Valedictory Address

Following is the valedictory address delivered by Mr. D. F. Morrison at the commencement exercises at St. Dunstan's College on Thursday:—

The flight of time has once again brought us face to face with this most solemn day of each scholastic year. All through summer days and winter eves we met, we labored and we played within these old and classic walls. Each day the silken band of friendship stronger grew, and bound us closer in its sweet and gentle folds. Each day, as from the pure source of truth, flowed, swelled and stronger grew the crystal streams of friendship, sympathy and fraternal love. But stranger sounds ere long will burst upon this scene. Soon the voice of parting will be heard amid these halls. Ere to-morrow's sun shall have winged himself to rest, the parting words shall have been spoken, and the scholastic year of 1890-91 shall be numbered with the past.

Standing upon the portal of the departing year, let us cast a retrospective glance along the incidents that marked its course. Never, in our opinion, has such solid progress been made in the various departments of our curriculum, while our more arduous labors were seasonably interspersed with dramatic entertainments and manly outdoor enjoyments. All was bright and fair, everything gave highest promise of continued joys, when, unheralded by any warning, came the chilling news that, far removed from those whom he so dearly loved, our venerable Bishop had passed away. Who might now portray the grief that darkly gathered around each brow! Who might speak those tenderest feelings that awoke within each breast! All our joys ceased, and were not as grief like a gloomy spectre stalked around. Today we miss him from his accustomed place. We miss those silver locks and that approving smile. No more amid these halls may his familiar form be seen, nor shall we hear again on earth that voice, so low, so earnest, and so calm. And though the gloomy portals of the tomb have closed him from our eyes, yet never while memory lasts shall we forget his ardent love and deep solicitude for the professors and students of old St. Dunstan's College. Nor were the events consequent upon the unexpected demise of this illustrious Prelate such as might afford us consolation in that most trying hour, for by the high decrees of an all-wise Providence our esteemed Rector and present Bishop was called from amongst us to ascend the Episcopal Throne and exercise the awful duties of his high office. But while we grieve at his departure from amongst us, we bow our heads to the divine will of an all wise God, who raises up custodians of that Church which eighteen hundred years ago he confided to the care of an humble fisherman by the waters of ancient Galilee. Stepping beyond the guarded precincts of this institution to take our place in the ranks of those who fight the real battle of life, our hearts are sorely oppressed with many fears, for we recognize the number and greatness of the danger which will beset us on our way. Irreligion and impiety daily growing stronger, and encouraged and fostered in many modern universities, become fierce and aggressive and strive to overturn the noble edifice of Truth and break down the crystal battlements that guard the awful sanctuary of the Almighty's throne. Having never ascended to the sparkling fount that springs from the Rock of ages, but having drawn the poisonous draughts from the murky stream of unbelief, those advocates of advanced thought, with intellects darkened and the power for good nearly destroyed, fall helplessly into the most absurd errors, rejecting everything that their own reason cannot comprehend. They spurn the loftiest truths of christian doctrines, forgeting that powers of the human mind are finite and, therefore, unable to comprehend the works of a Supreme Being, infinite in all His attributes. Walking in an atmosphere poisoned with such dangerous doctrines, have we not reason to fear for the preservation of our spiritual life; yet it is ours to hope that the salutary instructions received at the hands of our directors, while in this institution, may sink deep into our hearts and produce fruit conducive to our final preservation.

Friends, professors, and students, we soon must part. When shall we meet again? We shall go forth from those cherished scenes to enter upon diverse paths, but all tending towards the same goal. Far out upon the sea of life strange winds will fan our cheeks and other stars will look down upon us from on high. Away will have passed all the happy scenes of earlier years and the dim shadows of early friendships shall have vanished from our minds. The voice of warning passions shall be ever in our ears, and the wrecks of humanity shall be ever before our eyes, yet amid the troubled strife shall shine out clear and bright, that pure celestial light that guides us safely to the haven of eternal rest. Who have bravely died, who ignobly lived, all will be known on that eventful day, when the angelic trumpet sounding through the silent regions of the tomb shall proclaim to an assembled world that nature is no more and that the final judgment is now at hand. Let us hope in conclusion, that then will take place our final reunion after which no parting word may e'er be spoken, but having spent our lives in the preparation for future hapiness we may attain the destined end of our creation.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS Mrs. Winsloe's Soothing Syrup has been used by millions of mothers for their children while cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best-known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs Winsloe's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The License Question.

