Delegates From Island Parishes Attend Anglican Auxiliary Meet

Mrs. H.L. Palmer, Diocesan president of the Anglican Women's Auxiliary gave a most interesting report on the Dominion annual meeting which she attended at Edmonton, at the semi-annual meeting held in Kensington on Wednesday, September 30. St. Mary's Church in Charlottetown was filled to capacity with W.A. members present from almost all the parishes on the island.

Mrs. Palmer pointed out that the older generation must change at the times as changes are being made among the younger women. A change she felt was one in the right direction, was the fact that she, as president of the P.E.I. Anglican W.A. had been invited to attend the C.W.L. Dominion annual meeting held in Charlottetown.

She stated that we are budgeting this year for more than we expect to get, but suggested that if each branch would add a dollar or two on the pledge the deficit would be covered. The extra money is designed to bring the wives of Indian students on a visit with their husbands who are in Canada completing their education, to give them too, an idea of Canadian culture.

Speaking on social service, Mrs. Palmer advised the members "Don't look so far away for Social Service. The need may be greater in your own parish or one near you."

Reports were given by the various officers. Mrs. A. H. Peake reported for the treasurer, Mrs. Reginald Kemp, Local treasurers were asked to have all money in by mid-December.

Mrs. H.S. MacPherson for the Youth Committee reported on camps, courses, etc. Mrs. Palmer asked for volunteers for girls secretary as Mrs. H.M. Simpson is resigning her office.

Mrs. Robert Currie, J.A. secretary congratulated Mrs. Everett Sudbury, handicraft instructor, on prizes awarded St. Stephen's group for their work. She also commended leaders Mary Rogers, Mrs. Keith Soderstrom, Mrs. M. J. MacPherson, Mrs. Everett Sudbury on the success of a concert staged by the Anglican Women's Auxiliary. She said the Junior Living Mass will be discontinued as the new magazine was put in to obtain an editor and the subscription list is decreasing.

Mrs. Norman MacPherson was introduced by Mrs. W.R. Aitken and reported on a Little Helper conference she attended for Mrs.

Aitken. Suggestions were given for Little Helpers' leaders.

Mrs. H. Hemming reported for Mrs. Laura Clapp on social service activities. She said women doing a needed job for young people at Inverness, also donations to a shoe fund for young boys to be held with Rev. and Mrs. DeWolfe. The Protestant Welfare is glad of gifts of sweaters from the small church. Hospitals are very acceptable at hospitals and nursing homes.

Mrs. Lynn Davidson reported on Dorcas work. The requisition list for the Indian school is very small, but warm clothing is still needed for warm children at the Red Cross and the children at Inverness.

Mrs. F.C. Younker reported for the Living Message magazine.

Louise Hazard, United Thankoffering secretary, stressed the point that the thankoffering should be for personal ones, and we should be thankful for small things as well as large.

Mrs. Stuart Dickson asked that the cent-weather offerings should be held at a good time.

Mrs. Eric Lovell reported as prayer partner secretary.

Mrs. Eric Shepherd, educational secretary, asked "after the Congress what?" and warned that the church has come to a time of crisis.

Mrs. J. Edward Pendergast and family, John and Elizabeth, have returned to Saskatoon after spending the summer in Charlottetown. Mrs. J. Edward Pendergast, who accompanied Mrs. Pendergast on her recent visit, will be home with her brothers, Jack Fraser in Regina and Mrs. Frank, Qu'Appelle, Sask.

The mayor of Sault Ste. Marie, James MacIntyre and Mrs. MacIntyre are visiting his parents, Mrs. and Mrs. Lloyd MacIntyre, Corran Bay.

The lucky ticket in the draw for a quilt made by Albion Lincoln is Mrs. MARY HAWORTH.

Tender Buffet Chicken - "Hubby Approved" Recipe

Some people love eating chicken right off the bone; others do not care for this approach. Today's recipe will delight the latter, though it is so good everyone will like it. This "hubby approved" recipe is good for serving one, two or as many as you wish.

MINUTE BUFFET CHICKEN (For every two servings allow) 1 med 1/2 to large chicken 1/2 teaspoon salt 1/2 teaspoon lemon juice 1/2 teaspoon salt 1/2 teaspoon pepper 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder 1/2 teaspoon onion powder 1/2 to 1 teaspoon flour 1/3 to 1/2 cup fine dry bread crumbs 1/2 cup butter for frying aren't making a new - round' round of it. I don't want to be classified as a jealous wife, but I don't think it is right. I've thought of confronting her, but I don't want to embarrass him with his superiors on the Christmas party routine as described. I have five children to rear. Or should I overlook it all and let him have his way?

