal traces its history back 100 years ago to when it first began in Halifax on May 2, 1864, by the name of "The Bank of the Seven Merchants". By 1869 the name had changed to "The Merchants Bank of Halifax" and its total assets were $729,163. Today's assets of the Royal are $713,933,078.

The first branch outside of Halifax was established at Pictou, N.S. in 1870. Branches were known as agencies in those days and the first agency outside Nova Scotia was opened in Charlottetown in 1873.

The Merchants Bank's first branch outside of Canada was at Hamilton, Bermuda, opened in 1882. The Bank made the leap to the Pacific in 1897 when it opened branches in British Columbia.

In 1900 the name was changed to The Royal Bank of Canada, and through purchases of other banks and expansion it now has 1,041 branches in Canada and 97 foreign branches.

FIRST MANAGER HERE

The first manager, or agent, of the Merchants Bank in Charlottetown was a local merchant, Owen Connolly, who ran the bank's business as a sideline. Since Mr. Connolly there have been 11 managers of the Royal Bank in Charlottetown.

A.W. Hyndman served 38 years as manager of the branch here in two different periods, one from 1909 to 1921 and the other from 1923 to 1939. Of the 11 he spent the longest time as manager here.

W. EARLE McLAUGHLIN

There was a sub-agency of the Charlottetown agency established in Summerside in 1874 and another in Souris in 1877. By 1894 the Summerside agency was made independent of Charlottetown and the following year the Souris agency was closed.

On the Island today there are four branches of the bank, at Tyne Valley, Summerside, Hunter River and Charlottetown. With the Charlottetown branch having a sub-agency at Mount Stewart.

Dragger Hull Catches Fire

GEORGETOWN — Fire broke out at approximately 8.30 a.m. yesterday on board the dragger hull "Gulf Gallant" tied up at Georgetown railway wharf.

The fire was reportedly started from an acetylene torch used by workmen to cut a hole in the steel deck of the dragger in preparing for installing a large engine. The engine is now on a railway flatcar on the rail siding here.

Materials stored in the hold of the dragger and packed in boxes are reported to have caught fire, but damage was held to a minimum through the use of fire hoses from the adjacent dominion government potato warehouse.

Oil Storage Construction Underway

GEORGETOWN — Work began yesterday on the site of the new Irving Oil Company storage depot here.

The site is located on the commons lands on the east side of Kent Street and immediately to the north of North Street.

Town Council Decides On Land For Housing Unit

MONTAGUE — At a special meeting of the Montague Town Council held Thursday it was decided to buy land for $500 from Clark and Clements, for the building of a senior citizen's housing unit in this area.

This land borders on John Beer Drive, Queens Road and the high school. The decision depends on approval by Town Planner Walter De Silva and officials from Central Mortgage and Housing of the adjoining property of George Gordon bordering on Queens Road, and parallel to John Beer Drive. Mr. Gordon has offered to make a gift of this property in the event the senior citizen's housing project is carried through.

It is planned then to build a road off John Beer Drive parallel to Queens Road for use in this project. The two properties will then form an 'L' shaped property large enough to be used for this new development.

In the event that approval is granted it is expected that building will get underway in November, and that the four apartment unit will be ready for occupancy by July.

Despite chill weather, voting was described generally as brisk.

When the polls closed at 9 p.m., it was estimated that four out of five of the 36,000,000 registered voters had cast ballots. The polls opened at 7 a.m.

LAST STANDINGS

Here is the statistical background, including party standings at the Sept. 25 dissolution of Parliament and after the last general election, with percentages of the popular vote:

Standings at dissolution:

Conservatives and associates 350: Labor 256: Liberals 7; others, including Speaker, 3; vacant 14. Total 630.

The speaker ran as a non-party candidate, opposed for the first time by Labor and Liberal candidates.

Standings after the 1959 election:

Conservatives and associates 365: Labor 258; Liberal 6; independent 1.

Out of a total turnout of 27,862,640 in 1959, the Tories had 13,750,845 votes compared with 12,216,190 for Labor and 1,640,760 for the Liberals. That meant 49.4 per cent of those voting supported the Tories, 43.8 per cent Labor and 5.9 Liberal.

FOUR TO LABOR

In the 51 byelections held since 1959 Labor made a net gain of four seats and the Liberals of one at the expense of the Tories. The Tories had one byelection victory and in addition one Labor member crossed the House and joined their ranks.

Eligible to vote were 35,894,307 Britons, some 400,000 more than in 1959 when the turnout was 78 per cent.

Douglas-Home, 61, the Scottish aristocrat who succeeded an ailing Prime Minister Harold Macmillan last October, announced the election date Sept. 15, leaving just one month for the official campaign.

But Wilson, 48, who succeeded the late Hugh Gaitskell as Labor party leader in February, 1963, had been campaigning long before than.

The Tories hit hard on the theme of full employment, prosperity and control over Britain's nuclear arm.

'ELEGANT AMATEUR'

Wilson scoffed that the former 14th Earl of Home was nothing but an elegant amateur in politics, incapable of understanding the problems of working folk and old-age pensioners living on the equivalent of $10 a week.

Millions of Britons are housed in squalor after 13 years of Tory rule, said Wilson, promising a land commission to spur housing and virtual nationalization of building land.

Wilson's pledge of a "new Britain" also included renationalization of steel. The Tories said Wilson's program would mean economic disaster.

Grimond contended that only the Liberals have "free hands" to tackle restrictive practices by monopolies on the one hand and by unions on the other. Pleading for election of sufficient Liberals to influence whatever government was elected, he said the Labor party is tied to the unions and the Tories to big business.

LIBERALS IN STRENGTH

The close of nominations Oct. 6 saw a near-record 1,755 candidates, including 365 Liberals, the party's biggest contingent since 1950.

Besides the full Labor and Tory lists, the campaign included 132 candidates in the maverick class. There were 36 Communists, 23 Welsh Nationalists, 15 Scottish Nationalists and 12 Irish Republicans. Then there were one-man parties including anti-vivisectionists and Christian Progressives.

Nine Homeless After Blaze

A Watervale family of nine is homeless after fire completely destroyed their frame home last weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Quinn and five children escaped an early evening fire Sunday, with only the clothing they were wearing. Two older children are in Charlottetown, and the five Quinn children at home range in age from five to 13.

The Quinn family is now staying at the home of Allan Hughes of Avondale.

A fund has been started to assist the Quinn family. Collection headquarters is the home of Mr. Hughes. Mrs. Hughes reported Thursday night that mostly clothing had been received so far.

The fire which destroyed the Quinn home, was believed to have started in the chimney. It was out of control by the time the Vernon River Fire Department arrived, it was reported.

One of the Quinn children was reported to have burned his hands in escaping the fire.

Plans Underway For Hi-Y Group

MONTAGUE — The four young people, Jock Beck, George Inman, Sandra Boehner, and Jeanne Ings, chosen to represent Montague at the Maritime Hi-Y Conference held in Saint John, N.B., over the week-end have returned home bubbling with enthusiasm over the Hi-Y movement.

They met with delegates and leaders from Charlottetown and Summerside on Friday and travelled with them to Saint John, where they were billeted with Y families.

During the day they attended lectures and discussion groups, and in the evening were entertained, on Friday with a get together dance, and on Saturday with a semi-formal.

As yet there is no local Montague branch of the Hi-Y, but it is hoped that under the sponsorship of the local Y's Men's group, and aided by this nucleus of trained young people a group may be formed in the near future.