SIR,—Your correspondent signing himself "No License," according to his own declaration, is unable to say that my plea for a stringent license law is a very strong one. However, so far as his correspondence is concerned, I may feel myself perfectly justified in claiming its strength; and I consider the public quite justified in adhering to my reasons until such time as they are proved to be wanting in solidity.

Before proceeding any further, I would, in all friendship, ask your correspondent to be assured that I am not engaged in the liquor traffic, either by buying, selling or drinking, nor has any liquor dealer the least sympathy from me, for they deserve no sympathy unless it be for their amelioration. If I advocate a license law, it is not out of any deference to the liquor dealers, but that some means may be attained by which the extent of the traffic can be reduced.

But it does not follow that, as he says, because I am not engaged in the traffic I should not trouble myself about it. I think it is a matter which should concern every upright citizen of Charlottetown; it is a matter concerning which, if we do not trouble ourselves and find a suitable remedy, we will ere long find to our sorrow that it will trouble us to a far greater extent than we might wish to bargain for—and perhaps under such circumstances as would render us powerless to combat the evil. If we do not trouble ourselves about it, then, may I ask, who will? Perhaps the liquor dealers themselves! I feel quite safe in saying that they would prefer matters to remain as they are. For, since they are determined to sell so long as they are permitted to do so, why should they desire to have any restriction placed on their unhallowed occupation? It is, therefore, evident that it is our duty to grapple with the question without delay, in order to effect some favorable change. Again, I cannot admit the propriety of allowing the present state of things to continue for a time, as your correspondent would desire, in order to more correctly contrast the results of the Scott Act with those of "free rum." For we have had the Act in Charlottetown for nine years, and surely no one will deny that period to have been sufficiently long for the testing of the Act. Now, in case we should permit the free rum system to continue for some time, will such a course show that the Act was a success in Charlottetown. Certainly it will not. For we know for a fact that under the Act the number of those engaged in the traffic was exceedingly great, and, consequently, whatever will be the outcome of the free rum system, the above fact will not cease to be true. What we want is something better than either "free rum" or the Act, and this, I contend, is a stringent license law.

Although I am not, and never was, engaged in the traffic, I may nevertheless be permitted to express my ideas with regard to stringency in a license law. Before doing so, however, I would have it understood that I am open to any suggestion that may be offered as a more effective remedy for the evil, provided that such be proved as more efficacious. Now, in the first place, it is my persuasion that no liquors, intoxicating or otherwise, should be sold without a license. In the second place, the sale of intoxicating liquors should be placed directly in the hands of the government, such that no person could make the sale of intoxicating liquors a private enterprise, but should be employed by the Government with a yearly salary. Then there should be certain hours for opening and closing. These dispositions would remove all abuse on the part of those employed in the business, for they, as mere employees, would have no interest in keeping their doors open beyond the specified time.

Again, in these taverns there should be no other enterprise carried on, such as boarding houses, private drinking rooms, etc., but merely the sale of liquor over the bar, and nothing else. This would prevent the detestable practice of carousing about a liquor den as is too often the case in the ordinary rum shop.

Then there should be a trustworthy inspector employed by the Government with a fair salary to see that such dispositions be carefully complied with.

These are the mere outlines of what I would call a stringent license law, as regards the sale of "intoxicating" liquors. But with regard to the sale of non-intoxicating liquors, or what are commonly known as "temperate drinks," although their sale might be made a private industry by those who wish to do so, nevertheless they should not be sold without a license from the Government. Such a license, of course, should not be paid for, and the only reason for its being required is to prevent that fraud which was so common under the Act. By this method the government would have full cognizance of every individual engaged in the sale of any beverage, whatever it might be, and consequently, should it happen that any one holding a free license for the sale of beverages, would attempt, on the strength of this, to sell intoxicating liquors, he could, and should be mulcted with a severe penalty, pecuniary or otherwise, and be rendered incapable of holding a license to sell even temperate drink.

These suggestions, brief though they be, if calmly considered, are sufficient to show that the liquor traffic can be brought within bounds. If any better method can be suggested, I will certainly not be the last to follow it. However, some thing must be done without delay, and I again express a hope that our Legislature, if they have the interest of our citizens at heart, will be provident enough to pass a liquor law that may be a benefit to the upright citizens of Charlottetown.