Now the question is should I tell him I want him home by 1 a.m. like other fathers? Or should I protest his attending? Or should I overlook it all and let him have his way?

He is a good husband and father otherwise, says he loves me, and I know he loves the children. Please advise.

Dear Y: As a guide to what to think about your husband's self-excorciatory playboy routine in office relationship with the "sweet young thing" you are being teased and seduced from the proverb which tells us "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

In other words, what do you suppose your husband would think if he saw you do. If you were to stay out all night, until 6 or 6 a.m., on a party, "date" with some charming young bachelor who had a crush on you, while he (papa) stayed home because he wasn't invited to the special festivities?

If your husband were a typical man, he would probably pride himself that he is, he would be sensitive, outraged or sullied and offended by such "singletongued" behavior on your part, even though he personally trusts your character and intentions. He would feel (and rightly) that no matter how harmless you believed the outing to be, you were, in fact, playing the fool, frittering away dignity and self - respect, implicitly cheating (self, spouse, date and children) and generally fouling up the atmosphere introducing unhealthy currents of speculation into both domains.

And so, harking back to the proverb about sauce for the gander, the foregoing is pretty much what you are entitled to think about some husband's Christmas office - partying.

As to whether to protest his going, or ask him to get home by 1 a.m., or close your eyes to everything, surely as his wife you have a positive duty to hold a fire under his conscience, if and when it seems to be dimming out.

In the sacramental sense, that's what real marriage is all about namely: It is a profoundly responsible relationship, wherein each partner is

Christmas Party Routine Is A Shoddy Business

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What is your viewpoint on office staff parties at Christmas, or the same routine routine after the planned party a major hotel is over, he accompanies her to an out-of-the-way cafe for another "office party," which lasts until 5 or 6 a.m. and then he escorts her home, about 10 miles out of his main on the ribs if knife is sharp and screaming in pain in a sick, severe pain and bones to be brox - see "Note" below.

But even if you are invited to a party on a bread board or other hard surface. Pound on the sides, dip in again and once more in the crumbs. Sprinkle with paprika on both sides and set aside until covered with waxed paper to dry for 10 to 15 minutes. Melt sufficient butter in moderately heavy frying pan or electric skillet. Place chicken in pan in single layer and fry on both sides until chicken browns and is tender and longer than one inch in the middle. If chicken is not held before serving, arrange on cooling rack in crumpled paper toweling and place in a warm oven until ready to serve.

If preferred, drumsticks and thighs may be used in place of the breast. Allow 1/2 to 3/4 pound for 6 to 7 servings. Separate thigh and drumstick and remove skin and bones. Cut any white tendons which may be cut off, then prepare in the same manner as the breast chicken breast.

NOTE: Place chicken bones (breast thigh and drumstick) and skin in a kettle, half cover with cold water and season with pepper, a piece of bay leaf, slice or two of onion, a few celery leaves and a few pieces of carrot. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer, covered, about 1 1/2 hours. Strain, remove any bits of meat from the bones, add to the broth and many as you wish. Broth to be boiled down to concentrate it. Serve broth chilled as jellyed consommé with a slice of lemon or hot with sliced hard-cooked eggs and snipped chives or green onion stems.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Ellen Enjoys A Final Cook-Out With Friends

"October is so lovely a month" one observer of the other afternoon, is a proverbially, when all too briefly, we had joined a little company in their way to be a last outing together of the seven in all there were. Five were sisters, the remaining pair their kin. We would, we said when planning the excursion, go where fancy should lead us to town perhaps to catch a glimpse of the preparations being made for the picnic - like perhaps, and then to let Time decide the rest.

And now we were enjoying a lunch picnic - style, in beautiful surroundings, in what was to be our final cook-out of the season. Before long, the summer - guests in the party would be packing up, like ourselves, to go South. And even though we would say at parting: "Next summer you will come again - we'll be seeing you" back of every leave - taking there comes that underlying uncertainty, which declares that changes appear, that nothing is as it was - even the sky - there's no sky more serene than that of a sunny October day! It's then, you know, the year has its work pretty well over. It can at last settle down to rest.

And twilight falling with a little wind in the leaves and a chill in the air, returned then, brought the workers home after a busy day in the month.

What would we have wished for this evening? For continuing the work of the day in part. But there is so much for a woman to consider, all in all, that a wishing star hangs above a hill.

Until tomorrow - Diary Good - night.
